Sunday School Lesson

Light That Enlightens

By ROY L. SMITH

Something less than a hundred miles southwest of the modern city of Izmir (formerly known as Smyrna) in Turkey, the visitor comes upon the extensive ruins of the ancient city of Ephesus. Even today, in spite of the desolation that is spread everywhere, one gets the impression that in its hey-day the city must have been magnificent.

The Uniform Sunday School lesson for December 23: "God Comes To Us" Isaiah 6; 8: 6-7; Luke 2:8-20; John 1:1-18; Hebrews 1:1-4.

There is still to be seen the broken walls of the ancient library, which contained one of the greatest collections of books to be found anywhere in the world. Just a little farther down the great marble paved main thoroughfare, one comes upon the Odeon where 1,800 years ago, the citizens of Ephesus sat and listened to the greatest orators, philosophers, and poets of the ancient world.

CHURCH WAS THERE

Next to the Athens, Ephesus was considered the greatest intellectual centre of the world, though Alexandria, in Egypt, would have protested such an ascription of honor. Next to Antioch, the city was the greatest commercial centre of the East Mediterranean. Although its quantity of art was somewhat limited, as measured by the lavish standards of Athens, the city was the home of some of the greatest artists of the world, and its central boulevard was a sight unmatched anywhere on earth.

And in Ephesus there was a Christian church whose pastor was one of the most profound thinkers the Christian faith has ever produced. To him we are indebted for the Gospel of John, and the three brief epistles that bear his name.

If we are to judge the quality of the congregation by the quality of the preacher, the Christians in Ephesus must have been among the most intellectual, thoughtful, and advanced of the Christians of the world. They have been credited with having published the first collection of the letters of St. Paul, and of having vast influence throughout the early Church.

PROLOG OF THE GOSPEL

It is commonly agreed between the Christian scholars of the world that John's was the last of the four Gospels to have been written, and its author states very plainly that it was his purpose to prove that "Jesus was the Christ, the Son of the living God."

In setting out to prove this gigantic claim, John broke a new trail. Mathew and Luke traced the life of Jesus back to his birth in Bethlehem, as the son of Mary, the peasant girl. And the doctrine of the virgin birth hulks largely in the doctrines and teachings of many modern churches.

But the author of John's Gospel was only incidentally interested in the question of his physical and human birth, for he saw in Jesus the one who had stood alongside of God from the beginning, and who had shared in the amazing work of creation.

This is to say that, in John's belief, the "life" of Jesus did not begin with cradle in Bethlehem. Instead, he had been with God at Creation, and would be with him until the curtain was rolled down on history and time was no more.

The intellectuals of Ephesus were enormously interested in the question of religion, and representatives of every faith in the world had stood in the Odeon at one time or another, and had expounded their philosophies and hopes.

John proposed an amazing doctrine to the Ephesians — one so presumptive that it is even today scarcely understood or appreciated. He declared that all of the best that all men wanted to find in God, they would find in Jesus.

He dared to say that Jesus was more than a prophet, speaking for God. He was God himself, speaking for himself.

Put into modern terms it means that we will never find anything in Jesus that we would not like to find in God, and we will never seek anything in God that we will not find in Jesus. He is that much divine!

6 Cows Plunge Through Ice At East Lake

PICTON —, Six cows which plunged through the ice into East Lake have recovered with no ill effects, according to Lyall Hicks, Cherry Valley farmer. The animals had been accustomed to going to the lake to drink through holes chopped in the ice. On Tuesday, they bypassed water along the shore and wandered onto the ice which was six inches thick. Their combined weight was too much and they plunged into six feet of water.

Fortunately, Mr. Hicks saw them break through. He drove his tractor to the scene, planning to pull them out with a rope, but the tractor went through the ice. Men of the neighborhood came to help and while the animals struggled to keep their heads above water, a chain saw was used to cut a 150-foot long channel to shore. The animals were then driven to shore and to the barn where they were blanketed and given attention by Dr. Karl Euler. They were in the water about a half hour.

Two New Clubs Of School Age Start at 'Y'

This fall saw the start of two clubs especially designed for boys and girls of grade school age, specifically grades five to eight, who are "Y" members, at the Belleville YMCA. Known as the Gra-Y Clubs, there is one for boys and another for the girls; the philosophy of the clubs is to develop a spirit of fellowship for others.

This spirit is developed by group participation in a program which is designed to help members to understand and respect themselves and others as individuals, to form good habits for health and physical fitness, to use their leisure time to develop worthwhile interests and skills, to develop a desire for learning, to develop wholesome friendships and good sound attitude towards life which will serve them well in adulthood.

The two local clubs have been organized now for two months. They have elected their officers and run their meetings in a democratic fashion under the supervision of a staff member. They have held Hallowe'en and CHRISTMAS PROJECT FOR NEW CLUB . . . Members of the Girls' Gra-Y Club, a new club for grade school girls, are shown above as they prepare Christmas table decorations for the Hastings County Home's annual Christmas dinner. Christmas parties. Plans are underway for trips to the county court house, several local industries and to have a number of speakers and films so that the members can acquire a better appreciation of the various activities in the community and in vocations and other ways of life.

A recent project was the manufacture of Christmas decorations for the place settings at the annual Christmas dinner at the Hastings County Home.

Now that the nucleus of the clubs is well established and underway with a variety of interesting objectives and activities planned, there is an opportunity for more girls and boys of grade school age to join. Information on this is available to interested prospective members or parents by contacting either Mr. Joe Ruddy or Miss Norma Hunter-Duval, at the "Y".

Medicine, Food Given For Prisoners

Castro Agrees To Exchange After 20 Months

Cuban Swap Will Begin On or Before Christmas

HAVANA (AP)—A Christmas gift of freedom today awaited 1,113 Cuban invasion prisoners after 20 months of captivity. The Castro government agreed Friday to release them in exchange for medicine and food.

The men will be freed "on or before Christmas," lawyer James B. Donovan of New York, chief negotiator for the prisoners' families, announced. Donovan broke the news himself to some prisoners held in Havana's Principe Castle, and word of their long-awaited freedom also was relayed to other captives held on the Isle of Pines off southwest Cuba.

In Washington, American Red Cross officials reported the first prisoners are expected to arrive in Miami Sunday. But Havana radio said they would not be freed until Monday. Red Cross officials said they are highly optimistic that the entire Prisoner group will be back among their friends and relatives by Christmas Day. Some 20,000 relatives of the captives live in Miami.

A mother of one of the prisoners said the news in Principe prison had a feast of homemade delicacies Friday. She said it was the first time in more than six months that parcels had been allowed to go through to the prisoners.

READY TO SAIL.

The freighter Africa Pilot was expected to sail for Havana from Fort Everglades, Fla., today with some of the supplies requested by Premier Fidel Castro as the price for the release of the prisoners. The medicines were donated by U.S. drug manufacturers.

The Cuban government originally demanded $62,000,000 as a ransom. The value of the food and medicine now agreed on is estimated at $53,000,000. The pact specifies the prisoners will be freed when 30 per cent of the supplies are in Cuban

NEW YORK (AP)—Exactly a month after the debacle at the Bay of Pigs, Fidel Castro, almost confidently, suggested a possibility of freedom for more than 1,200 Cubans seized while trying to invade their homeland.

In a boastful appearance before a peasants rally in Havana May 17, 1961, the Cuban prime minister proposed swapping the prisoners for machinery.

Now, after 20 months of dickering, Castro agreed Friday to free the prisoners for $53,000,000 worth of medicines and food.

James B. Donovan, the Wall Street lawyer who bargained with Castro, described the ransom as "solely a gift in the humanitarian spirit from the American people to the Cuban people for the purpose of helping children, the sick and the elderly during their present plight."

Entering the negotiations when hope appeared dead, Donovan, with a characteristic minimum of fanfare, sought to remove the stigma of blackmail attached to the first feverish efforts to free the prisoners.

The deal had its birth in Castro's televised rally address. But in the intervening months the terms were drastically changed.

Initially, Castro demanded 500 Bulldozers because "the leaders have to pay for the damage they have done." His later set his amount at $28,000,000 and insisted on calling it indemnification. His offer embraced 1,214 prisoners.

The ransom subsequently

BUDGET DEFICIT IS $18,200,000 IN NOVEMBER

Total for 8 Months Now $105,200,000

OTTAWA (CP)—The federal government had a budgetary deficit of $18,200,000 in November bringing the deficit for the first eight months of the calendar fiscal year to $105,200,000 compared with one of $304,600,000 in the corresponding period of last year.

In his regular statement of the government's financial operations for November, Finance Minister Nowlan reported revenues of $471,200,000 and expenditures of $489,400,000. The $18,200,000 deficit for November this year compared with a deficit of $95,600,000 in November, 1961.

In the House of Commons Oct. 22, Mr. Nowlan made a revised forecast of a $570,000,000 deficit at the end of the fiscal year ending March 31 on account of cutbacks in government spending and imposition of tariff surcharges as part of the emergency program undertaken in June to improve Canada's foreign exchange and balance of payments position.

Revenues for the first eight months of the fiscal year totalled $3,829,100,000 and expenditures $4,034,300,000. In the April-November period of 1961, revenues were $3,700,200,000 and expenditures $4,004,800,000.

November collections of personal income tax amounted to $142,200,000 this year compared with $146,800,000 in November, 1962. Corporation tax collections jumped to $83,400,000 from $94,600,000.

The national defence and defence production department spent $128,500,000 in November this year compared with $137,400,000 in November, 1961.

Bitter Debate On Polaris Switch Coming

LONDON (AP)—The agreement between Prime Minister Macmillan and President Kennedy to provide Britain with Polaris missiles in place of Skybolts brought a wave of criticism from right and left today.

It threatened to produce the biggest and most bitter defence row since the war.

Opposition Labor party was reported planning to mount a major attack on the government over the deal, and was announced at Nassau Friday on the grounds that it is too late, too costly and that the nuclear deterrent had better be left in the hands of one power, the United States.

A furious onslaught was also expected from some right-wing members of Macmillan's ruling Conservative party when he reports back to the House of Commons next month.

As they prepared to disperse for the Christmas recess there were signs of angry backbenching that Macmillan had bartered away Britain's nuclear independence and was coming back empty-handed.

SEES SURRENDER

The Daily Mail splashes its report of the Polaris deal across its front page under the bold headline:

"Macmillan's surrender."

A smaller heading says "Keep new wine in the bottles."

The Daily Express, independent but leaning to the right, describes Macmillan's deal with Kennedy as "the sell-out" in a banner across its front page. It calls it the end of Britain as an effective nuclear power.

The Daily Mirror says Macmillan returns well aware that he faces his biggest crisis since he became prime minister.

Developments of Nuclear Pact Lie With de Gaulle

NASSAU, The Bahamas (Reuters)—Prime Minister Macmillan today prepared to return to London where he faces criticism for what observers said was the most controversial decision of his long political career — accepting the Polaris missile instead of the Skybolt weapon.

Macmillan leaves the Bahamas after talks with Prime Minister Diefenbaker.

He settled the Skybolt issue with President Kennedy during three days of talks.

Kennedy agreed to give the nuclear missile to Britain, and to France as well, instead of the costly and controversial air-to-ground missile which British had hoped would prolong the life of its V-bomber nuclear strike force.

Kennedy also made the Polaris offer to French President de Gaulle on the same condition that the missiles would be assigned into a wide-reaching NATO nuclear deterrent.

Diplomatic observers felt that the final crisis of London reaction Macmillan faced trouble at home.

Much of the argument raging in London was being duplicated in Ottawa where Diefenbaker said goodbye to Macmillan and flew to Palm Beach, Fla., for the Christmas holiday.

British officials seemed completely surprised by charges Macmillan had thrown away Britain's independent nuclear deterrent and that by agreeing with Kennedy to invite France into the nuclear club he damaged Britain's special relationship with the United States.

British sources said the agreement was the first step towards a NATO multilateral strategic force and a first-class achievement that breathed new life into the old spirit of interdependence.

U.S. diplomats described it as a major step toward integration of Western defence strategy to meet the Russian threat.

There was general acknowledgement that if de Gaulle accepted Kennedy's offer a great change would result in the relationship between the Western allies.

But British sources were not admitting that the special relationship existing between the United States and Britain has been damaged.

Their contention was that by withdrawing Skybolt Britain ends its strategic forces from NATO structure in the event of a grave

Macmillan-Kennedy Pact Praised by Prime Minister

NASSAU, The Bahamas (CP-Reuters)—Prime Minister Diefenbaker today meets again with Prime Minister Macmillan, following Friday's luncheon talks with Macmillan, and President Kennedy on defence, in the Commonwealth countries and the European Common Market.

At a press conference Friday night, Diefenbaker praised the Macmillan - Kennedy Polaris agreement calling here Friday as showing "a high degree of statesmanship on the part of both leaders."

But Diefenbaker said the Polaris agreement has no significance for Canada, as I see it."

"It has particular reference to Britain and the United States and any other countries that can afford production of nuclear submarines."

Under the agreement reached here Friday by Macmillan and President Kennedy, Britain will receive the submarine - based Polaris missile instead of the air-to-ground Skybolt weapon as earlier planned.

Diefenbaker, said in response to a reporter's question there was no ill-feeling between himself and the president.

Asked if he was "that Kennedy doesn't like you," Diefenbaker replied:

"I've never known relations between individuals or countries to be other than the best since I became prime minister."

He said there had been much discussion "but never any determination" about a multilateral NATO nuclear force.

The Polaris agreement, he said, was a "combination of interdependence and independ-

Christmas Spending Spree In U.K. at Peak Since War

LONDON (CP)—The greatest Christmas spending spree in Britain since the war is at its peak despite government restraint, the tragedy of thousands of homeless families and an almost morbid campaign against drinking and office parties.

Department stores, wine and spirit merchants and travel agents reported that customers seemed to have more money than ever to spend. Sales were 20 to 25 per cent higher than last year.

But there were many with little or no money to squander—the 566,000 unemployed whose ranks were expected to swell before the end of the Second World War.

Price of Turkey was higher this year but sales increased. The sale of champagne has doubled since the fall of a year ago.

A spokesman for selfridges, the big Oxford Street department store said: "The place is absolutely packed. It is amazing that even looks remotely like a Christmas present is being snapped up."

The travel rush is on and British railways are running about 250 extra long-distance trains. Travel agents reported an increase of "about five per cent" in the number of people spending Christmas abroad and Brit-

Bulls, Calves Escape From Wrecked Truck

OTTAWA (CP)—A hot bull-flight raged in the east end of the capital in 10 - below - zero weather Friday.

A truck flipped on its side on frosty pavement with these results:

Five bulls and several calves escaped from the truck and scattered in all directions.

Driver Lloyd Hamilton of Ottawa tried frantically to corral his herd, but was struck by flying hoofs on the head by a high-kicking bull.

The truck skidded into a hydro pole, snapping several wires. Gasoline began leaking from the truck, with loose wires sparking dangerously close.

A police car arrived and was almost rammed by a bull. Mr. Hamilton was taken to hospital and treated for minor injuries. Firemen arrived and cleaned up the pool of gasoline.

Ottawa hydro linemen arrived and disconnected the loose wires. Abattoir employees arrived and rounded up four bulls and the calves. Residents of the area went back to bed.

The fifth bull is still missing

CASH AND CREWS MAY BE ASKED FROM CANADA

Have No Control Of Nuclear Arms

WASHINGTON (CP) — Canada may be asked to contribute cash and crews for the proposed North Atlantic strategic thermonuclear force, but U.S. diplomatic sources say that neither Canada nor any other small NATO power would have any command control over the firing of nuclear warheads.

The most crucial issue to be settled is the Polaris pact of Nassau" between Prime Minister Macmillan and President Kennedy. Who will have supreme control over the warheads carried by NATO bombers and, NATO Polaris submarines?

U.S. authorities insist that this will be "a NATO decision" and that command and control arrangements will be the state of evolution. But there is no indication that the U.S. will yield custody and control over its warheads and it is unlikely that Britain will yield custody over its warheads.

What therefore may develop, if France agrees to participate, would be in effect a directorate of control by the big powers who would afford to build the warheads and pay for the missiles. The smaller powers, such as Canada and West Germany would be asked mainly to provide cash and crews for maintenance and operations.

PLEDGE PROTECTION

In return, they would have the pledge of nuclear protection from the big powers and would have the right to offer opinions on where the thermonuclear weapons would be located and what Soviet regions should be targeted by the fireballs. This, in effect, is what Macmillan and Kennedy meant by "the closest consultation with other NATO allies."

Kennedy's agreement to sell Polaris missiles to Britain at cost, under conditions which will ultimately sound the death knell of Britain's nuclear independence, has been interpreted in some quarters as opening the way for a general proliferation of the 1,800-mile nuclear weapons in Europe.

This is not the case. The weapons and the submarines in which they would be housed are costly. If Canada, for example, should be willing to pay for them, there also is the question of nuclear warheads. Britain will build the subs for Canada and other smaller NATO countries cannot build them, though they would have to negotiate with those who have them —and submit to custody and

One Wounded In Gunfight At Montreal

Two Bandits Captured In Running Battle

MONTREAL (CP)—A holdup man wielding an army submachinegun held police at bay for almost three hours Friday before finally releasing a hostage and surrendering himself.

The action freed Eugene Gibeau, elderly chairman of the board of the Slater Shoe Company.

But an external auditor for the company was severely wounded earlier when hit by a stray bullet in an exchange of gunfire Friday between police and three bandits who invaded the firm in the northeast-end.

Roger Poupart, about 40, underwent surgery in Bellechasse General Hospital Friday night for removal of a slug lodged near his heart and his condition was later described as critical.

A veteran policeman coolly persuaded Gibeau's captor to surrender after two hours were captured after a frenzied, running gun battle.

Detectives said preliminary questioning of the gunman and trio had nothing to do with a $126,000 payroll robbery Dec. 7 in suburban St. Laurent, when two policemen were shot to death.

The leader of that gang was dressed in a Santa Claus suit.

AFTER PAYROLL

Friday the bandits were apparently after the shoe company's 300-employee normal Friday payroll. They were unaware it wasn't in the building. Because of a delay in accounting procedures, the firm postponed payday a week.

A notice to that effect was chalked up on a blackboard near the main entrance to the company brick building on Demorandsville Street.

Said Andre Giguere, 38, the firm's secretary-treasurer:

"Maybe if they had read the sign when they came in they would have left us alone."

Boupart, the wounded man, was reported in the building at the time for reasons far from other than business reasons.

"He was just here to get a pair of shoes as a Christmas gift," said one employee.

Gibeau, who speaks with the aid of an artificial larynx because he lost his vocal cords surgically three years ago, helped police talk the gunman into surrendering himself.

Georges Bernier whom he said "knew" the shoe company seven years ago. Bernier is in his early 20s.

A chunky building man of 74 with thick-rimmed glasses, Gibeau was entirely composed afterward. He said he was not "never afraid."

Two Stabbed To Death in Street Fights

TORONTO (CP)—Two youths were stabbed to death Friday night in separate fights and police are holding two other teenaged boys on non-capital murder charges.

Garry Graham, 19, died after being stabbed in the throat with a pocket knife at a high school dance in east-central Toronto.

James Keith, 18, was stabbed in the stomach outside a restaurant in the city's north end.

Patrick Hegarty, 17, has been charged with non-capital murder in the Graham death and Leslie Barber, 18, faces a similar charge in the Keith stabbing.

GIRL INVOLVED

Police said Graham attended the dance with a 15-year-old girl and the fight started after another youth she had been dating objected to her being with Graham.

They said there was a scuffle on the dance floor, then a group of boys went outside. After the stabbing, a gang fight ensued and Graham was taken to hospital with minor injuries.

Police arrested Garrity at the hospital.

Keith was reported to have gone to the restaurant with a girl he had been dating and had a quarrel with a boyfriend. An argument developed over the girl and the two boys went outside to fight.

Keith was stabbed with a six-inch fish-scaling knife and police said he was kicked after he fell with the stomach wound.

A crowd of about 25 people, including the 15-year-old girl who had been with Keith, watched the fight.

Keith's heart had stopped beating when he arrived at hospital. Doctors opened his chest and massaged the heart back to feeble action but it failed again a few hours later.

NEW JOB FOR SIREN

EAST GRINSTEAD, England (CP) — A recent visitor to this Surrey town was plastic surgeon Rex Pilley, who during the Second World War, was in charge of the Canadian wing of the Queen Victoria Hospital here. When he returned to Canada the council presented him with the town's air-raid siren that used to sound near his bedroom window. It now is used by the Rousseau, Que., fire brigade.

Traffic Leaving Cities Points To Record Christmas Travel

BY THE CANADIAN PRESS

Canadians by the tens of thousands are taking advantage of a general four-day Christmas holiday to be places, despite weather that in some parts of the country has made travel hazardous.

A spokesman for Trans-Canada Air Lines said bookings for the weekend are up 25 per cent from last year and an official of Canadian National Railways said rail traffic out of Toronto's Union Station was the heaviest since the late 1940s.

The automotive exodus from Toronto Friday night appeared to have assumed record-setting proportions. One police officer, a policeman: "Everything's moving but Santa's sleigh."

The heavy traffic encountered poor driving conditions in at least parts of the country. A blizzard swept through the Prairies and wet snow snarled traffic in a swath in Ontario where sleet and some freezing rain were also predicted.

While most of government employees and the majority of office and factory workers will have Monday off, virtually every storekeeper and his employees across the country face the prospect of business as usual Monday for the convenience of last-minute Christmas shoppers.

However, many stores will be closed Tuesday, Dec. 26.

This year Christmas falls in the middle of the annual Jewish celebration of Hanukkah, the Festival of Lights.

The Canadian Highway Safety Council has predicted a traffic death toll of 58 for the five-day period from 6 p.m. Friday night to midnight Wednesday. Last year 53 persons died in the four-day Christmas weekend.

Most parts of Canada should have a white Christmas, but some areas will likely slow through on the east and west coasts and parts of southern Ontario.

Skybolt Makes Successful Flight Day After It Gets Death Sentence

CAPE CANAVERAL (AP)—Streaking more than seven miles high, a B-52 bomber today launched the controversial Skybolt missile on its first successful test flight in air launchings.

Although the Skybolt program has been handed a death sentence this week in the Anglo-American Bahamas conference, the test flew the seven-foot mile missiles remaining and intends to fire them on the project is revived at a future date.

The missile today was launched from beneath the right wing of the B-52 seconds after it swept over Cape Canaveral and darted over the Atlantic.

The 39-foot, 5½ - ton rocket plummeted some 500 feet before the first stage fired as planned. The sleek projectile then left a smoke in its wake.

After a brief coasting period, the second stage flashed to life and the Skybolt climbed about 1,000 miles before crashing into a broad ocean area about 900 miles down range. No attempt was made to guide it to a precise target.

The air force reported success of the test and said "it was the first time a ballistic missile ever was launched successfully from an aircraft and flew its full mission under its own power and guidance."

The announcement said the rocket was fired at an altitude of 40,000 feet and landed in the preselected target area "hundreds of miles down range."

An official hailed the success as evidence that the highly complex missile can work despite the many sonic critics have said about its capability.

However, today's missile was far from the finished product and much work would be needed to make it a reliable weapons system.

Frankford Arena Destroyed By Fire Friday Afternoon

FRANKFORD — Fire yesterday razed the Frankford Arena while firemen from three departments fought near-zero cold and frozen water hoses. A light breeze fanned the flames.

The cause of the fire has not been definitely established yet, but firemen believe an oil burner, near the front of the building, exploded. The arena's one employee was inside the building at the time, preparing the ice surface.

The alarm was turned in to Frankford Fire Department at 3.30, according to Fire Chief Mervin Dafoe. He called out his own department's two trucks and more than twenty men, and put in a Mutual Aid call to Batawa and Belleville. Batawa responded with two trucks and about twenty men, Belleville sent one truck and three men.

The fire spread quickly through the building, while firemen struggled to set up their pumps and hoses to draw water from a branch of Cold Creek, more than one hundred yards away. One pump refused to start in the bitter cold, and several hoses froze as the pressure dropped, when the creek was pumped nearly dry.

The old section of the Arena was completely destroyed by about 5.30 p.m., but Frankford and Batawa fire departments remained at the scene until late in the evening to guard against a further spread of the fire.

The loss is not one that can be reckoned in dollars. Frankford Lions Club bought the 35-year-old building for use as a community arena in 1952, for $8,000, and has spent about $1,000 per year on repairs and alterations since then. A $10,000 concrete block addition to the front of the building began this summer and still under construction, was virtually undamaged, but kitchen facilities lost in the older building were valued at more than $1,000.

Jim Johns, of Frankford, Lions International Councillor, estimated that little more than half of the loss of property was covered by insurance. And the one hundred and forty Frankford and district children who had expected to play minor hockey in the arena this winter will get no compensation for their loss.

Scouting Activities

By ANNE M. McDONALD.

The Avondale Cub and Scout Mothers' Auxiliary met at the home of Katherine Thompson, Wednesday, December 12 for their Christmas meeting. The President, Hazel Pugh, opened the meeting with the Mothers' Promise. After a short business meeting, a lively auction was held with Laura Vogl as auctioneer. Children's books appeared to be the most popular item at the sale. During the social hour games were provided by Hazel Pugh, Joan Reed and Betty MacKinnon, followed by distribution of Christmas gifts by Nancy DeFaul. A delicious luncheon was served buffet style. The January meeting will be held at the home of the president, Hazel Pugh with Janette Cooke as hostess.

The 1st Belleville Cub Pack is a bunch of crisky ball-throwing kids who meet at St. Thomas Parish Hall every Wednesday at 7.00 p.m.

They are almost ready to commence in their opening ceremony, led by their "Akela" Mr. Churcher.

The inspection, where they view the knots and check cleanliness is taken care of by their "Baloo," Mr. Clark.

Since it is the Christmas season they sing carols.

Downstairs hot dogs and chocolate milk are waiting. The signal is given and 36 hungry boys dive at the food. Five minutes later the hot dogs with 36 bottles of chocolate milk have disappeared. Not mentioning 36 bags of hard candy.

Archdeacon McConnell congratulates the staff and the boys for their splendid work during 1962. He especially thanks the Women's Auxiliary for their wonderful service with 1st Belleville.

Mr. Churcher, the "Akela" thinks his staff and helpers are excellent. The Ladies' Auxiliary also does a wonderful job preparing parties, making neckerchiefs, etc.

Mr. Churcher also mentioned that the den will not hold the 36 boys and an addition to the parish hall will be readily welcomed.

Most of the boys are very happy with Cubbing and their leaders, though a few are just there because "mama" shoved them out the door.

They are a good group in the long run.

Turkeys Scarce On the Market, Prices Same

Three days before Christmas, turkeys were unbelievably scarce on the local farmer's market this morning, possibly due to the heavy snow which fell over the district.

Turkeys redsy for the oven were offered for 55c a pound for small and large were offered for 45c a pound.

Geese, drawn and ready for the oven were selling at 65c a pound and hens at 50c a pound.

Christmas trees were plentiful again this morning, and sold from $1 to $3 for Spruce and Pine.

Vegetables of all kinds were offered at prices prevailing over the past weeks.

emergency, Britain retained its independent nuclear status while contributing to Western defence and unity at the same time.

On the other hand, it was argued that proposed assignment of Polaris-carrying submarines to NATO and the invitation to de Gaulle to accept equality with Britain and the United States in an integrated command made it meaningless to talk about an independent British deterrent and for maintenance of the Anglo-American alliance on terms that existed in the past.

Diplomatic sources felt de Gaulle would accept the offer and might come to Washington in January or February to discuss it.

If the French leader refused to join in the plan it was said a bilateral Anglo-British agreement would exist with British and the United States still committed to assigning strategic units to the NATO nuclear force.

One Wounded

and he never pointed the weapon at me. In fact he told me: 'Don't be afrald. I won't hurt you'."

While holed up in Gilbeau's second-floor office — a large room with walls covered with racing but furnished simply with a desk — Bernier told police he wanted time to think and warned that he would start firing if any attempt was made to break through the locked door.

He also slipped out a note later saying he was sorry and himself if police tried any trickery.

Gilbeau was grabbed as a hostage after police converged on the building in response to a burglar alarm tripped by an employee in the midst of the holdup.

The gunshot exchange erupted with the bandits scurrying through the building. Pourart was hit then.

Giguere, the secretary-treasurer, was estimated at least 10 shots were fired.

Detectives said the bandits crowded around the victim made it obvious the job was concocted hastily.

The amount of they planned it in a tavern only a few hours before it came off," said one detective.

FINALLY SURRENDERS

Gilbeau's captor, his face impassive and grim, finally surrendered at 6.41 p.m. EST He was wearing a smart grey-blue machinaw jacket and white shirt with tie neatly in place. His wavy dark hair, combed neatly, showed no signs of ruffled.

Two constables flanked him and a detective walked in front as they came down the stairs.

"We got him," was the plain-clothes man succinctly.

The officer who coaxed the gunman into giving himself up was Claude Ferland, 29, a 10-year veteran of the force posted over at the police training school.

Ferland took off his service pistol and went into the gunman's office unharmed three times.

"I told him the whole thing was futile," said the constable. "The third time I reached out my hand for the sub-machine-gun and he released it without a word."

TALKS THROUGH DOOR

Between trips Ferland talked to the man through the thin panelling of the locked door.

"He thought he knew me. He didn't. But boy I lied through my teeth. I said anything."

At one point a request for coffee, a half-pint of milk and a sandwich came from the room.

One report said police had considered putting knockout drops in the coffee, then decided against it.

Later it was learned the coffee was for Gilbeau.

The holdupman burst into the building shortly before 4 p.m. and herded a group of employees in the main general office area on the second floor. "Kneel down on the floor and keep quiet."

CARRY MACHINE GUN

Two of the men carried pistols and the third the rapid-fire weapon, described later by police as a 9 mm. sub-machine gun holding 30 rounds, a new issue of the Canadian army.

An assistant-shipper tripped the holdup men as they came to stables in a patrol car at a filling station only a block away responded first.

They met one of the men coming down the stairs and he pumped off three shots at them. When they took cover, he sprinted across the street to an apartment building. Then, trapped, he surrendered.

More police arrived and the shooting started upstairs while the employees cowered under desks and behind filling cabinets.

One of the bandits took cover in the basement. He threw out his pistol and came up with hands in the air after police shouted that he would "not come out alive" if he didn't surrender.

Detectives did not disclose the identities of two of those arrested but gave their ages as 22 and 17.

Cuban Flight For Students Is Halted

TORONTO (CP) — A Christmas holiday in Cuba for a group of American college students has been halted.

Mrs. Julia Gonzales, Cuban consul in Toronto, said Friday night the Canadian Air Transport Board has refused a request by the Cuban government that the students are allowed to fly from Toronto.

The United States bans travel to the Caribbean island by American citizens.

A plane in Toronto awaiting the students, was reported to have been chartered by Cubana, the Cuban government airline. Toronto airport authorities said they had no knowledge of such a planned flight.

It was reported a group of about 75 students from the U.S. would leave Toronto Sunday and that some University of Toronto students would join the itinerary of flight.

In Ottawa, informed sources suggested that the basic motive behind the refusal was to deny the students the use of Canadian facilities for doing indirectly what they could not do from American soil—break U.S. law by undertaking forbidden travel.

There is no regular Cuba-to-Canada air passenger service. This Canada is not bound by any agreement to provide landing rights or other facilities for flying to and from Cuba. Air cargo traffic between the two countries has been banned. The special arrangements governing the use of terminal facilities.

Hoffa Trial Now Entering Third Month

NASSIVILLE, Tenn (AP) — The complex James R. Hoffa conspiracy trial entered its third month today with a federal court jury, refreshed by a night's sleep, resuming its deliberations.

Judge William E. Miller allowed the six women and six male jurors 3½ hours to discuss the case late Friday. When no word was forthcoming from the jury room at the supper hour, he called an overnight recess.

Hoffa, president of the 1,500,000-member Teamsters union, was charged in a 36-count indictment with conspiring to violate federal labor laws by accepting undercover payments from a Michigan transport firm. The government said the payments were a bribe for labor peace.

Each charge constitutes a misdemeanor punishable by a maximum prison sentence of one year and a fine of up to $10,000.

Throughout the trial, which began Oct. 22, Hoffa maintained he received no illegal payments and never doublecrossed teamsters drivers as the government charged.

CHARGES JURY

The case was handed the jury at 3:02 p.m., following an hour and a half charge by the judge on the law involved.

Miller told the jurors that to convict Hoffa they must "be convinced to a moral certainty" the labor leader entered into a conspiracy to violate the federal labor laws prohibit a union leader from receiving payments from a company whose employees he represents.

Real Caouette Was Canada's Man-in-the News

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Real Caouette was Canada's man-in-the-news in 1962.

Telegraph editors of daily newspapers, voting in a Canadian Press poll, picked the fluent and controversial deputy leader of the federal Social Credit party as the country's top news-maker for the year.

In second place was Prime Minister Diefenbaker. Others winning some support were Mayor Charlotte Whitton of Ottawa, Liberal Leader Pearson, T. C. Douglas, Agricultural Minister Hamilton, Quebec Premier Lesage and Gen. A. G. L. McNaughton.

President Kennedy of the United States was picked as the world's newest man, ousting Nikita Khrushchev, chosen in the three preceding years.

Bruce Kidd, the young track and field sensation, was the newest Canadian individual outside public affairs, in a fairly close finish with sprinter Harry Jerome and Roy Thomson, Canadian publisher who headed this section of the poll last year.

Donald Gordon, Dr. H.D. Dalgleish of the Saskatchewan College of Physicians and Surgeons, and Big Fanny Storgoff, leader of the Freedomite march in British Columbia, were others mentioned.

TIE UP, ROB TWO

MONTREAL (CP)—Two elderly people were sealed in closets overnight by four bandits with sprinter Harry Jerome and Roy Thomson, Canadian publisher who headed this section of the poll last year.

Donald Gordon, Dr. H.D. Dalgleish of the Saskatchewan College of Physicians and Surgeons, and Big Fanny Storgoff, leader of the Freedomite march in British Columbia, were others mentioned.

Important Life Aims Not Might and Power

By RABBI JOSEPH BERGLAS

"Not by might nor by power, but by My spirit, said the Lord of Hosts".

Zechariah iv, 6.

The verse above was uttered by the Prophet of the Exile about 2450 years ago. It represents the spiritual ideal on which the Festival of Hannukah is based. The Maccabean War has gone down in history as a war for Jewish independence which ended in the year 165 B. C. E. with a brilliant victory for the Jews. It was more far-reaching than that. It was really a death struggle between two different systems of thinking and living. Judaism against Hellenism. Judaism taught that only by God's spirit can life reach its highest happiness. Hellenism, on the other hand, taught that might and power are the important aims in life. Judaism preached "the beauty of holiness", and the victories of the spirit were considered the richest blessings that life could bring. Hellenism was more interested in "the holiness of beauty" as the goal of mankind. So long as the outer form showed harmony and grace, Hellenism was satisfied. But Judaism was more concerned with the inward form. It was more interested in the heart and soul, in character, and good conduct love and goodness.

During the reign of the tyrant King Antiochus the fight between these two differing systems came to a head. Therefore the war has to be fought to determine which of them would gain the victory. Thanks to the courage of the Maccabees and their brave warriors, Judaism triumphed. This victory not only also proved again the deathless saying: Israel's nationhood but truth that lies in the teaching. "Not by might or power, but by My Spirit," saith the Lord of Hosts.

It is important to note that we do not take particular pride in the military gains that enabled Judas to re-dedicate the Temple in Jerusalem. Judaism stands for universal peace, for justice, and for brotherly love.

Hannukah is celebrated for eight days from the 21st Kislev (December 21-29) Hannukah means literally "dedication" and is the appropriate name of the Festival which commemorates the re-dedication of the Temple.

The Festival of Lights, a name which describes the main feature of the Festival, commencing on the 24th Kislev (Dec. 21st) candles are kindled to proclaim the miracle of the Temple lights, when the cruse of oil containing only enough oil to last one day sufficed for eight days, thus keeping alight the Candelabrum of the Temple. The lights are kindled as follows: On the first night the light on the right of the lamp is kindled. On the second night an extra light is added at the left and so on for eight nights. It is customary to have an extra light which acts as "shammash" or attendant light, with which to kindle the others. On Friday evening the Hannukah lights are lit before the Sabbath candles, and on termination of the Sabbath.

We have kindled in the synagogue as well as in the home. Extra prayers are recited and songs sung. This is a holiday for all the family, but especially for the children.

We Jews have never prided ourselves on our military prowess. We have never fought wars of conquest. Others are not run their countries. Life for us is the preservation of the spirit. The glorious victories of the Hannukah tapers in symbolic of the spiritual victories in history that come when men's hearts are at peace and at ease.

This briefly is the message of the tapers. Each candle has its distinct meaning. The lighting of the Hannukah Menorah is not a mere physical act. It is a reminder to us to absorb these meanings and derive a great historical background and which is very dear to us. We therefore celebrate from century to century, this holiday of Hannukah.

Council Meet A Brief One

DESERONTO — The final meeting of the Deseronto town council for the year 1962 on Monday night was a very brief one. There was only one communication to be read. This was from the Quinte Emergency Measures Organization concerning the courses to be held during 1963. The letter was filed. There were no committee reports and no new business was introduced. On motion of Reeve Lott, the council granted a Christmas bonus to two members of the police department, the two street employees, the office staff and the caretaker of the town hall.

Mayor Sweetman reported on his interview with the Crown Attorney who advised him that the Crown was to enforce the law and not quote the law.

Council adjourned before nine o'clock.

Light Bulbs Stolen From Christmas Tree

That annual nut — the petty thief who steals decorations from outside Christmas trees — has finally blossomed into activity once again in Belleville.

The first incidents were reported from the Purdy Street area to city police this morning.

This time, however, the thefts have a touch of the bizarre to them. Not only the light fixtures and other decorations intact outside two homes. Instead of stealing everything outright, he methodically unscrewed all the bulbs from their sockets and strolled off.

"This guy must be out of his mind," said one resident angrily this morning.

In one instance about 40 bulbs were taken from their sockets.

Two Juveniles Are Sentenced

Two Belleville juveniles, convicted of a series of charges of incidents ranging from theft to wilful damage, have been sent to Bowmanville training school.

The pair were arrested Wednesday night after a police constable spotted a youth on the roof of a business block near the Footbridge.

Police subsequently laid nine charges against the teenagers, aged 13 and 14. Breakins at Duffy's service station, Robbin Dairy, Burkholder's Bakery and theft of a television set from a guest room at the Queen's Hotel were involved. They were sentenced, by Magistrate T. Y. Wills in juvenile court yesterday afternoon.

FREE COLONEL

KARLSRUHE, West Germany (Reuters) — Col. Adolf Wicht, one of two colonels arrested last month on suspicion of treason in connection with Gerd Sigel, news magazine affair, was released Friday. A Supreme Court spokesman said the arrest had been cancelled because there was no longer any grounds for his detention under investigatory arrest.

Loggers Don't Bother Anymore To Come Down

VANCOUVER (CP) — Not many years ago the start of the Christmas season was a dedication of war.

Loggers in their unruly hundreds poured into town from up-coast camps with a towering thirst and a pocket full of money to quench it.

As bushjack or riotous men approached the city, police nervously fingered their night sticks, merchants cast worried eyes at their stocks and bartenders got away everything that was breakable and stocked up with the largest supply of booze they could lay their hands on.

When the money and hangovers were over the men walked for the camps to re-open, then meekly went back.

The days are gone forever. Hotels say comparatively few of today's loggers bother to come to town.

A survey of some of the camps on Vancouver Island gives an indication why. Many are communities now, with a permanent base of married loggers and their families.

WITH SWIMMING POOL

At Mahatta River, single men eat in a bunkhouse-sized cookhouse with a Swiss head cook. Their bunk rooms contain tables, chairs, radios, reading lamps and the latest pinups. - A heated swimming pool is recreation.

At Port McNeill, there are modern houses on lots costing $1,000. A three-bedroom apartment in a two-storey building now under construction will rent for $80.

A supermarket sells everything from Christmas toys and television sets to perishable foods shipped in daily by boat. There are two banks, two churches and a three-storey hotel with a cocktail lounge.

There are 10 married loggers. They have two swimming pools, two tennis courts, a roller skating rink, a theatre and repeaters will bring television from Victoria later this month.

Salvation Army Will Bring Cheer To Prisoners

Thanks mainly to the Salvation Army, Christmas is coming as usual this year to the Hastings county jail.

Envoy Bram Humphreys noted that the "Army" as usual would be distributing "Sunshine Bags" to the jail prisoners on Christmas Day, while a program of films, including the comedy "Ma and Pa Kettle" would be available for showing.

The customary Sunday service at the jail tomorrow will feature the singing of Christmas carols.

$300 in Gifts Stolen From Car Outside Motel

Somewhere in Belleville a man is richer by $300 in Christmas gifts today, and a culetida homecoming for a Burlington couple is thereby spoiled.

The gifts were stolen from the couple's car parked outside the Queen's Motel where they stopped over enroute to Montreal.

"It was a particularly despicable theft," police inspector J. B. McLauchlan said this morning.

The gifts, packaged and labelled for the couple's relatives, were left covered by a blanket in the car's back seat.

CRAWLEY, England (CP) — Rev. Lee Rowlands, a 71-year-old Franciscan friar, has written the libretto for a ballet about the conversion of St. Francis of Assisi. The ballet will be staged by the Irish Theatre company.

More Information Needed

It is now painfully evident that the officials of the Salvation Army and the officials of the Federal Government do not agree as to the facts regarding conditions at Nelson House Reserve, 400 miles north of Winnipeg.

The Salvation Army has asked for the assistance of the RCAF to fly in emergency relief. The Federal Government has refused such assistance, but the Salvation Army intends to send aid to the Indians and Metis, or half-breeds, in the area.

Hon. Richard Bell, Minister of Citizenship, says reports of privation have been prompted for publicity purposes and that there is no urgent need for assistance.

The general public is likely to conclude that one or other of these groups, the Salvation Army or the Federal Government, has received erroneous information, or is for some reason falsifying the information which it has received.

It is possible, though, that both sides may be giving a factual picture of the situation, from their viewpoint.

The Salvation Army may have a higher standard by which to judge whether these Indians are receiving adequate care. The Federal Government may be judging the plight of these people more by what they have been accustomed to in the past. As long as the Indians are not actually starving to death, or dying of cold, the Indian Affairs Branch may consider that no real emergency exists.

If this is the answer to the apparently contradictory reports, the Canadian people have a question which they must answer. Are they content to let certain groups live at a mere subsistence level?

Perhaps what we need is an investigation of living conditions amongst Indians and Eskimos, by people who have not become accustomed to their hard lot, but who will judge their needs, at least in part, by the ability of the nation to provide them with a better life When the public has unimpeachable information as to precisely what conditions are, then it will be in a position to judge what, if anything, ought to be done. But whatever is done ought not to be a temporary effort but should be aimed at providing these people with the chance to care for themselves, to build for themselves a good life, not necessarily the type of life enjoyed in southern cities or villages but a life suited to the habits and abilities of the Indians, Eskimos and half-breeds.

Tshombe Shows His Nature

Moise Tshombe, the obstreperous president of Katanga, has announced that he will order a "scorched earth" policy rather than have Katanga forced back into the Congo Republic.

If there were any good reason to believe that such a policy would have much effect on the outcome of any armed action to end Katanga's secession, a case might be made out for Tshombe's policy.

The fact of the matter is, though, that even the relatively highly-developed Katanga has few facilities which would aid an invading force if not destroyed, aside from its central mining complex. Once the invaders reached that, they would for all intents and purposes have ended Katanga's secession, regardless of whether these installations were destroyed or left intact.

What Tshombe is saying, therefore, is that if he is not permitted to control Katanga's wealth, he will see that there is no wealth to control.

This reveals the stubborn nature of the man.

Those who would compare a "scorched earth" policy in Katanga with similar policies adopted by various countries when invaded by Hitler or the Japanese are losing sight of an important point. When Russia scorched the earth before the Nazis and China before the Japanese, Russians and Chinese were fighting back to continue the fight in other positions. When Tshombe has scorched what is worth scorching, there will be no place to fall back to. The fight will be over.

In some lands during the Second Great War war plants were destroyed even though there was no further hope of resistance in those countries. But resistance was continuing elsewhere. If Katanga is beaten, no other country will continue to fight Tshombe's battle.

Tshombe is not only stubborn—he is playing dog in the manger. If he cannot keep all the tax wealth of the country's mines, he is determined not to share it with the rest of the Congo.

A great many scientists believe that aging is a disease. If it is a disease, there has to be a cure.—Dr. Manley Boss, University of Miami researcher.

Letters to Santa Claus From Parliament Hill Folks

By RICHARD JACKSON
(From The Canadian Intelligencer's Ottawa Bureau)

Jolly old Saint Nicholas,
This is John George D
Just one thing I want this year
The magic touch for me.
You know that I can show the Tairy
The critics I'll confound;
I'm still the Man of Vision
When election time rolls
'round.

This is Mike, good Santa Claus,
Perhaps I shouldn't say
But didn't like your gift last year.
Comes soon another day,
At least, I hope there will for me.
But I will need more seats
To make it; after losing twice
There don't be any more defeats.

Howdy do, old Santa Claus,
This is Robert T.
Thanks a lot for last year's loot,
Especially Real C.
Without him, we would not be here.
But please reach in your sack
And see if you can find a crane
To get him off my back.

Tommy Douglas writing you
From Ottawa this year.
It took a lot to get me back.
I'm staying, never fear,
With Knowles and Fisher, Herridge, Winch
And all the sharp New Deral.
But show us how to fill our sacks
With many more bright gems.

'Way to go there Santa boy!
Hees Free to report;
Got my hands and got my wealth,
Running Trade's a sport.
All I want from you this year,
Besides Mel Jack, I mean,
Exports here and exports there,
So let's examine the scene.

Howard writing you, Saint Nick,
Of stress my job can bring.
External talks and UN balks,
NATO's here next Spring.
Disarmament's a dream, I guess,
Though it could cure all ills.
I'd like a pair of hiking boots,
I unwind in my hills.

Three of us are writing you,
Saying, Santa Claus,
We'd be back in power soon
If you would help our cause.
We're sick of Opposition,
We hope election's quick;
Plan to clobber all three gangs.
(Signed) Paul and Chet and Pick.

Need a lot of things from you,
Writes Harkness of Defence.
We're sick of Opposition,
Newer armaments.
But even if I get these things
I'm sure I'll still despair;
What the devil will we do
With all that underwear?

• • •

My name is Judy, Santa Claus,
Judy LaMarsh to say
I work hard in the Commons,
And outside, too, each day.
Just one gift I ask of you,
Others I'll resist.
Send me back to Paris, please,
Show me what I missed.

Santa dear, a little here,
Have you in you bag.
Cures for "foot-in-mouth" disease?

Pills or shots or gas?
People say it's what I've got,
But don't know why they bleat.
Just between us, Santa Claus,
I'm not even sheath!

• • •

Greetings, Santa, from Marcel.
I would like to say,
Giving judgments in the House
Is no soft touch each day.
Solomon's wisdom I could use,
But if you haven't that,
A bit more tact will all the same
Beneath my tricorn hat.

I've stood this Commons on its ear,
Writes Real Caouette.
Who can tell what I'll do next,
Vote with—or upset.
Money-talk's my stock in trade.
Need help just the same
To keep the people all fired up.
What will fan the flame?

• • •

Send an ear, good Santa Claus,
To George N. in Finance.
As Taxman, who could ever please!
On you I'll take a chance.
My problems are as nothing,
My life's a shining sea
Compared to troubles Leon has
With burly Donald G.

Davis Fulton sends this note,
Asking you to bring
A gimmick that would make me head
Of B.C. in the Spring.
Wonder if I've been a-book
Tt quit my job with John?
Well, anywhere, it's warm out there
Should all else be gone.

It's Churchill, Leader of the House,
Assuming that you know
It takes a lot of verbal oil
To supervise the show.
The Members scrap like cats and dogs,
You'd think they'd never cease.
But I wish them Merry
Christmas,
A New Year full of peace.

Pipe-Smoking Is Debunked

Toledo Blade

The cigarette addict who is pondering a switch to pipes is sometimes warned by devotees of the latter that pipe smoking is an art, the mastery of which requires prolonged study and practice of sundry techniques:

He must learn how to appraise the quality of brier, how to pack the pipe to balance, how to smoke his pipe to the bowl, how to rotate a dozen or so pipes, how to keep them clean.

Once the practitioner has mastered these rituals, he may hope to convey the popular image of the seasoned pipe smoker. Either as a calm, intellectual, quiet person, a philosophic type, or a member of the strong, silent, he-man, outdoorsy tribe, he will publish clouds, puff away, keeping his head, while all about him the breed of frantically inhaling cigarette smokers are losing theirs.

His pipes will smoke a fragrant aroma. Between puffs the results of his reflections will drop as pearls of wisdom from his lips. The girls will coo with pleasure in his company because tobaccosmoking is so manly.

We have nothing against pipe smoking except the notions which surrounds the art, or cult. Our observation is that its attendant joys are at least occasionally marred by the inhalation of gook through the pipestem. The bubbling gurgle of a pipe has been known to produce an unsettling effect upon surrounding company. A pipestem filled with nicotine stained saliva is unsightly.

Moreover, some pipe smokers are a perpetually discontented lot. Alternating between expensive, exotic tobaccos or settling in desperation on hay. Their reputation for staidness is belied by the holes they chew in the stems of pipes. Their pockets are filled instinctively with all the gear they carry about with them. They spend small fortunes on matches and burned in their clothes and some close to being walking firetraps. Many of them do not their presence causes the company to wrinkle its collective nose and inquire, "What's burning?"

One superiority is generally conceded to pipes. Chiefly tightly between the teeth, they go enable a fellow to keep his mouth shut on the many occasions when this is desirable. A pacifier might work as well.

Drive Under Inference

Gait Evening Reporter

Most people are familiar with the term "driving under the influence". But the Ontario Motor League suggests that too much of our driving is done "under the inference". So we get involved in those unexpected, unpleasantries called "accidents". So says Donald S. Buck, safety director, U.S. Army's Continental Army Command, while in Toronto recently lecturing on a course conducted by the Ontario Safety League.

Accidents are caused by people who drive under the inference. They are not necessarily bad, stupid or reckless people, but they drive on the inference that all is well. This is almost a prerequisite to getting involved in an accident.

So many of us pound along the highways on worn or underpressured tires, never, but unsafe (under the inference that the tire won't blow. When we are going slow, we infer that we won't have an accident — yet most accidents occur at slow speeds. We infer that instruments are reliable, that a truck-load made of rotten logs will not go out. And since inferences are usually correct, we repeatedly get away with them. At least until the inference proves wrong.

Accident files are crammed with sad lessons learned from faulty inferences — life's vehicles almost will not stop suddenly, that pedestrians won't step out into the street on an oncoming vehicle, that the other driver will honor a signal to turn left. We infer along until we're wrong.

Can we define safety as freedom from inference? Not asserts Don Buck. Some driving is safe in causing a accidents. Rather it is freedom from the things that cause accidents.

There's nothing really-wrong with making inferences while driving — the real danger lies in not recognizing them as inferences. Drivers need to prefface their inferences, "I wonder if? . . . Will he stop? . . . Is someone coming? . . . Is the road clear? . . .

Don't drive under the inference.

Surgery Can Help Children With Defective Hearts

By JOSEPH G. MOLNER, M.D.

Dear Dr. Molner: What chance has a premature infant, born at seven months with a loud heart murmur, to live a normal life?

The doctor says the baby's lungs are now clear but that the murmur may be from a hole in the heart. He will have to wait until later for examination.

The baby seems to be gaining quite well. — H.L.B.

Under the circumstances, the baby's chances of survival — and a normal life thereafter — are quite good.

The loudness of the heart murmur isn't too important in itself. The question is what causes it.

If the cause is a "hole in the heart," (a gap in the wall between two adjacent chambers) there has been a steadily rising percentage of successful repair of such a defect.

The fact that the baby is gaining is an excellent sign. After all, the poor little child had two disadvantages to begin with: The heart defect, whatever it is, to cut to be; and premature birth.

The first few days are the hardest for a premature baby; his chances increase with each passing week from then on. The gaining indicates that the heart still has reasonable power even though less than normal.

This in turn gives rise to the hope that he will continue to grow larger and stronger until heart surgery can be performed with reasonable chance of success.

There are thousands of children playing happily because such defects have been repaired and their hearts are now, for all practical purposes, normal. Without such a repair, a sharp by his wool or a dog by its paw. (Yeah, if you can get your hands on them.) But a pig is a cussed difficult thing to hold.

His ears are too small, his snout too strong; his feet too sharp and quick — and his tail must be somewhere in his. His whole body is a wriggly, convulsive thing.

A pig forever has the weakness. He is a hog for food, almost always hungry. It is easy to lure him by offering where one can get the hands on him. That weakness was taken advantage of by Hamelin, the runaway hog was cavorting through urban lawns. A housewife threw out scraps on which he fed happily while his owner and the dog catcher put a rope around him.

Better Off

St. Thomas Times - Journal

We'd all be better off if it were as hard to spend money as is it to earn it.

Dear Dr. Molner: I had a ganglion removed from the under part of my wrist several weeks ago. The incision is healed but I never seem to be free of pain of a cramping, arthritic nature, not only in the wrist but elsewhere — other wrist, ankles, upper legs, etc. Not all at once but first here, then there. What could cause this? I can't help but feel it has something to do with the operation. — I.B.

If the discomfort were confined to the wrist, I would suspect interference by scar tissue. But since remote joints are involved and the pain is of the "arthritic" type I would say the operation had nothing to do with it. You should be checked for arthritis or gout.

Pig Cussed Hard to Hold

Windsor Star

Of all farm animals a pig is about the hardest to catch — or, perhaps more accurately, the hardest to hold if you do catch him.

A cow or calf can be caught by the horns or neck; a horse by its nose, a sheep by its wool or a dog by its paw. (Yeah, if you can get your hands on them.) But a pig is a cussed difficult thing to hold.

His ears are too small, his snout too strong; his feet too sharp and quick — and his tail must be somewhere in his. His whole body is a wriggly, convulsive thing.

A pig forever has the weakness. He is a hog for food, almost always hungry. It is easy to lure him by offering where one can get the hands on him. That weakness was taken advantage of by Hamelin, the runaway hog was cavorting through urban lawns. A housewife threw out scraps on which he fed happily while his owner and the dog catcher put a rope around him.

THE PACKSACK

By GREGORY CLARK

Industry and commerce must take the blame for having stolen Christmas away from the children and handed it to the rest of the shopper is centred on variety and multiplicity. And planned selection perhaps.

Then continue your walk through the rest of the store devoted to the adult-Christmas. See the plendor of the decorations are accentuated by brightness of the displays, the presentations of heaps and pyramids of gifts of every imaginable appeal and high cost.

Do you suppose it is too late to give Christmas back to childhood?

Perhaps if we started by giving it back to the children it would be a step in the right direction.

hands.

The American Red Cross said it is expected to take a few months to get the full amount of the supplies that Castro wants.

A joint announcement in Washington by Gen. Lucius Clay, chairman of the Cuban Families Advisory Committee, and E. Roland Harriman, chairman of the American Red Cross, said the prisoners will be flown to Miami in a four-plane shuttle. The first Pan-American World Airways plane is scheduled to leave Miami for Havana at 9 a.m. EST Sunday.

LOAD WITH DRUGS

The shuttle planes will be loaded with drugs and food on their runs to Havana. Red Cross officials called the project the largest operation ever undertaken by the organization in the handling of relief supplies to meet human suffering. More than 100 U.S. manufacturers contributed or pledged food and drugs to the program.

Tons of supplies have been moved by air, rail and trucks to Florida ports for shipment to Cuba by sea and air.

The Havana radio said the exchange will be completed "within six months and the first shipment will probably reach Cuba tonight." The broadcast referred to the exchange as "partial compensation for the damage suffered by the Cuban people during the April 1961 imperialist invasion of Cuba."

The radio said the shipments to Cuba have been guaranteed by a letter of credit on the Royal Bank of Canada in favor of the Cuban National Bank, for the total "indemnification" amount. The Red Cross said in Washington arrangements to guarantee the shipment were made through American as well as Canadian banks.

CHECK SHIPMENTS

Three members of the Cuban Red Cross are going promptly to Miami to check on the shipments, the Havana broadcast said.

(Two doctors who fled Cuba have emphasized Castro's need for medicines. They said in Miami that child epidemics have caused deaths by the thousands and that even such things as aspirin are missing from drug store shelves.)

It was reported in Baltimore, Md., that the American Red Cross is making plans for a second ship to carry the supplies to Cuba.

control of the owners.

Essentially, the Nassau pact is a victory for Kennedy, with only the smallest concession to Macmillan. The airborne Skybolt missile on which Britain depended for extension of her nuclear independence is dead. At the heart of the problem is the enormous development cost. Neither Britain nor the U.S. are willing to gamble on ultimate success.

In accepting the Polaris, a secondary form of deterrence, Macmillan also agreed that targeting of the British Polaris submarines will be "in accordance with NATO plans." Only in extreme emergencies, when Britain's own life is at stake, will Britain be able to employ these weapons in an independent manner.

This latter exception is a victory for Macmillan. Previously, the U.S. had insisted that once weapons and men were committed to a NATO nuclear weapon, they could not be withdrawn under any circumstances by a member country.

But generally Kennedy has expressed opposition to independent nuclear powers in Europe. He believes the proliferation of nuclear weapons could lead in war. He believes also the U.S. has all the nuclear deterrence necessary to stop Russia from pulling the nuclear trigger. The proposed NATO nuclear force therefore would be either rigidly controlled by Washington or it will turn out to be mainly a token force undertaken mainly to keep Europe happy but unable to upset the balance of power between Washington and Moscow.

Dear Henry—I think football equipment should cost less. I want some shoulder pads for Christmas. My mother will not let Santa buy shoulder pads because she says they cost too much and are too flimsy. What do you think I should do? — Doug.

Dear Doug—Eat lots of food and make your own.—HENRY.

Dear Henry—I want to know why we have to have homework on Saturday and Sunday. I thought that Sunday is a day when we are not supposed to work. What would you say about my problems?—Jack N.

Dear Jack—That's why they invented Saturdays to do homework! And Friday evenings too.—HENRY.

Dear Henry—From reliable sources I've heard that a daughter of mine (the only one) is expecting a talking pants-wetting and walking doll. Should I buy it for her? — $$$$$$-?

Dear $$$$$$-?—I've said it and I will say it again: buy her a rag doll. She will take it and love it no matter if it talks, squeals or cries, walks, crawls or even flies.—HENRY.

Dear Henry—I know two girls named D. and M. and don't like one of them but I can't tell her. They both go skating on Sunday and I cannot skate with the one I like for fear that the other one will find out that the other one will find out that I don't like her. Please help me fast. Thank you. Mr. Popular-Kiss.

Dear Popular-Kiss: Go ahead and skate with the girl you like. The girl you are not terribly fond of can draw her own conclusions. It is better that she knows you don't like her than to be led on.—HENRY.

Dear Henry—Tell me what children want most for Christmas.—Santa Claus.

Dear Santa — I'll tell you what most kids want for Christmas. They want to be praised an extra lot for the things they do right and to be encouraged an extra lot to do better next time with the things they do wrong.

They want to be loved and understood. They want to be treated like an adult and still go to bed at 8 p.m. They don't want to be told to come home right after school but have it quietly explained why they should be home right after school.

These are the things children should get for Christmas before they get any toys and you and every other Santa could give them. — HENRY.

ence, a preservation of sovereignty by the United Kingdom," and one that could be entered into by Britain and the U.S. "without affecting others."

MUST CONSULT

"Nothing that has been decided has particular reference to Canada," Diefenbaker said. "There can never be direct implications of that kind unless there are consultations."

Later he said there may be direct possibilities rather than direct implications for Canada.

Asked whether this included Canada's air squadrons on NATO duty, he said: "That's a matter of interpretation I'll have to leave to you to determine."

The plan appeared to contain important considerations for Canada, part of whose commitment to NATO is eight squadrons of CF-104 reconnaissance bombers designed specifically for carrying tactical nuclear bombs.

Diefenbaker said the United States and the Commonwealth were considering a plan to provide India with military equipment worth at least $100,000,000 and possibly as much as $130,000,000, the costs to be shared equally by the U.S. and the Commonwealth.

Diefenbaker plans to spend the Christmas holidays in Nassau and return to Ottawa after the New Year.

"THE FESTIVE TOUCH"

"Christmas is a precious time to celebrate the renewed kinship between families . . . and rejoice in the spirit of universal love."—from Better Homes and Gardens Magazine (December, 1962.)

You have heard perhaps, and did we recently of the million-aire whose hobby it was to collect numerous things, among them ornaments for Christmas trees, which he constantly added to a tall tree kept in one of his mansion's rooms. The collection was said to be fantastic.

But for most of us, Christmas ornaments for our tree and home is a very personal treasure; a family affair. A tradition. Each year the ornaments are brought out and put on another year's Christmas tree, with perhaps a new one added. These hold a dearness. There is a sentiment about them, which money cannot buy; only love. Love woven by the family.

It's an exciting time, trimming the tree and decorating the house. It calls for family decisions, for without them, the tree doesn't look right. Should this branch have the red or green ornament? Is this star too large for the top? Is there too much tinsel?

Perhaps to outsiders it all seems a trifle odd. But to us who know, it is a family matter of significance. There is a feeling that Christmas is a time of giving energy and self; not going over and buying everything. Many homes become a beehive of Christmas making. Members of the family vie with one another in making home connected gifts and ornaments and plans for decor of each room. Christmas is a time for happy family activity.

Aside from this, there is the delightful fact that this spirit is not confined to just the family, alone. It includes ever widening circles; from friends, to public relationships in business and just as the desire to create something charming for another reflects a fine friendship, so may this be magnified to include the impersonal ties.

Consider the joy it is to walk through piazzas and shopping streets so gayly lighted. What fairlands do the very stores themselves become! Quite by chance, in mid-November, we observed Simpson's Toronto Department Store in the process of being "decorated for Christmas". Was there much time and thought devoted to such lavish decor or was it something thought up on a moment's notice?

Mr. S. G. Glaze, a Simpson's department manager, not only pointed out, personally, the detailed color scheme and design involved in each beautiful street window relating to this year's theme "Once Upon A Time . . ." but kindly made it possible to speak with the very busy Interior Display Manager, Mr. James Schreifels, who said: "It takes a full year to plan each year's decoration. In fact, the next year's plans have already been checked and approved upon and away to various factories to be made up and completed in time for next Christmas of 1963.

"Ideas? Where do they come from? Just anywhere and at any time. This year's idea of covering the trees with colored satin balls (solid greens, reds, blues) intermingled with three sizes of miniature various colored lights, is the result from a trip to Boston by Mr. The plane happened to fly at dusk over Boston's ten-acre Common (a city square) and all the trees shone with blue lights. The effect from our height was breath-takingly beautiful.

To bring this idea into being here demands 62,000 green, blue and yellow lights. We had seen the satin balls somewhere used on a stage decor. These were made in Japan, ordered a year ago, and arrived just a few days back. The red glass, you will notice behind each tree, is composed of tiny panels which are fitted together. There are literally dozens of this glass.

"When all decorations are ready a day is decided upon, and after store hours, nearly forty workmen (engineers, electricians contractors and display artists arrive to work at six o'clock. By 11.30 most of the display is in place and completed. This is in utmost fascinating work imaginable. When and after one's mind begins to think in terms of display ideas, then have them successfully executed, gives one about the same kind of thrill which producers must have over a successful musical such as My Fair Lady, I imagine".

Mr. Schreifels, comes from Vancouver. When did he first become interested in display work? "When I was around fifteen, I worked in a drug store. Part of my job was to look after the windows and their display. I found I enjoyed it".

A very Merry Christmas — Everyone!

THE FAMILY COUNCIL

Fredа R. — There's a way I can keep my baby.

Mrs. I.R. — Shs must give it up and live right.

Fredа R. — I'm 16 and pregnant. The boy is 22, a medical student. Never mind the details. We went too far last summer.

My parents have it all worked out for me to go to a home, have the baby at an out-of-town institution and offer it for adoption. Then I'm too young to get married, and anyway I'd never be able to marry this particular boy. He's engaged to someone else already.

But one of my old boy friends wants to marry me. He's 18 and knows the whole story. He says he'll pretend it's his baby and no one need be the wiser. He's a sweet fellow. I can be happy with him and the baby. But my parents won't hear of it.

Mrs. I.R. — As if things aren't bad enough, here this Sir Galahad turns up on the scene. Sure, at 18 he'd have to be the savior. But how? He's a school kid who has never earned a dime. From what I see all he can do is The Twist. Financially he's worse than a zero. He'd be a added expense for us, along with Freda and the baby.

No. I have a cousin in Canada. She's childless. I'll write to her there until this is all over. We can say she's away at school. Then it is quite simple to try to move to a new neighborhood. Once in Ottawa we'll be able to start life anew.

After marriage to this boy would make things much worse.

The Council: Although a reader will surely cry an Exception, we agree with Mrs. R. that an 18-year-old "legitimatizer" may introduce more problems than he solves.

His having no job at the moment is the least consideration. He can start earning tomorrow — delivering Christmas trees, for instance. Determined to be Freda's savior, he'll find ways to make money. But when the heroic daze wears off, then what? At 18 he dashes up dramatically to any hero. At 25, how will he be treating that child? And how often will he use The Big Favor he did as a club to get this way?

Freda has erred once. Her mistake is costly in agony and heartbreak. But, thanks to humane agencies, it is still remediable. The course she suggests would complicate the lives of many besides herself, through a meaningless shotgun wedding. Righ now everyone's thinking is a bit hysterical. The Council endorses Mrs. R.'s solution, however. It bids fair to give the baby a square deal.

Through the back door, so to speak, Freda has a chance to set her whole life to rights. We hope that she can come under the wing of an organization like the Youth Consultation Service of the Episcopal Diocese of N.Y. (Besides overseeing the confinement and adoption procedures, this agency explores the sick relationship between the pregnant teenager and her parents. Most of these girls are neglected, or at least feel neglected and unloved at home.

Shelters may be found through the Salvation Army Social Welfare Dept., and the Family works closely with private and religious family aid facilities.

Simple as Freda's plan sounds now, she'd live to regret it many times. And the child would have to live under a cloud, always threatened with a cloudburst. Better to give "it" herself and her family a fighting chance by seeking organized "help for unwed mothers."

MESSENGERS

RAWDON — Last Friday evening three adults and 25 children gathered in Mount Pleasant-Rawdon Church hall for the Christmas meeting of the Messengers group, with 25 in attendance.

Linda Potts and Judy McAdam sang a duet "Away in a Manger". Joan Jeffs and Jeanette Hoard gathered the offering which was dedicated with a prayer by Mrs. James Hoard synopsized the last chapter of the junior study book "Timmy's Team". The service closed with "Silent Night" and the prayer was read by Donna Knight.

The three leaders Mrs. Joslin, Mrs. Hoard and Mrs. Clarence Scott assisted the children and small gifts were made for their mothers.

Readers' Saturday Column

ATTENTION:

Break out the banners — we have a new (to us) hamburg recipe. It comes from Eleanor's niece Dorothy in Montreal and is our continuing answer to Bunny C. who is a hamburg recipe-collector.

ANSWER (cont'd.) to Bunny C.:

Try, then add this (to your hamburg fille, Bunny.

DOROTHY'S HAMBURG PIE:

Pastry for 2-crust 9" pie, 1 lb. hamburger, 2 teaspoons salt, ½ teaspoon pepper, 1 tablespoon Worcestershire sauce, 3 tablespoons catsup, 1 teaspoon prepared mustard, ¾ teaspoon poultry seasoning, 2 medium potatoes, sliced very thin, 2 medium onions, coarsely chopped, 1 can brown gravy with mushrooms, ¼ cup margarine or butter.

Mix hamburger with seasonings, and pile into pie plate lined with raw pastry. Do not pat it down, but leave it in large chunks. Gently fry potatoes and onions in margarine until potatoes are just soft and onions lightly browned. Add can of gravy. Mix. Pour this mixture over the hamburger, then top with gashed pastry and seal. Bake 1¼ hours at 375 deg. F.

I did not taste this pie Bunny, but Eleanor and her son Rudy did when they were in visit. Eleanor said it was delicious. Dorothy served with it a casserole of baked spinach with a sauce that was simply a can of undiluted cream of vegetable soup.

LETTERS:

I have been following your cheap meat columns eagerly as I have four children with large stomachs. I have a recipe that will help some readers (maybe). I saw some chicken giblards for sale in a large store here and decided that since there was always a fight over who was going to get the gizzard that I would buy enough so that everyone could have one. From this evolved the following ideas. I buy these at 25c per pound.

SWEET AND SOUR GIZZARDS (courtesy Sandra K.):

I start out with $1.00's worth for my family and cook them in the pressure cooker in a little water with some salt and pepper and celery and onion. I make the following sauce and add the gizzards and leave the whole thing simmering off and on for the whole day: One-half cup water, ½ cup vinegar, ¾ cup pineapple juice, 1 tablespoon soya sauce, ¼ cup brown sugar, ½ teaspoon salt, ½ cup onion and ½ to 1 cup pineapple chunks or tidbits. Stir in smooth paste of 2 tablespoons each cornstarch and water 10 minutes before serving. — Sandra K.

ANSWER:

This is perfect for my purposes Sandra, and I am grateful to you for entering into the spirit of this economized cooking campaign I am waging.

Women's Institute

BAY OF QUINTE W.I.

2ND OF SIDNEY—The members of the Bay of Quinte Institute enjoyed a happy evening at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Frank White on the evening of December 12th with a number of visitors present and Mrs. Alva Dunn presided.

It was arranged to send a gift to different people who are sick and some older members, who do not get out as much as they used to and one of the boys of the neighborhood who was hurt in a car accident and is now in Trenton Memorial hospital: Ralph Maslin, Mrs. Gregory, Mr. Albert Jones, Mrs. Walter Jones and Mrs. Sandercock.

It was decided that the Institute collaborate with the Farmers' Forum on February 4th. The committee, Mrs. Palmer, Mrs. Dunn and Mrs. Clayton Curtis gave their reports of contacting other organizations such as, the Business Women's League and the Legion, Bayside Home and School Club.

Mrs. Dunn gave a talk on how the carol, "O Little Town of Bethlehem" came to be written. Two contests were given and won by Mrs. Morris Stickle, and Mrs. Clarence MacDonald. Games were then played.

Mrs. Jeffery and Mrs. Palmer were in charge of the exchange of gifts.

The "Pennies for Friendship" were collected by Mrs. Frank White.

Mr., Mrs. Chas. Morland Moira, Wed 50 Years

Fifty years ago on December 11th, 1912 Mr. and Mrs. Charles Morland of Moira-Fuller district were married at the Anglican parsonage in Madoc, by the Rev. J. Young, and in commemoration of this event, the family and grandchildren, and Fuller and Moira friends, numbering 100, gathered at their home in Moira.

They remember that the December day was mild and bright making the horse and buggy drive to Madoc enjoyable. After their marriage they took the train in Madoc for Newcastle where they spent their honeymoon.

On their return they resided at Fuller for one year, then took up residence on the farm on the 4th concession of Huntington where they have resided ever since.

Mr. and Mrs. Morland were presented by their daughters: Evelyn, Mrs. Terrence Bird, now deceased; Mrs. Walter Thompson (Muriel); Mrs. Wallace McTaggart (Vera) and Mrs. Floyd Howard (Shirley) and have several grandchildren and great grandchildren.

For the anniversary, the tea table was decorated with a three-tier anniversary cake iced in white and gold and topped with miniature bride and bridegroom.

Mr. Cecil Geen acted as master of ceremonies for the evening when a sing-song was enjoyed with the quartet from Trinity United choral songs. Readings were also given.

Mrs. Violet Calvert read the Morland address, after which Charlie and Dora were presented with a service for eight set of dishes in rosebud pattern as well as a television from their family and grandchildren. Other friends presented Dora with a mum from Aletha Douglas and family; a basket of cut flowers from the Pennsburg Rebekah Lodge; plant from Mrs. Eldridge and Mrs. Adams; a large basket of gold and wine chrysanthemums from Mr. Clarke Wootten, Mr. and many cards were received wishing them many happy years ahead.

Mr. and Mrs. Morland wish to thank each and everyone for their lovely gifts and all who took part in making this happy occasion one long to be remembered.

The ladies served dainty refreshments including the anniversary cake.

Melrose U.C.W Retain Most Of Executive

The members of Melrose United Church Women were entertained by Mrs. Vincent Pascoe for the December meeting. The home was beautifully decorated for Christmas which tended to create both a sacred and festive setting for the Christmas program which was conducted by the president, Mrs. Grant McLean.

"Christmas" was the theme of the call to worship led by Mrs. McLaren and assisted by Mrs. R. McFarlane, Mrs. Hagenman and Mrs. Embury. "What do we mean when we say, Am I ready for Christmas?" "We should ask ourselves, is my observance of the birth of Christ meaningful for me, and is it pleasing to God?"

Mrs. Newton Demille conducted the Christmas program. Christmas carols were read between readings by Mrs. Kenneth Mitchell, "The Solitude of a Christmas Tree," "Christmas in Other Lands" by Mrs. Ross Howard and "A Christmas Time," by Mrs. M. Lanier.

Mrs. Donald Thompson favored with a solo, "The First Noel." Mrs. Demille read a thought provoking paper, "What Does Christmas Mean to You?" At this season we should think always of the gift of a Saviour that was born in a manger for He was no room in the Inn."

Mrs. Demille closed with the poem, "When I Come To The End Of The Day."

After the report of the treasurer it was decided that a substantial cheque be sent towards a banquet and the turkey supper, would be presented in the near future committee be applied to the building fund.

SAME EXECUTIVE

The executive of the past year will continue in office for another year with the exception of Mrs. Jack Embury who will act as treasurer and Mrs. Thomas Howard and Mrs. Wilmot Embury will replace Mrs. Demille and Mrs. Roy McLaren on the social committee.

Mrs. McLaren closed the meeting with prayer after which a dainty lunch was served by the hostess and her assistant.

Due to the fact that a new church was being built, the members of the Melrose United Church Women have worked diligently and much credit is due to the executive and committee who planned and succeeded with so many social events during the past year.

2ND THURLOW—The Christmas meeting of the Neighbors' Aid was recently held in the hall. The president, Mrs. B. Pratt, presided the meeting with Mrs. Robert Allen at the piano in absence of Mrs. M. Mitchell.

The president thanked the hostess, R. J. Chumbley, and Mrs. R. Greatrix for getting and decorating the Christmas tree, and called on Mr. Phillips of the Hydro, who explained where are going to be put up and trees cut for new poles and service to cross the C.N.R. tracks. It was decided to have Mr. Phillips look after cutting trees and placing the anchors.

Thank-you notes from sick were read and a letter from Mrs. Ida Chumbley, who were recently married, thanking them for the lovely gifts and the nice time of the shower and presentation, which they sincerely appreciated.

Boxes are to be sent, as usual, for shut-ins at Christmas: Mrs. C. Denyes, Mrs. A. to be hostess for January and madam-ing, R. Greatrix, Belmap, M. Mitchell and Lloyd will look after lunch. Mrs. B. Pratt, Mrs. J. Chumbley are to convene a euchre on January 11 at the Hall.

Mrs. R. Greatrix, Mrs. M. Deal arranged the following program: community singing of Christmas carols with Mrs. M. Mitchell at piano.

Mrs. Barber arrived and delighted all with her beautiful floral arrangements of sprays, wreaths, plan foam centres, and many different ideas on how to decorate for Christmas which was interesting and lovely, indeed.

A vote of thanks was tendered to Mrs. Barber for the instructive demonstration.

On conclusion, she was presented with a gift in appreciation for taking her time at this busy season. All were invited to have a closer view of the lovely arrangements.

After the meeting closed, lunch was served by Madames, H. Grills, Lazarwick, Chumbley and H. Thompson.

IT'S WISE to choose toys for your baby with more of an eye to safety than to cuteness or beauty. Soft toys shouldn't have eyes that can be pulled out. And a good rule to follow for size—whatever your baby plays with must be larger than his fist. He can swallow anything smaller.

FAIR EXCHANGE — NO BARGAINS

How often do we unnecessarily take advantage of most stores' policy of guaranteed satisfaction, or money refunded? There are times when goods are unsatisfactory, usually because of the size problem. Many of the thousands of exchanges, which will be put through right after Christmas, will fall into this category. The large retailer expects this annual give-and-take, preparing for the onslaught by adding extra exchange desks and personnel to deal with the turmoil.

But how often is the average exchange or refund really justified? Our educated guess places the figure about 25 per cent. The remaining 75 per cent is the result of hasty shopping and poor judgment on the part of the shopper, particularly in fashions. A hint of fitting room euphoria seems to set in with some women, and everything they try on in a store look attractive. Some exchangers admit this occurs in the store, persuading the salesperson to send their fashion selections home, so that they may consider them quietly! This is fine for the serious shopper, who really thinks she will keep her choice. But the chronic exchanger will try it on, show it to her friends, wear it, then if she is a home sewer. Sometimes she wears it for a while until eventually return it. Some millinery customers make a habit of this kind of cheating. Shops have tried to outsmart them, by placing their price tags on the outside of the hat, in such a manner that it is impossible to hide them.

Large stores, valuing their prestige, built up over the years do not dare to risk the loss of this reputation, by refusing to accept refunds or exchanges. Most stores can and do, make it difficult and boring for a customer to return goods, but in the end they will accept almost anything bearing their tag. One manager of a shoe department was famous for his policy, to accept two pairs of shoes, unworn it is true, but bought in his department, eight years ago! They were found among the personal effects of a customer, when she died. They were still in their original box, complete with bill! The store refunded the complete amount of the bill. There is also the classic story of the bride of three-months, who brought her wedding dress back to the store saying: "After all, I only wore it once!" The store did not accept it.

These exchangers do the serious buying public a great disservice, as they help to keep prices high. When they bring back goods, such as hats with powder marks inside, or wash dresses which are creased and crushed, they are forcing the store to lower the price of these particular items, as they cannot be sold at full value in this condition. The price reduction percentage of each department is calculated, when the selling price is set. In department's, where the rate of returned goods is high, the selling prices have been adjusted to allow for these losses.

Personally, I resent having to pay for my neighbor's thoughtlessness, when I buy a dress or a hat. I'm delighted to shop for foundation garments or bathing suits, which are, by custom, unexchangeable, for then I know I am not paying for her indecision.

Mr. H. Richards thanked each one for their assistance in making the program a success. Xmas songs.

Santa Claus arrived and gave out bags of candy.

Andrew Oxenham sat quietly concentrating on his Grade 11 examinations one afternoon not too long ago, looking as if he had nothing else on his mind but doing well.

But he had a late that evening — to dance with the world-famous Russian Boloshi Ballet in Toronto.

He and four other schoolmates were among the young Canadian dancers who got a once-in-a-lifetime chance to dance with the Rustans during their Canadian tour.

When the curtain rang down that night, a lot of the cheers were for the visiting dancers. But quite a few of them were for the Canadian teen-agers who showed up very well on stage.

UNIQUE SCHOOL

Few people who walk past an old church in central Toronto know they are passing one of the most unique schools on this continent — the National Ballet School.

I visited the school this week to find out what lies behind its success. What sort of training does a young person require to enter the highly competitive field of ballet? How does it compare with an ordinary high school?

I found 67 young people tackling their studies with the same seriousness that they show in their ballet classes. Twenty-five of them live in the National Ballet School residence.

What is their schedule like? Well, it gives you some idea if I say they start their school day at 8.55 a.m. and finish at 3 p.m. This doesn't count a two-hour period Saturday and some evening work.

"They really earn their secondary school diploma," Mrs. Anna Hawarth, academic director told me. "But the more they are challenged, the more they seem to thrive on it. They really learn how to concentrate."

Because the school has no science course, students take their science courses at nearby Jarvis Collegiate Institute. And the comparison is revealing. A Grade 12 girl recently got 92 per cent in her science examination.

"We know that because we're a private school and a young one, we must do well," said Mrs. Hawarth. "And the students realize it too, I think. Discipline problems are almost non-existent."

HEAVY SCHEDULE

I looked at the Friday schedule for a Grade 11 class and swallowed.

It read: Latin, 9 to 9.50; mathematics, 9.50 to 10.40; French, 10.40 to 11.40; Spanish, 11.40 to 12.30; (resident students) lunch, 11.40 to 12.30 (day students) science, 12.30 to 1.10 (day students); lunch, 12.30 to 1.10 (resident students); English, 1.15 to 2; history, 2 to 2.40; ballet, 2.50 to 4.20; art, 4.20 to 5.50; repertoire B, 6.45 to 8; repertoire A, 8 to 9.15.

By anyone's figuring that makes a long day, even though the students don't work every evening. On ten of this they have their regular homework and studying to do.

That couldn't be more fortunate in their ballet instruction. Director of the school is Miss Celia Franca, artistic director of the National Ballet of Canada. Principal is Miss Betty Oliphant, ballet mistress of the ballet company.

Where do the students come from? Each year the school has four studentsins from the West Coast, two from Montreal and several from the U.S. The school offers classes from Grade 6 to Grade 13 and will next year offer Grade 5.

How does one enter? Any student passing through the doors must do so through an audition, but Mrs. Hawarth and the others emphasize that the student must also have better than average marks.

I think the school has proved one thing above all: Canadian teen-agers can accept challenges above and beyond what they usually have thrown at them.

Watch for the Federal Government's plan to say "Happy Birthday" in 1867 with flowers from coast to coast. That's what will happen if the Post Office carries out its present plans.

The Post Office is thinking of a series of 12 stamps (one for each of the provinces and our two northern territories) which will show official flowers.

The plans call for lithographing the stamps instead of producing them by steel-line engraving. This will make possible brighter colors and more of them to reproduce the flowers.

Are you enjoying the current hit album imitating the voice of U.S. President John Kennedy? I think it's clever — but I'm not enjoying it.

Seems to me that a country's leaders in a democracy are fair game for the comedians. But family? I think that's stepping over the line.

SPEAKING of MANNERS

PATRICIA LEWIS

MAIL CALL

QUESTION: My husband and I were held up in an impossible traffic jam and, as a result, arrived extremely late to dinner at the home of friends in an adjoining town. Everyone was seated at dinner, and all the men arose when we came in and the hostess then had to introduce us to two couples we did not know. It was very embarrassing and, I know, inconvenienced practically everyone at the table. When guests arrive late, isn't there an easier way of getting them settled without having everyone stand until the latecomers are seated?

—Mrs. L. D., Trenton, N.J.

ANSWER: After greeting her late guests, the hostess should direct them to their seats. She does not rise from her seat while she does this. It's therefore not necessary for the men at the table to stand, either. Only the man seated to the right of the woman who is late rises and helps her into her chair. Any introductions that have to be made are done at the table when the new arrivals are seated.

QUESTION: When two married couples go out together in one car, how should the seating be arranged? My husband thinks I should sit in the back with the other man and let his wife sit in front as a matter of courtesy. I have an open mind on the subject, and simply wonder if there's any rule for seating couples in a car, as there is for seating couples at a din n er table.

—Mrs. C.L., New Haven, Conn.

ANSWER: The wife of the driver usually takes her customary seat up front. About the only time she might consider it prudent to give it up and sit in the back is if the distaff side of the other couple lets it be known she gets car sick or an urge to bail out the window if she has to ride in the rear. Otherwise, though, while couples may sit across from each other at a table for four, they generally sit side by side in an automobile.

Quinte Co-Eds Discuss Dressmaking

The fourth meeting of the Quinte Co-Eds was held recently at the home of Jane and Peggy Thomson.

The president, Mary Clapp, opened the meeting.

The next meeting will be held on January 7th, at the home of Mrs. Jones.

The discussion included: assembling the garment, pinning and basting; seams and seam finishes; gathers; darts, and facings and understitching.

Mrs. Mitchell gave a demonstration on pinning, basting and stitching of darts.

After the meeting closed lunch was served.

A Lift For Living

Christmas Good Reminder Christ Ever Contemporary

By Dr. RALPH W. SOCKMAN

Bethlehem and Beyond — In a beautiful church some years ago my attention was called to a "children's door." At the side of the main entrance to the sanctuary was a door cut to the scale of a child's size. The knob was placed low enough so that the little ones could turn it. Through such a children's door most of us, I venture to think, would like to enter the Christmas scene.

Christmas is the red letter day of childhood. We who are grown remember the glow of our early Christmas experiences. Expectancy quickened our pulse for days in advance and even crept into our dreams. The mysterious Bringer of Gifts during the night before Christmas, the surprises and shouts of the gleeful morning — all these come back to us across the years. In that childhood atmosphere, the beautiful Bible stories seemed perfectly at home. The shepherds hearing the heavenly host; the wise men seeing a star, the manger, and the dumb beasts looking on — these figures were as fresh and evergreen as the Christmas tree which brightened our homes.

No doubt many of us wish we could cast away the accumulated years, close our ears to the cares around us, bow our critical heads and enter the Christmas scene with childhood emotions. How often we hear it said that it requires the presence of children to make a real Christmas. And to be sure, the day would serve a worthy purpose if it did nothing more than bring about a renewal of childhood memories and contacts.

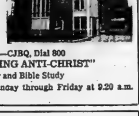
Good it is to have a day like this when time slips backward, and we enter through the children's door into the spirit of Christmas, when we translate the prose of everyday living whose most active verb is, "to get" into the poetry of Christmas whose most active verb is, "to give."

SERIOUS SIDE

But are we content that Christmas should mean only this to us? Personally, I am not; therefore while the children's door to Christmas is open and beckoning, let us go by way of the grown-up's entrance. In the words reported by the ancient shepherds, "Let us now go even unto Bethlehem and see this thing which is come to pass." And let no one think that he has to leave his intelligence behind when he goes to see the thing which came to pass at Bethlehem. We are not sitting down to hear a lovely fairy tale; we are going to behold first of all, the birthday of the world's most wonderful personality. The Christmas event is like the stars, in that the more we know about it the more our wonder grows. The most wonderful thing about Christmas is the One who came, rather than the way He came.

Remember, it is the birthday of a real person. When we go up to Bethlehem, we are in the presence of no solar myth, but a historical personage. More honest scholarly study has been given to the life of Jesus than to any other single subject, except perhaps to the physical universe itself. As a result of this study Jesus has been established as a historical figure: born at Bethlehem, reared in a carpenter shop at Nazareth, preaching His gospel in Galilee, calling fishermen and other plain folk to be His disciples, healing the sick, making friends of publicans and sinners, then setting His face to go up to Jerusalem where He was arrested, tried before Pontius Pilate, scourged and crucified; and then three days later turning His disciples from despair to triumphant confidence by the conviction that He was still a living force. Such is the brief biography of the historical personality born at Bethlehem.

But while He did wondrous things during those brief thirty years, the still more wonderful fact is that He refuses to die.



You explain Christ's continuing power as due to the respected cultivation of His memory by the church. But what keeps the church alive despite the sins and mistakes of its members, its divisions within and its persecution from without? It is not the church which has kept the memory of Christ alive. It is rather the power of Christ which has kept the church going.

Christ is the Eternal Contemporary.

Sport Slices...

RARE, MEDIUM, WELL-DONE

By GEO. H. CARVER, Sports Editor

As the sports headline read: "It's the same old melody—on a new record."

It had to come sooner or later—as sure as Saint Nick is wed to Merry Christmas.

I thought that perhaps it was delayed because the European hockey squads were handing our Quakers their "oats" in great big dishes.

Perhaps we should have sent the Woonsocket Wheaties, current champions in the Cereal League. For the living room magic lantern commercials claim that one post-dawn shot of their product will put bulging biceps on an emaciated mosquito.

But it seems we do not need hockey players with mighty "muskels." Judging from the results trickling in from the European theatres of exhibition combat, what we need over there is hockey players, period.

While our Quakers were wailing for some kind of spirit to move 'em in Sweden, the blonde Bobby Hulls of Stockholm and the surrounding fjords were having a smorgasbord with our side.

Unlike Top Tabby Trimble of the Hamilton Tiger Cats, who house-topped "We'll whomp the hell out of the west," the puck-chasing Johansson did exactly that.

While the "flickas" and boyfriends on the sidelines giggled and shouted their approval, the Swedes buried our gallant under an avalanche of pucks twice in a row which called for an urgent transatlantic SOS.

"So this is some of their best," gurgled the happy Swedes as they gulleted snarts of left-over "punch" from the world championship trophy. "We'll forgive them their trespasses such as elbowing, butt-ending, hooking and boarding."

But it was a different story in the land of the Czechs.

In the ancient, beautiful "City of One Hundred Spires" where the pest-dawn smog, fisted from the smoky resides of industrial furnaces that burn the red soil coal of Ostrava, blankets everything, the new "record" was cut.

It was the same music written against the background of a 15,000-piece "whistling" orchestra but the lyrics had a new twist.

In pre-world tournament exhibition games in former years, Canadian teams drew the wrath of the press and radio boys. They were called "roughnecks," "western hoodlums" among other choice noms-de-hockey. This, of course, after our sides "had whomped the hell" out of their national clubs.

But the local Pravda and other parroting periodicals of Prague came up with brand new ones. One said the Quakers were "rude . . . wanting to terrify the Czech players . . . and behaving more like a circus than a hockey team."

Another likened the Quakers' ruthless play to a fight in a bull-ring." And Coach Vic Lynn had the colossal nerve to strike his stick against the boards and ridicule the referees."

Well, we may have sent a "circus" over there but from the results it is a heluva long way from being the "Greatest Show on Earth."

"The Czechs," a writer stated, "were good only for eight minutes of the last period. They were disgusted with the boxing hockey of the Canadians."

This whole Czech mess of press prattle, I believe, was written for home consumption. Rough or not, their team defeated the Quakers 4-1 and the Reds had more than their share of the penalties.

The Czech team of 1959 was a club of fine players, who knew how to handle themselves and were quick to adapt "Canadian" tactics.

As for the fans "whistling" affecting the Quakers, take that with a dash of sodium. It is their way, akin to our boos, of showing disapproval of ice happenings they do not like. And I've yet to see a Canadian hockey team lose a game because a home-town crowd didn't like them.

Wonder what the reaction will be in Stockholm next March when the international pewsters, Czechs included, see a Canadian softer team in action?

Mary Stewart, Top Female Athlete

MARY STEWART

SUE HILTON ABIGAIL HOFFMAN

By JACK SULLIVAN
Canadian Press Sports Editor

TORONTO (CP)—Mary Stewart, a matter-of-fact little miss from Vancouver who lets her swimming do the talking for her, is Canada's outstanding female athlete of 1962.

The impish 110-pounder was given a resounding vote for the honor by the country's sports editors and broadcasters for the second consecutive year in the 28th annual Canadian Press year-end poll. She had the title locked up a month ago.

An all-time record 156 selectors filled in ballots. They didn't have to jog memories to put the finger on the pony-tailed youngster who celebrated her 17th birthday just three weeks ago.

Twenty other athletes were mentioned by the voters who were asked to name the three individual performers among women. In order of preference Votes were computed on a 3-2-1 basis and the final returns were reminiscent of the great post-Second World War years when Ottawa's Barbara Ann Scott, world figure - skating queen, swept the CP poll.

NEVER HEADED

The five-foot-three Miss Stewart, holder of the world record for the 110-yard and 100-metre butterfly, was all alone in front just as she was a month ago when she whipped a starry field to capture a gold medal for Canada in the British Empire Games at Perth, Australia.

She received 146 first-place votes, eight for second and one for third and one voter passed up the question. In many cases, selectors merely jotted down Mary Stewart and asked who else was there. On a point basis, she received 455, considerably more than all others combined.

The voting was a tribute to her skills.

Last July in her home town she proved herself at least the records faster than any female butterfly swimmer in the Commonwealth with a clocking of 1:07.3 for the 110 yards, a world mark. This meant, in effect, that she'd either have to drown or swallow water to miss out on a gold medal at Perth.

QUALIFIED EASILY

In the first round in Australia she clipped nearly 4½ seconds off the Games record with a time of 1:09.1 to win easily and effortlessly. A cool customer when she donned her red and white candy-striped bathing suit, she climbed out of the pool and winked at team coach Ed Healy of Montreal.

That little gesture was taken as an indication that she was confident—without exactly saying so—of handling the best in the final a couple of nights later. She was.

After giving one last tuck of the chin strap on her white bathing cap, she plunged in with seven others. Her head bobbed up a few feet in front of the field and she eased up at the finish to win by about seven feet in the slow time—for her—of 1:10.1.

That effort, plus her consistently brilliant swimming since the first burst on the international scene in 1958, put her far ahead of any other female in the country.

SUE HILTON SECOND

Second place in the CP polls went to 18-year-old Sue Hilton of London, Ont., winner of the Canadian women's close and junior golf championships. Five voters put her in the No. 1 spot, 79 made her second choice and 28 put her down for third and a total of 201 points.

Sue Hilton is a daughter of Wally Hilton, former football great of Belleville and Western University.

Third was Abigail Hoffman, 15-year-old runner from Toronto who still has to show her potential in the comparatively new half-mile track event for women. She tried the distance only seven times in competition before her selection as a member of Canada's team in the British Empire Games and improved her time each outing but an injured leg hampered her in

Quick-Draw Philip Popular

Says Prince 'A Great Hunter'

MILAN, Italy (AP) — Despite charges at home that he's too quick on the draw, Britain's Prince Philip is described by Milan's widely circulated Il Giorno as a really great hunter.

The newspaper published a report by sportswriter Giana Brera Friday on Prince Philip's big duck and pheasant hunt on the Portalupa estate near here early this month.

The Queen's husband, who goes shooting in an old, patched-up sweater, has come under increasing fire at home from animal lovers because of his hunting offensives during various trips around the world.

Members of the Portalupa hunting party said the prince stopped shooting after bagging 140 ducks, Il Giorno reported.

"That Philip was a great hunter was immediately understood at Portalupa by those who saw him slip on a knitted jersey, worn out—say, needed—on the right side, where the rifle rests. 'I am accustomed to this one,' explained Prince Philip, aware of the other guests' surprise.

In London, Prince Philip's champions, themselves noted animal lovers, declared he really is fond of wild life. Philip is president of the World Wild Life Fund.

He went Kangaroo hunting in Australia last month and was admonished by Australian animal lovers. There were murmurs of criticism also among sections of the Italian population after he and his party helped down 1,500 assorted pheasants, partridges and wild duck in the shoot at Portalupa. After that, Philip sailed forth once more — this time against the ferocious wild boar of Germany.

A letter defending him in the London Daily Telegraph was signed by, among others, Lord Alanbrooke and Julian Huxley. Alanbrooke is a distinguished bird watcher and Huxley a world-renowned naturalist.

Legitimate sporting activities, Huxley and Alanbrooke declared, "are in no way antagonistic to the wild life conservation movement."

The Daily Mail, also defending Prince Philip, said the shops are loaded high with Christmas turkeys right now, and no one was complaining about that slaughter.

Worsley NHL Snipers Best Target

Faces Leafs, Hawks

By RON ANDREWS
Canadian Press Staff Writer

Gump Worsley doesn't look like a duck but one could hardly blame him if he feels like one. The genial New York Rangers goaltender is the most shot-at target in the National Hockey League's shooting gallery.

As an example of just how hectic times have been for the veteran netminder, Worsley has had 172 shots fired at him in his last four games. That's only 22 fewer than part-time Toronto Maple Leaf goal-keeper Don Simmons has faced in eight games this season.

The fact Worsley is the busiest goalkeeper in the league isn't new. He has had that honor for several seasons but the surprising thing about the 33-year-old native of Montreal is that he doesn't appear to be slowing down. It has often been said that without Worsley the Rangers would be dead. It could also be said that with the Rangers it's a wonder he isn't dead.

MISSED SUPPORT

The New York defence has a reputation for leaving Gump at the mercy of opposing forwards. Worsley has never had the same support as Jacques Plante received when he won the Vezina Trophy as the league's leading goaltender in six of the last seven season with Montreal Canadiens.

Worsley has a ready answer to that.

"You can't make a chicken pot pie out of chicken feathers." In 37 games this season, Worsley has been shot at 982 times. He's managed to get in the way in 910 of those blasts for a "fielding average" of .917, which ranks him fourth among the regular netminders. He has to contend with an average of 26.7 shots a game, the most in the league.

Here are the records for the other five regular goaltenders: Bob Perreault, Boston Bruins, average shots a game 34.0, fielding average .890; Johnny Bower, Toronto, average shots 29.2, fielding average .907; Glenn Hall, Chicago Black Hawks, average shots 23.7, fielding average .927, best in the league; Plante, average shots 23.5, fielding average .924; and Terry Sawchuk, Detroit Red Wings, average shots 27.2, fielding average .922.

ACCEPTS SITUATION

It would be natural to assume that Worsley would be a nervous wreck after a game. However, the figures don't bear out the fact under the pressure—Worsley has a disposition which stamps him as one of the clowns around the league.

In a game against Chicago earlier this season, Worsley was injured in the second period. He suffered a wrenched shoulder when knocked heavily to the ice. When referee Eddie Powers checked Worsley to see how badly he was hurt, the netminder was ready.

"What's the trouble?" Powers asked.

"Pimples," answered Worsley.

This weekend, Worsley will probably be as busy as ever. The Rangers visit the third-place Maple Leafs tonight then travel to Boston for league-leading Chicago Sunday night.

In the only other game scheduled tonight, Chicago plays the fourth-place Canadiens at Montreal. Toronto is at Boston and Montreal visits Detroit in the other games Sunday night.

Clippers Defeat Amerks

BALTIMORE (AP) — Persistent pressure by Baltimore paid off as the Clippers came from behind to post a 5-3 American Hockey League victory over Rochester Americans Friday night.

Rochester goalie Jerry McNamara turned back 44 shots but finally wilted in the last period when the Clippers tallied four goals—three of them within a 74-second span.

Player-Coach Red Sullivan of Baltimore tied the score 2-2 early in the final period. Then goals by Leon Rochefort, Dave Creighton and Pat Hannigan broke open the contest. Don Johns got the other Clippers goal in the second period.

McNamara, who injured his back before the season opened, made his first start in the nets.

Rookie Lou Angotti, signed by the Americans Thursday from Kitchener, scored both Rochester goals in the first period.

Johnson On Hook

Liston Advisors Bait Patterson

By MURRAY ROSE

NEW YORK (AP) — Every week and sometimes twice a week, Sonny Liston's adviser comes up with a new opponent for the heavyweight king and retires with the champion's contract, with Championship Sports Incorporated is broken.

The latest opponent mentioned by adviser Jack Nilon is Harold Johnson, another Philadelphian who is the light - heavyweight champion of the world.

This is a bit of manoeuvring to get former champion Floyd Patterson in the ring with Sonny as quickly as possible. The Liston camp figures Patterson, who went 126 seconds with Sonny at Chicago Sept. 25, won't be around much longer in a return fight. The difficulty lies in getting a place to put on the talked-about return.

Nilon and Liston don't want any part of Championship Sports, which promoted the first fight. Most of the money for that quickie has been tied up by the United States government which wants to make sure it collects the taxes due on the multi-million-dollar promotion.

PATTERSON HAS CHOICE

But under the original contract, Patterson has the right to pick the site, date and promoter for the second fight. Patterson was the man who insisted that Liston should get a chance at the title. Therefore, Liston since is obligated to give Floyd another shot if he wants it. He would look like a fourth-grade heel if he didn't give Patterson a return and he knows it.

Therefore all the bullshakes from the Liston camp is to put pressure on Patterson to fight in February or March so Liston and company will be free to do whatever they please thereafter should the champion win again.

Once Patterson is out of the picture, Nilon and Liston will be able to take over and act as their own promoters.

Sweden's Ingemar Johansson, the ex-champion, is willing to fight Liston either in the United States or Sweden. This shapes up to be the best possible fight since it would pit two big boys with big punches against each other in an international scrap in June or September, the best months for an outdoor promotion.

Liston tipped his mitt the other night in Toronto when he suggested that he fight Johansson and that Patterson would take on undefeated Cassius Clay, the champion talker of the heavyweight division.

Then, said Liston, the two winners should meet.

Packers Ready For Big Game

Giants Eye Taylor, Hornung

GREEN BAY, Wis. (AP)— Four years ago the bright future of Green Bay Packers was akin to peering down a bottomless well.

Now, as the Packers prepare for their third straight National Football League championship game, the only dark spots are the fading black-and-blue bruise marks inflicted in wintry Western Division tilts with an impressive record of 13 victories and one defeat.

They'll bid for their second championship in a row against York Dec. 30 against the Eastern Division champion Giants, who edged the Packers 37-0 Green Bay in the title game a year ago.

In December, 1958, the Packers were the worst in the league after posting their poorest record in 40 seasons of pro football. They won only once and played a tie in 12 games.

The board of directors that supervises the non-profit Packers organization turned out the old coach and hired Vince Lombardi from the ranks of Giants assistants. Soon the drive for the team posted a 7-5 record and the next three made their way to the championship game.

HAVE 18 VETERANS

Eighteen players remain from the 1958 lineup. They include defensive centre Jim Ringo, Bill Forester, ends Max McGee and Gary Knafelc, quarterback Bart Starr, tackles Forrest Gregg and Bob Skoronski, defensive back Hank Gremminger, halfback Paul Hornung, end Ron Kramer and defensive back Johnny Symank.

The Packers got flanker Boyd Dowler in 1959 and in 1960 they tracted Tom Moore, who has been a great replacement for Hornung, restricted by a knee injury this year after leading the league in scoring for three seasons.

That year also brought defensive back Willie Wood, the league's interception leader this year.

Freshmen of 1959 who have made the grade in a big way are fullback Jim Taylor, NFL's outstanding player this year; linebacker Ray Nitschke and offensive guard Jerry Kramer.

22 Countries Enter Tournament

Smoke Eaters Bid For Olmstead Fails

STOCKHOLM (AP)—Twenty-two countries have applied to participate in the world hockey championships here next March, the championships organization committee reported Friday. Thursday was the last day for applications.

The key games during the championships, March 7-17, will be played in Stockholm's new indoor Johanneshov Stadium, which was opened in October and seats 16,000. Swedish and foreign hockey fans already have booked some 8,000 seats for each game. Most of the games will be televised on the European television circuit.

The International Ice Hockey Association in mid-January will decide the order of the matches in Group A eight countries will participate. These are the Swedish world champions, crowned at Colorado Springs, Colo., Canada, U.S., Soviet Union, Czechoslovakia, East Germany, Finland and Norway or West Germany. Norway and West Germany will meet in a qualification game before the championships start.

Canada's representatives at both championships will be Trail Smoke Eaters, who won the Allan Cup last spring. The Smokies also won the Allan Cup in the 1959-60 season and brought home the world championship in 1961.

Five of the 22 entries in the 1963 tournament are preliminary. The Swedish organization committee so far has not received definite applications from Austria, Bulgaria, Italy and the two German teams.

Definite entries are: Canada, Belgium, Czechoslovakia, Denmark, Britain, Finland, France, Holland, Hungary, Norway, Poland, Romania, the Soviet Union, Sweden, Switzerland, United States and Yugoslavia.

VANCOUVER (CP) — Bert Olmstead, former National Hockey League star, will not play for Trail in the world hockey championships, it was reported Friday.

Olmstead received a letter in Calgary from William M. Jennings, president of New York Rangers of the NHL, saying it would not be possible to arrange Olmstead's reinstatement as an amateur by the Dec. 31 deadline, the report said.

Rangers got Olmstead from Toronto Maple Leafs for $20,000 in June. The veteran left winger refused to report to the Rangers and recently sought reinstatement as an amateur so he could join Trail.

Royals Finally Win

Flyers Dump Petes 6-1

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Peterborough still leads the Ontario Hockey Association's provincial Junior A group, but only by one point after a 6-1 whipping by the Flyers at Niagara Falls Friday night.

And in the only other scheduled junior game, Guelph Royals broke a record of 12 straight defeats with a 7-2 win over Montreal Canadiens in Montreal. The defeat dropped Montreal into third place behind Niagara Falls and left Guelph still well at the bottom of the league.

Peterborough took a 1-0 lead when Danny Grant scored in the second period, but it was virtually the end of the game for them. Niagara Falls swept back with six straight goals by Gary Dornhoefer, Wayne Maxner, Don Awrey, Gary Harmer, Ron Hergott and Dave Armstrong.

Peterborough captain Tom Carty left the game during the second period after assisting on Grant's goal. It was reported he had suffered a smashed knee cap.

Guelph smashed through the Montreal defence in the final period in a sustained burst of play that gave them four unanswered goals.

Ron Taylor got three and singles went to Sandy Fitzpatrick, Borden Smith, Trevor Fahey and Gary Sabourin.

Johnny Taylor and Bob Chamlebois scored for Montreal.

In Metro Junior A hockey action, Toronto Neil McNeil Maroons defeated Oshawa Generals 10-0 and Whitby Dunlops defeated Toronto Knob Hill 5-2.

Hab Fans Abuse Johnson

MONTREAL (CP) — Frank Selke, managing director of Montreal Canadiens, says that he has been assaulted and cursed for defenceman Tom Johnson then Selke "would be happy to let him go" because of abuse the veteran player has taken from fans.

Selke was particularly upset over the booing directed at Johnson, 34, in Thursday night's 4-4 tie with Toronto Maple Leafs in a National Hockey League game.

"He was booed all night," said Selke. "On one goal by the Leafs two other Montreal players were directly responsible for it, not Johnson, and that was one that caused most of the fuss.

"Certainly he shouldn't have to take that sort of thing after he has been playing with an injured wrist and that's the sort of reception he gets.

"In appreciation for what Johnson has done for me in the long time he has been with Canadiens, and with the approval of Senator Hnatyshyn (president of the club) I would be glad to make a trade."

'Goodness How Wonderful'!

Swim Star Mary Thrilled

VANCOUVER (CP) — Vancouver swim star Mary Stewart greeted word of her selection as Canada's Outstanding Female Athlete for 1962 with a five-second pause of speechless surprise, then gasped:

"Oh my goodness! How wonderful!"

For Mary, the announcement of her selection by sports writers as the top Canadian woman athlete for the second straight year, comes as a late but welcome birthday present. She celebrated her 17th birthday Dec. 8.

"It's so exciting. I had hoped I might be selected again—but not so soon."

The five - foot - three, 110-pound swimmer is settling back into a hard training program following a brief break after returning earlier this month from the British Empire Games at Perth, Australia, where she won a gold medal for Canada in the grueling 110 - yard butterfly event. She holds the world record for the event with a time of 1:07.3 set in Vancouver last July.

"I hope to continue competitive swimming for at least two more years," said Miss Stewart. She trains two hours a day, seven days a week.

All in Sport

"You sure you ain't got your contact lenses in backwards?"

Western Hockey

Manager - coach Sid Abel of Detroit Red Wings can expect a telephone call today.

It will be from Charlie Rayner. He wants some action.

Rayner, a man of many tribulations in his first coaching year with Edmonton Flyers of the Western Hockey League, wants to know where two of his players have been for the last week.

Without them, his team has lost three successive games, including a 7-0 shellacking Friday night by Vancouver Canucks.

Abel's National League team last week ordered four players from Edmonton to Pittsburgh Hornets of the American League, and four Hornets went in return.

Four of the Hornets — Ray Ross and Norm Corcoran— didn't report.

Friday, Rayner set a deadline for their appearance and when they didn't show he announced he will recall two of his Flyers when he phones Abel today.

WILL CHOOSE

Rayner said he will choose from among Chuck Holmes, Warren Hynes and defencemen Keith Wahl and Lou Marcon, all now at Pittsburgh.

With a listless, one below normal strength of 18, the Flyers were no match for the Canucks.

Rookie Trent Beatty scored twice and other Vancouver goals were scored by Bob McCusker, Buddy Boone, Dave Duke, Jim Baird and Phil Maloney.

The victory moved Canucks back into the Northern Division leadership they lost for the first time a week ago.

Syracuse Whips Frontenacs

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Syracuse Braves, deep in the Eastern Professional Hockey League cellar, beset with attendance problems and hit with rumors of a transfer to Kitchener, turned giant-killers Friday night, dumping Kingston Frontenacs out of sole possession of first place with a 3-2 win at Syracuse.

The win gave Syracuse 13 points, still 17 back of third-place Sudbury Wolves and 26 back of Kingston and Hull-Ottawa Canadiens.

Coach Gus Kyle Thursday denied the rumors of a change in Kitchener, but the rumors continued. Kyle did say, however, there had been talk of a move to North Bay or Sault Ste. Marie, Ont.

Newcomer Al Caron, a 24-year-old native of Quebec City, was the hero for the Syracuse club. He scored two goals in the third period, his fifth and sixth since being brought up from Charlotte of the amateur Eastern League eight games ago.

Connie Stevens' Standby Gets Her Big Chance

By BOB THOMAS

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — Many of an old Warner Brothers musical featured the earnest young hopeful who took over for the star. It could happen right on the Warner lot.

The star is Connie Stevens, long the chirpy Cricket of the television whodunit Hawaiian Eye and leading lady of some of the studio's soapier features. She and Warners have had their own vendetta in recent times and she is now AWOL, swearing never to return.

This could be the opportunity for young Tina Cole, a pert blonde who belongs to Hollywood's growing army of second-generation hopefuls. The daughter of musician Buddy Cole and Yvonne King of the singing King sisters, Tina has taken over the female interest in Hawaiian Eye.

She sings in the Golden Dragon room by night and relates the information desk of the Hawaiian village hotel by day. So far she has had little chance to do than say "they went that way" to sleuths Troy Donahue, Bob Conrad and Grant Williams.

But things may pick up. She has a long-term contract that includes recording. The studio has high hopes for her.

SAYS TEACHING STEADY

She has approached her career with realism.

"I had a year of college and I plan to continue taking courses to get my teaching credentials," says Tina, "An actress can find work only sporadically. Teaching is steady work."

The King sisters, long one of the country's top vocal teams, quit the business for several years to mother their respective families. Now the act is reunited and playing dates from Las Vegas to Europe. Tina got into the act for some of her seasoning.

"I was watching them sing one night at Lake Tahoe," she recalled, "and I could tell my mother's voice was getting more and more hoarse. Finally she couldn't sing any more, and she called me up on the stage to take over for her."

Tina likes singing dates of her own but working in an office when Warner summoned her to sub for Connie. She had tried out for a contract months before.

Court Grants New Trial for Man Sentenced

TORONTO (CP) — The Ontario Court of Appeal has granted a new trial for Conrad Lachance, 34, a bush contractor who was to have been hanged January 9 for the capital murder of his wife Gertrude, 30.

The court Friday quashed Lachance's Oct. 3 conviction by an assize court jury. He was sentenced to death for the March 24 murder by Mr. Justice W. D. Parker. Lachance was charged with fatally stabbing his wife, from whom he had been separated, with a hunting knife at a home in Azonville, 50 miles northeast of Timmins.

The Court of Appeal said Mr. Justice Parker's charge to the jury was erroneous on the question of reasonable doubt. It also said the judge erred in failing to instruct the jury on the application of the doctrine of reasonable doubt in deciding whether Lachance should be found guilty of capital murder, non-capital murder or manslaughter.

In its unanimous judgment, the appeal court also said there was evidence Lachance had been drinking beer since shortly after noon on March 24 and that the killing occurred between 9 and 9.30 p.m.

Astrological Forecast

For December 23

By SYDNEY OMARR

Aries (March 21 to April 19) Let experience be your guide. Avoid needless worrying. Remember true significance of holiday season. Give thought to spiritual side of life and lives by Golden Rule.

Taurus (April 20 to May 20) Try to get some rest. Fatigue can be your enemy. Check impulse to answer sharply, or to dispatch "cutting" letter. Sleep on decisions. Wait. If setback occurs, it is only temporary.

Gemini (May 21 to June 21) Cooperate in helping with decorations, other tasks around the house. Welcome visitors. Discuss plans for future. Be especially attentive to young persons. Avoid impatience. Answer questions.

Cancer (June 22 to July 21) Take time to contemplate spiritual aspects of thoughts, activities. Good Moon aspect; today enhances personal magnetism. Means you can win your way, charm members of opposite sex.

Leo (July 22 to August 21) In trying to accomplish everything at once, you could skip wonderful time. But remember your own needs, including proper rest, diet. By being happy you make loved ones and guests happy, too.

Virgo (August 22 to Sept. 22) Day of adventure! Features travel, change, visits, creative activity. Don't be in too much of hurry. Take time to be safe. Be considerate. Give others benefit of doubt, especially on highway.

Libra (Sept. 23 to Oct. 22) What you treasure most is the happiness you anticipate giving friends, loved ones. Fine for buying close to home, if possible. Permit natural Libra affection to come through. You thus gain spiritual strength.

Scorpio (Oct. 23 to Nov 21) Perceive beauty around you. Pay heed, to symbols depicting upcoming holiday. Understand needs of those close to you. Radiate good will today. Venus, Moon in your sign, means others look to you as example of good.

Sagittarius (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21) Avoid being "buried" in groups or at parties. Take time to analyze emotions. Open mind and heart to holiday message. Cycle moving up. Exude confidence. Financial gain due shortly.

Capricorn (Dec. 22 to Jan. 20) Friends are well-meaning. But it is best to heed your own counsel, especially where social gatherings are concerned. Key should be moderation. Use Capricorn common sense!

Aquarius (Jan. 21 to Feb. 19) Fine for taking initiative in presenting ideas. Don't be "cowed" by one who appears to know it all. Speak up. Be diplomatic, but get point across. You thus gain respect, admiration.

Pisces (Feb. 20 to March 20) Key is peace of mind. You are aided in this by attending church of choice. Spiritual insight could throw light on material questions. Take a good look. Answers are close to home.

If today is your birthday you have been one of active responsibilities. Now, past efforts begin to bear fruit. You are inquisitive, bright, attractive to members of opposite sex.

GENERAL TENDENCIES—Emphasis on religion, including some "technical" points which lead to debates. All could benefit from today's Virgo interpretation.

For December 24

By SYDNEY OMARR

Aries (Mar. 21 to Apr. 19): Lift thoughts to horizons preserved by great men of past. Re-examine your own principles aspirations, agbitions. A time to start anew, to be revitalized spiritually.

Taurus (Apr. 20 to May 20): Best to be leader when it comes to common sense. Moderation should be key today and tonight. In dealing with children, be very diplomatic. Remember that tomorrow is another big day.

Gemini (May 21 to June 21): Much acclaim due. Possibly because of clever selection of gifts. Be gracious. Avoid scattering your forces. Be generous, expansive. But don't try to do everything!

Cancer (June 22 to July 21): Pacing is key. Hectic day and night in store. Finish one thing at a time. Take care in dealing with others. Attend to details. Otherwise, you could overlook close friend. Try to remember!

Leo (July 22 to Aug. 21): You may feel restless. This is because you want everything to be just right. Seeking perfection can disappoint. Exciting evening. Good for being attentive to special person.

Virgo (Aug. 22 to Sept. 22): Pleasure obtained by being with family members. If this is not possible, be with them in spirit. Your thoughts could set positive forces in motion. Remain on high level.

Libra (Sept. 23 to Oct. 22): Contemplate many symbols, lessons evident today and tonight. Realize there is more to occasion than mere celebrating. Things you say today could lead to unexpected changes in future.

Scorpio (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21): A little extra caution could save emotional wear and tear. Teach children lessons of safety. Accept position of responsibility. Help explain facts to younger persons.

Sagittarius (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21): Spirit of giving prevails. Stress the unusual. Help others see funny side of situation. Finish all projects. If it is question of giving more or less — give more!

Capricorn (Dec. 22 to Jan. 20): Excellent for expressing humor, independence, originality. You can be shining light at gathering of friends, loved ones. Help cheer one who feels left out." Share joys.

Aquarius (Jan. 21 to Feb. 19): Take care on highway. Exercise caution in what you say or write. True friends are on your side. But others may look for opportunity to be offended. It is blessed to give.

Pisces (Feb. 20 to Mar. 20): Be patient. Many may appear to think ordinary duties, courtesies are "out for the day." By maintaining your own standards of dignity, kindness, you win your way. Help others.

If today is your birthday . . . you are interested in others, and this drive attracts you to fields of social service, teaching, medicine.

General Tendencies: Many emphasize that message of this season is not literally carried out. Day when persons tend to look within for answers. Cycle is up for Scorpio, Sagittarius, Capricorn.

Cuban Swap

rose and the number of prisoners declined to 1,113.

Donovan insisted that no cash was involved. As to the worth of the ransom supplies, he said: "Let Mr. Castro place his own valuation on what I have given him."

Castro followed up his first proposal by sending 10 prisoners to the United States to spall it out in detail.

FORM COMMITTEE

Within a week of his remark, the tractors for freedom committee was formed, headed by the late Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt; the president's widow; Dr. Milton Eisenhower, brother, of former president Eisenhower, and Walter Reuther, president of the United Auto Workers.

Americans mailed contributions to the committee's Detroit headquarters for an anticipated fund of $3,000,000 to $3,500,000 to buy tractors.

To cries that Castro was blackmailing the United States, Mrs. Roosevelt responded: "Ridiculous." She added:

"I don't believe the United States, can be intimidated by Cuba. If it wishes to do a humanitarian thing, it should do it."

Castro wanted Mrs. Roosevelt or Eisenhower to come to Cuba to work out the details, but the committee instead sent a Norwegian team of farm machinery specialists to Havana June 12, 1961.

CHANGED TERMS

They got nowhere.

Castro reduced the number of prisoners involved, subtracting three Spanish priests, 18 prisoners accused of serious crimes under the Batista regime, three invasion leaders, two invaders accused of slaying policemen, eight who died "accidentally" while being taken to Havana and an unspecified number captured in civilian clothing.

Castro insisted on heavy construction-type tractors, rejecting the lighter, farm-type offered by the committee, and he insisted on including the swap as indemnification.

The latter points killed the proposal.

Mrs. Roosevelt said 300 heavy tractors would be capable of harrowing all of Cuba in three days." She added, "our team of experts decided that the heavy-duty tractors Castro was demanding could be used in such quantity only in Siberia or central China."

John Hooker Jr., committee executive secretary, declared Americans would pay "not $28,000,000 or $29" as indemnification. He said "the humane desires of the committee are in conflict with our laws."

The committee disbanded June 23, saying Castro had switched his stand "making impossible a realisation of our humanitarian goals." It was announced that the unexpended mail contributions were being returned to the senders.

CASTRO TRIES AGAIN

Castro sent 10 prisoners back to the United States to try to revive the proposal. Not learning until they had left Cuba that the tractors committee had collapsed, the prisoners made their appeal to Cuban exile groups.

The subject lay dormant for six months. Then, Jan. 3, 1962, the Cuban families asked a nation-wide drive for funds to ransom their sons and brothers.

The Castro regime began a mass trial for treason. April 5, a five-man military tribunal, after four days deliberation, found 1,179 men guilty and sentenced them to 30 - year prison terms. But the tribunal also set ransoms for each prisoner, ranging from $25,000 up to $500,000 and totalling $62,000,000.

On the same day, the families committee announced that Castro had agreed to negotiate with it.

Less than a week later, 60 wounded and ailing prisoners arrived in Florida, ransomed on credit for $2,500,000. A spokesman for the group predicted freedom for their comrades "in a few months, maybe three months.

Meanwhile, the families committee's efforts led to Donovan, the international negotiator who had exchanged Soviet spy Colonel Rudolf Abel for American U-2 pilot Francis Gary Powers. He agreed to undertake their cause.

In August, Donovan obtained special entrance visas from the U.S. state department to enter Cuba on a non-governmental mission and began a series of meetings with Castro. The Kennedy administration took care to declare that he was acting in a private capacity.

Within two months, the blue-eyed, silver-haired lawyer was awaiting Castro's decision on his offer of medicine, medical supplies and baby food.

The money for the supplies, Donovan said, came from large corporations and foundations in the U.S., South America and Europe, from wealthy Cubans in exile and from private contributions.

On Oct. 20, Donovan said the negotiations were in their final stage. He received an itemized list of the supplies Castro wanted.

CRISIS INTERVENES

Two days later, Cuba was the precarious centre of a world crisis. The United States discovered Soviet missiles and bombers there and President Kennedy slapped a naval quarantine around the island.

Nevertheless, by Oct. 26 word trickled to Donovan through exile sources that the Castro government was keeping negotiations open.

The roadblock now was on the other side. Donovan said he could do nothing until assured that his efforts did not conflict with national policy.

On Dec. 12, President Kennedy gave such assurance and Donovan announced he hoped to have the prisoners freed by Christmas. On Dec. 21, the agreement was announced in Washington.

The American Red Cross pushed forward loading the freighter African Pilot at Port Everglades, Fla., with the first shipment.

It is expected to sail for Havana today.

The real cost in heating with any fuel is not just FIRST COST . . . equipment and installation. IT IS THE TOTAL COST . . . First cost PLUS those month by month fuel bills that you must meet. While many fuels promise big savings at first, they cost you MORE than oil heat every month. OIL HEAT IS MORE ECONOMICAL, CLEANER and SAFER than any other modern automatic fuel. Check all the advantages of oil heat before you build or buy . . . or convert your present heating system.

The truth is . . . You Pay Much Less

Atlantic Region Paradise For Boards, Commissions to Survey Economic Conditions

By KEITH KINCAID

HALIFAX (CP)—If surveys, statistics and speeches alone added up to jobs and trade, Maritimers would all be millionaires.

The Atlantic region is a paradise for boards, commissions and councils that over the years have surveyed the economic well-being of the 1,900,000 residents from every conceivable angle.

But in recent months events taking place miles from the region have added new optimism to the words of businessmen and government leaders. They range from President Kennedy's trade bill to the new Atlantic Development Board.

Perhaps just as significant is a positive outlook adopted by Maritimers and Newfoundlanders. In every province they point to mining or industrial projects and look to the future with greater confidence.

"There is a new and healthy spirit awakening in Nova Scotia," says finance minister G. I. Smith who has sparked some of it with a voluntary economic planning program for primary industry.

POSITIVE THINKING

There was a time when recitations of the dreary symbols of economic backwardness were thought necessary to impress the country with the state of affairs in the easternmost provinces. Now there is recognition that pessimism discourages investment and does nothing for the ambition and energy of the residents.

"Morale is just as important to the economy of a region as it is 'to an army," says Nelson Mann, executive vice-president of the Atlantic Provinces Economic Council.

There is a growing opinion that the world changing trade patterns will revive the pre-Confederation days when the Maritimes enjoyed a rich trade with New England. This hope is based on the authority President Kennedy now has to cut tariffs with countries willing to reciprocate.

R. D. Hurst of the Halifax port and industrial commission says what's done with the president's invitation will be one of the most critical decisions taken. "It could mean a shift from east-west to north-south trade lines."

NEED CAPITAL

This is something Maritimers, cut off by geography from the dense markets of central Canada, have been waiting for years to hear. Economic, cultural and family ties with New England are deeply rooted.

Prof. A. Y. Smith of the University of New Brunswick, former APEC president, says tariff-cutting would restore many of the locational advantages held in the days of the Maritimes' greatest prosperity.

The Atlantic Development Board is seen as a large part of the answer to what business groups, provincial governments and APEC have been saying for years is essential to Atlantic prosperity. Its function, as outlined in Parliament, will be to advise federal authorities on policies, measures and projects to help raise the region's economy.

Still missing, however, in the opinion of some is the money to make it work—a capital development fund. APEC estimates as much as $3,700,000,000 is needed in private and government investment to bring wages, employment and living standards up to national averages.

NEW PULP MILL

On balance, 1962 was a progressive year despite mine layoffs, poor tourist and farm weather, and shipping business lost to St. Lawrence ports. Here are some highlights:

Newfoundland—The Iron Ore Company of Canada started mining in Labrador City and Wabush and associated developments in northern areas pushed ahead on schedule; work progressed on a large asbestos venture at Baie Verte with production only months away.

Nova Scotia—The Nova Scotia Pulp Mill at Point Tupper went into regular production, leading an industrial and shipping boom in the Canso Strait area; work started on a $5,500,000 fish processing plant for Lunenburg Sea Products company at Dartmouth — start was made on what will eventually be a $60,000,000 power project and announcement was made of a multi-million-dollar refinery.

New Brunswick — Work started on a $50,000,000 lead-zinc complex for Bathurst Mining and Smelting Corporation near Bathurst; Canadian Industries Limited started a $5,000,000 plant at Dalhousie; Italian interests announced plans for a large groundwood mill in the Miramichi area; construction of a $22,000,000 newsprint mill for Rothesay Pulp and Paper Corporation at Saint John is to start soon.

Prince Edward Island—Plans for two new frozen food plants were announced for close-to-home handling of the produce of the basically agricultural province.

Successful Living

Do Emotions Make Us Overeat?

DEAR DORIS—Believe it or not, in the last year I have tried to diet about six or seven times, not just of my own accord but under a doctor's care. The first two weeks are just fine. I can lose from three to five pounds a week, but I don't know what happens; I just can't seem to keep it up. I even get pills from my doctor, but they don't help. My husband says it's just a matter of will power, but with me that doesn't work either.

Do you think I should see a psychiatrist? I've read that sometimes overeating has something to do with emotional disturbances, although I don't know what they can be, as I am happily married, with two lovely children and a husband who has the patience of a god, but I'm so afraid that some day his patience will run out.

/DORIS CLARK

I am 25, five feet four inches, and weigh at the moment 170 pounds. I'm supposed to be 135 pounds.—MRS. M. R.

DEAR MRS. M. R.—There's a germ of truth in the statement that overeating may be a reaction to disappointments or to a feeling of not getting anywhere.—

But without more evidence, I'd say it's not a psychiatrist you need as much as a set of bathroom scales, a full-length mirror, a weekly record of measurements and a pounds of a new dress three sizes down if you make it by Easter.

DEAR DORIS—I am very anxious to have a pen pal. I would like one in France. If you can't get one there, I'll please in Australia. I would like it to be a girl. I am nine years and in grade four—LONESOME.

DEAR LONESOME—Write to Mrs. R. T. Tanner, United Nations Association in Canada, Markham, Ontario. She will link you up with a pen pal in France, I am sure.

RELATIVES GREET CUBAN PRISONERS

Father, Nine Of Children Die In N.B. Fire

Carries Wife to Safety, Then Returns to House

BROUGHTON, N.S. (CP) — Fire killed a farmer and nine of his children today in this small Cape Breton coal-mining village.

Robert Bateman, 33, helped his wife to safety from their flaming one-storey wooden bungalow but died when he returned in an attempt to save the children.

The dead children: Bobby, 11, Joyce, 9, Daniel, 8, Norman, 7, Eddy, 6, Nancy, 4, Cathy, 3, Debby 2 and Sharon five months. A 10th child Peggy, 13, was visiting friends in Halifax.

Broughton is 20 miles southeast of Sydney.

Volunteer firemen from Birch Grove found the dwelling levelled when they arrived. Cause is undetermined.

First word of the fire came at 6 a.m. when neighbors rushed into the office of the Four Seas Colliery here. It is the chief employer in this community of 150.

Mrs. Bateman, who trudged a half mile in freezing temperatures and more than 20 inches of snow to tell her nearest neighbors of the fire, was taken to hospital at nearby Glace Bay. She suffered shock.

SOLON E. LOW DIES SUDDENLY OF HEART ATTACK

Socred Leader For 16 Years

LETHBRIDGE (CP) — Solon E. Low, whose enforced acceptance of scrip as pay during the depression pointed him towards the national leadership of the Social Credit party, died Saturday at Shelby, Mont.

The one-time Alberta farm boy left college bent on a scholastic career, but the birth of Social Credit and its 1935 sweep into power in Alberta sharply changed his life and shot him into political prominence. He led the party for 16 years.

Mr. Low, who would have been 63 Jan. 8, had gone to Shelby, 26 miles from the international border, to meet a son, Eric, returning home for Christmas.

He had been ailing for several years. In November, 1955, he suffered a heart attack at Calgary, and on Jan. 1, 1957, he officially stepped down as national Social Credit leader and resigned as a school teacher at nearby Raymond.

He had been a Juvenile and family court judge here and at Medicine Hat since his resignation from active politics.

White Christmas Will Likely Prevail Over Most of Canada

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Just about wherever he goes in Canada tonight, Santa should feel right at home.

By tonight nearly all of the country will be in the grips of a cold snap that is fully old enough to be reminiscent of his off season home at the North Pole.

Even on the West Coast, where white Christmases nearly always are confined to dreams,

Today's Chuckle

An extravagance is anything a man buys that's of no earthly value to his wife.

THE WEATHER

Synopsis — Cold Arctic air will retain a strong grip on the Great Lakes but elsewhere mainly sunny conditions will prevail. For Christmas Day a southerly flow over the province will result in a return to more closely seasonal and moderating temperatures. A few periods of light snow are likely through Northern and Central Ontario but the possibilities seem rather remote for any snow of consequence through Southern Ontario.

residents may get a little white stuff in the form of heavy frosts.

Temperatures in Vancouver also are expected to keep within 10 degrees or so of zero for the Christmas period.

Central Canada got its first taste of the cold wave overnight. Snowflurries as a hint of it along with brisk winds produced near - blizzard conditions and hazardous travel in many parts of Ontario and Quebec Sunday.

In the Atlantic provinces snow that began overnight was expected to turn to rain today. But the cold was forecast to reach the region by tonight.

Across the country, air lines railways and bus companies all reported unusually heavy traffic as Canadians took advantage of the long weekend to travel.

Business at Toronto international Airport, Malton, was so brisk yesterday that one Transcanada Air Lines official quipped: "I don't know if there is going to be anyone left in town."

The Faces of Christmas

Deeds, Words Mirror Season

By GEORGE W. CORNELL
Associated Press Staff Writer

The faces of Christmas were showing up across the land today, as the celebrated anniversary neared.

By deeds and words, people traced their imprint on the occasion. And it was a mixed image, mirrored in little episodes here and there, in attitudes, circumstances and incidents.

There was the rushing woman shopper in Waterville, Me., who mistakenly piled armloads of gift purchases in the back seat of someone else's parked car, then drove home in her own, a similar model. A newspaper account of the unexplained cargo of packages enabled Mrs. Louis Carey to get them back.

In Providence, R.I., there was the buoyant and benevolent bus driver who veered off his route, in a burst of yuletide chivalry, to take passengers directly to their doors.

There was the pair of small boys, Peewee, 7, and Patty, 8, who got themselves locked in a Cambridge, Mass., department store overnight, in a world of whirring toys and goodies.

Next morning, they were found taken with treasures filled with candy, and one of them clomping about in a pair of huge, size-10 shoes.

But there wasn't only humor in the Christmas countenance. There were also empty chairs at family tables, and sometimes slim fare.

In Carmichaels, Pa., where 37 men died in a coal mine explosion three weeks ago, 45 children are without their fathers this Christmas, and 34 wives without their husbands.

But many families said they were going on, in their grief, with efforts to observe the day

LONGSHOREMEN TIE UP SHIPPING ALONG ATLANTIC

Ignore President's Postponement Plea

NEW YORK (AP)—A strike by longshoremen was tied up shipping operations all along the U.S. Atlantic and Gulf coasts.

President Kennedy's plea to postpone the walkout for 90 days went unheeded.

Some 81,000 members of the International Longshoremen's Association are involved in the strike, affecting major ports from Searsport, Me., to Brownsville, Tex.

The walkout began at 5 p.m. EST Sunday, the exact minute and 80-day federal court strike injunction against the ILA expired.

The government, acting on Kennedy's orders, obtained the injunction early last October to give the longshoremen 80 days to "cool off" under provisions of federal labor laws. The antidote was issued after the ILA pulled a four-day strike.

That strike, and this one, was both caused by the same contract dispute.

Key issue is the ship owners' demand that longshoremen cut their work gangs to 17 men from

British Papers Generally Are Cold to Polaris Deal

LONDON (Reuters)—British newspapers of all political persuasions are giving a generally cool reception to Prime Minister Macmillan's decision to accept the Polaris missile in place of the Skybolt as the basis of Britain's future nuclear deterrent.

Macmillan arrived back in British Sunday after his historic meeting in Nassau with President Kennedy.

A correspondent of the Manchester Guardian says the Conservative government's future will be determined by the decision.

"In political terms," the paper says, "the degree of British independence as a state possessing and controlling the use of its own political deterrent will be the Conservative party's test of the Nassau agreement and therefore a powerful, if not decisive, element in the stability of the Macmillan government."

The Labor Daily Herald says: "Despite the face-saving speeches, Mr. Macmillan has reached his Munich.

75 FATALITIES ACROSS CANADA DURING WEEKEND

Traffic Deaths Nearly 1 An Hour

By The Canadian Press

The deaths of 10 members of a Broughton, N.S., family when fire destroyed their farm home early today skyrocketed Canada's fatality toll for the first half of the long Christmas weekend.

A Canadian Press survey of accidental deaths showed 75 persons died between 6 p.m. local times Friday and 7 a.m. EST today. Most of these 31 were traffic victims, 13 died in fires, two were drowned and nine died in miscellaneous mishaps.

The only member of the Robert Bateman family to escape from the Broughton fire was Mrs. Bateman. The nine dead children ranged in age from five months to 11 years.

The road-death toll was just seven short of the total of 58 deaths predicted by the Canadian Highway Safety Council for the 30-hour period ending Wednesday midnight.

Quebec had the worst record with a traffic fatality toll of 13 in single accident near Chibougamau. There were six miscellaneous deaths for a total of 27.

Only Prince Edward Island and Newfoundland were fatality-free. Totals for the other provinces, with traffic deaths in brackets: Ontario 16 (13), British Columbia 8 (3), Manitoba 5 (3), Alberta 4 (4), Saskatchewan 3 (3), New Brunswick 2 (1), and Nova Scotia 11 (1).

Ontario and New Brunswick each reported a drowning, while B.C. had two fire deaths and Ontario one.

Britons Get Icy Christmas But No Snow

LONDON (Reuters) — Freezing temperatures and bright, sunny skies greeted Londoners, and most Britons, today as they hurried out to finish their Christmas shopping.

Sunday night was one of the coldest of the year in Britain and the cold snap seemed likely to last over Christmas, but there was no sign of the kind of White Christmas in most areas.

At dawn thermometers registered just below freezing and many roads in the London area and southeast of England were covered with patches of ice — a warning that Christmas Eve driving would be dangerous.

Because of the cold weather, banks and post offices have been directed to lay in extra supplies of shilling pieces for the many Londers who depend on shilling-in-the-slot meters for the gas and electricity needed to heat their rooms.

Swiss hoteliers were also helping Italian workers cut off by deep snow at Alpine buildings sites to get home for Christmas by flying them to valley railroad stations.

A helicopter also flew a priest to celebrate mass at Imfeld, southern Switzerland's highest village at 4,000 feet up and isolated for two weeks.

Crowded trains passed through the Saint Gothard Pass to Italy after a 48-hour avalanche blockage ended Sunday night.

Freedom Airlift Brings Men Home After 20 Months

$53,000,000 in Food, Medicine Given Castro

BULLETIN

MIAMI, Fla. (AP) — The first Pan American World Airline plane shuttling Cuban invading prisoners to the United States today landed at Homestead Air Force Base at 10:50 a.m. E.S.T. The remaining prisoners of Cuban Premier Castro were expected to be back in the U.S. by 4 p.m. today.

MIAMI, Fla. (AP) — A freedom airlift loaded new hundreds of Fidel Castro's liberated prisoners today for Christmas Eve flights to the United States and wildly joyous reunions with families they left 20 months ago for the Bay of Pigs invasion.

A full-speed-ahead operation went into action aimed at completing early in the day the job of moving the remainder of the 1,113 invasion captives to Florida and their anxiously waiting loved ones. The spectacular airlift flew 426 men to freedom from communists in Sunday's operations.

The airlift halted suddenly without explanation Sunday night after the last of four flights by Pan American World Airways DC-6s deposited its humans-for-goods cargo at Homestead Air Force Base. And a vigil kept throughout the day by many thousands of Cuban exiles had to be faced again on Christmas Eve.

But a determination to make Cuban relatives dreams come true quickly was evident in the day's schedule: Six planes flying into operation early in the morning, one after another. The first took off from Miami at 7 a.m. Others were down for 8, 9:15 and 9:30 a.m. departures. Two planes already were in Havana, the first due to leave with 104 prisoners aboard at 9 a.m.

All the pent-up tension of a long, prayerful campaign to free the 1,113 Cuban survivors exploded in a roaring storm of emotion as Cuban exiles got their first glimpses of returned young men brought in by a spectacular aerial shuttle.

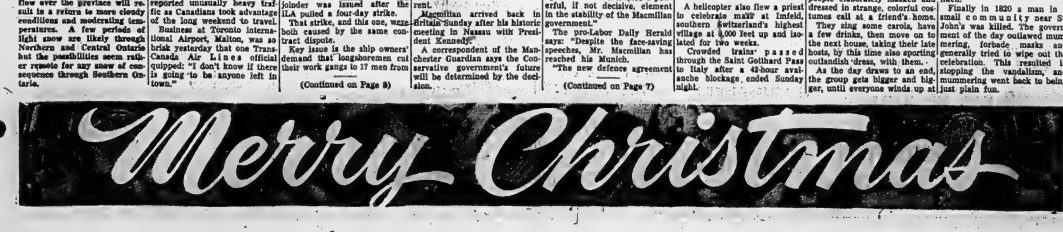
Mummering, Friendly Old Custom In Newfoundland, Dying Out

ST. JOHN'S, Nfld. (CP)—Gay young people dressed in weird costumes weave their way through the streets, laughing and singing, chanting Christmas carols and banging on doors for admittance.

It's a Christmas-time sight that's getting rare in Newfoundland — a friendly old custom slowly dying out.

Mummering, a sort of Hallowe'en at Christmas, has all but disappeared in the cities, flourishing in only a few remote Newfoundland outports. But even the cities still have an occasional group of mummers.

The celebrations start Christmas Day. A handful of young people elaborately masked and dressed in bright, colorful costumes call at a friend's home.



They sing some carols, have a few drinks, then move on to the next house, taking their late hosts, by this time also sporting outlandish dress, with them.

As the day draws to an end, the group gets bigger and bigger, until everyone winds up at the house with the biggest kitchen and the lively celebration, complete with carols and refreshments, goes on all night and maybe the next night too.

In the early days the mummers turned out plays, using the kitchen and other mock weapons to reproduce such battles as Wellington's struggle against Napoleon. But this original meaning of mummery has long since gone.

Mummering started in fun, but there was a time early in the last century when it degenerated into plain vandalism. About 60 years ago the night of fun became a favorite with young hoodlums, who wrought destruction on communities and frightened people they disliked.

Finally in 1920 a man in a small community near St. John's was killed. The government of the day outlawed mummering, forbade masks and generally tried to wipe out the celebration. This resulted in stopping the vandalism, and mummering went back to being just plain fun.

Walter Elliot Host to Staff At Annual Christmas Party

The Four Seasons Room at the Tops Motor Hotel was the setting for a very gay Christmas dinner party; an annual event for the staff of Elliott Motors (Belleville) Limited, their escorts and friends, given by Mr. Walter Elliott to show his appreciation for their work and loyalty during the year. There were approximately 150 employees and guests present, including Mr. Tom Davies, manager of G.M.A.C. Kingston, Branch; Mr. Fred Hester, representing Motors Insurance Corporation, Ottawa and Mr. Gord Jarvis of General Motors, Toronto.

Mr. Bryce Philp, vice president, master of ceremonies for the evening, extended a warm welcome to the guests, then introduced the members at the head table. A very hearty turkey dinner was served by the staff of the Tops, with music provided by the 'Continentals' of Belleville during the dinner and later for dancing.

One of the highlights of the evening was a presentation of gifts by Mr. Elliott to employees who had an unbroken period of employment with the company of 15 10 and 5 years. Mr. Fred Donohoe, parts manager and Howard Juby of the Service Dept. with 15 years service; Charles Muscleow and Ross Boyce, service with ten years; Gerald Brickman, Gerry Way, Fred Thibaudeau, Ann Powers and Alec Maguire with 5 years.

Mr. Elliott also presented a gift to Mr. and Mrs. Ron Clarke and Mrs. and Mrs. Allan Thompson, newlyweds since the last Christmas party.

Mr. Don Davies on behalf of the employees of Elliott Motors presented Mr. Elliott with a beautiful silver tea service.

Jim Trualsch on behalf of the sales department showed appreciation to the manager, Bryce Philp presenting him with a smart brief case.

Another highlight of the evening was the naming of the lucky winner who won a week's trip with his wife to Florida. As in the past, with low unit sales on a yearly increase, the company sponsored a sales contest for the Sales Department in order to promote used unit sales. The contest runs from January 1st to December 13th with a total of (23) thirty day Units to qualify along with the highest 30-day dollar volume. The lucky winner this year was Carman Flichett of Stirling.

The remainder of the evening was spent in dancing and cards. Two of the younger set, Barry Flindall and Mary Lipot, also provided a little entertainment on the side by doing the 'Limbo'.

Door prizes were won by Mr. and Mrs. Irvin Badgley, Les Rolfe and partner and Walter Elliott and partner.

Passing Driver Saves Life of Halloway Man

A young Halloway man may owe his life this Christmas to someone he never met.

Shortly after midnight Saturday night 20-year-old Raymond Emerson, was rushed to Belleville General Hospital suffering carbon monoxide poisoning after he was found asleep in his car by a passing motorist near Bellville.

Provincial police say Emerson apparently dozed off in his car at the side of Highway 14, just north of the Highway 401 overpass. A motorist spotted him in the car — with the engine still running — a short time later. The doors on Emerson's vehicle were locked and the man smashed a side vent to open the door.

Emerson, say police, was taken from the vehicle in a dazed condition.

Toronto Man Charged With Careless Driving

A Toronto man was charged with careless driving Saturday night after his car collided with a sanding truck at Highways 2 and 5.

Provincial police say the car, driven by Claude Riquito, 20, crashed into the rear of the truck owned by Leon Collins, R.R. 4, Belleville, sanding in the area for the Department of Highways.

Damage to the car was $500, to the truck, $10.

Two Are Hurt In 2-Car Crash Outside City

A Belleville couple were treated for minor injuries late last night after a two-car collision on Highway 14, just north of the Highway 401 overpass outside the city.

Provincial police say Mr. and Mrs. Lorraine Roberts, 65 Goldale Road, were treated for cuts at Belleville General Hospital after their car collided with an automobile driven by Donald Reid, 165 Dundas Street East.

Damage was extensive.

IN MEMORIAM

DARRAH — In loving memory of a dear son, brother, Norman, who passed away four years ago, December 25th, 1957.

He suffered in silence, when he was sore,
He never deserved what he went through before.

His end was sudden, his last thoughts unknown,
But he left a memory we proved to own.

—Ever remembered by mother, sleigh Laura, brother-in-law Verney and family.

HENDRICKS — In loving memory of our dear husband Leonard who passed away one year today December 24th, 1961.

No morning dawns, no night removes
But I think of you,
And left behind and very good,
But none replaces you.
Your place is empty as dead,
When I am all alone;
But the love I bred is very much.
The one I called my own.
Sadly missed by loving wife Gladys.

SEAMES — In loving memory of my dear father, George Arthur Seames, who passed away December 25th, 1956.

—Always remembered by son Joe, daughter-in-law Betty and grandchildren.

CULLODEN — In loving memory of our dear friend, Arthur Culloden, who passed away suddenly at his home as a result of accident December 24th, 1958.

A silent thought, a secret tear,
Keeps Art's memory ever dear;
Time takes away the edge of grief
But memory burns back every test.
—Sadly missed by Ken and Don.

FOSTER — In loving memory of our dear son, Bill Foster, who died December 24th, 1960.

Two years have passed since that accident
On this Christmas eve, when
To leave us and still wondering why.
One so young should have to die.
—Sadly missed and ever remembered by Mom and Dad.

Safe Driving Warning Has Paid Dividends

Police chief Walter Probert's warning-cum-request for safe driving over the holiday week-end had paid dividends up to Christmas Eve.

While the number of minor skirmishes between automobile drivers may have been up, the record of serious accidents had not been broken up to press-time.

Chief Probert earlier had warned motorists to drive with what he called the "Three Cs" in mind — Care, Courtesy and Co-operation.

Particularly, the chief said, did this apply in the case of youngsters and persons carrying parcels.

None of the city's younger residents, not one of its citizens bearing gifts had been stricken as the result of an automobile accident — to noon today.

And this keeps up we will have a satisfactory record for the yuletide," said the chief.

"But we hope it is maintained, since it is one of the sure — if silent ways — my department can wish the citizenry — a Merry Christmas."

Cuba Blockade Top Story in News in 1962

By The Canadian Press

Blockade of Cuba was the world's top news story of 1962.

President Kennedy's Oct. 22 announcement of a "quarantine," an action that led to withdrawal of Russian nuclear weapons from the Caribbean republic, was picked as Story of the Year by telegraph editors of daily newspapers in a Canadian Press poll.

In second place they put the Sept. 30 violent campaigning Negro James Meredith's enrolment at University of Mississippi.

Third spot went to Red China's invasion of India Oct. 20, leading to the ousting of Krishna Menon from Prime Minister Nehru's cabinet and Nehru's appeal to the West for help.

Top Canadian story was the Saskatchewan struggle between doctors and government over plan — nulsory medical health plan, climaxed by compromise July 23.

CHOSE 12 STORIES

The editors were asked to pick the top six world and Canadian news events of the year.

They chose forays into space for fourth and fifth spots in world news: Russia's team effort in August in which Nikolayev and Popovich circled the earth 64 and 48 times respectively; and John Glenn's three-round trip Feb. 20 as the first American to travel in orbit.

Their choice for sixth place was the Aug. 5 suicide of actress Marilyn Monroe.

As a close second in news imapct on Canada the editors picked the Dominion election of June 18. Their choice for third spot was the austerity program announced by Prime Minister Diefenbaker six days later.

They saw the story of the twenty-seventh year that Diefomide a ranking fourth, with the May 2 devaluation of the Canadian dollar, compounding foe-ensbrouded Grey Cup game, preceded by months-long argument over TV rights and rocket sixth.

Judge Thorson Returns Home After Wounding

OTTAWA (CP)—Mr. Justice J. T. Thorson, 73, president of the Exchequer Court of Canada and former counsel for Canadian men in Rio de Janeiro, was confined to bed Sunday at his home in suburban Rockcliffe.

Judge Thorson, still weak from bullet wounds in both thighs and loss of blood, returned here by air Saturday. His daily rounds were described by Dr. Peter Burton as "quite serious" and he is expected to undergo further medical examination by specialists here.

On arrival at Uplands Airport terminal Saturday afternoon, the wounded judge said in an interview: "I am thankful and lucky to be alive."

Descending in slippers from the transport department jetliner which had brought him from New York, the first last leg of the trip from Rio, he was greeted by his wife and other members of the family.

He was attacked by gunmen on Rio's Dona Marta Overlook Sunday, Dec. 16, while sightseeing with Mr. Justice Gerald Fauteux of the Supreme Court of Canada. Judge Fauteux rendered his valuables to the men but Judge Thorson grappled with one of the bandits and was shot.

NEW YORK (CP)—Sir Leslie Munro expressed Sunday the hope that the International Commission of Jurists that Mr. Justice J. T. Thorson of Ottawa is receiving from bullet wounds suffered in a holdup Dec. 16 in Brazil.

Mr. Justice Thorson, 73, suffered two thigh wounds when he resisted a robbery attempt by two armed bandits. The incident occurred after a work meeting in Rio de Janeiro of the International Commission of Jurists, at which Sir Leslie presided as its secretary-general.

Sir Leslie said: "The group extends its profound sympathy with Mr. Justice Thorson and Mrs. Thorson, deplores the occurrence and expresses its admiration of his conduct and its great relief at the indications he is recovering."

Reeve, Mrs. H. Hamilton Hosts at Turkey Dinner

Sidney township Reeve Harleigh Hamilton and Mrs. Hamilton last Monday evening were hosts to council members and Sidney township officials at a turkey dinner held at The Pines Motel.

Clerk of the township, Mr. Byron Harder, acted as master of ceremonies for the dinner party and program, noting that it was a pleasure to get together with members of the council and township officials, and their wives as guests of the reeve.

Reeve Hamilton is retiring from municipal life after 15 years on the council. He and Mrs. Hamilton were presented with a set of electric door chimes.

Thanking the guests for the present, both Mr. and Mrs. Hamilton assured they would always have happy memories of the past 13 years.

Reeve Hamilton said it was a pleasure to welcome members of the township organization, noting that it was seldom that the township "family" was able to be together.

He referred to the recent township sesquicentennial noting that it was unusual for a municipality to change reeves without an election.

EXPRESSES APPRECIATION

He expressed his appreciation for the co-operation received in the past years, noting that it had been a pleasure to have worked with so fine a group. He added a word of thanks to council members' wives for their co-operation and support while their husbands were looking after township business.

He recalled that with the exception of Mr. Lorne Hunt, township treasurer, he had had some part in hiring every official now in the service of the township.

Reeve-elect Gerald Irving said it had been a pleasure to work with Reeve Hamilton and wished him well for the future. He asked for the same co-operation as had been given Reeve Hamilton.

Also heard briefly were members of council and Alan Sprague, Sidney Hamilton solicitor, who said he was pleased to be a member of the township "family."

Russian Claims Englishman Beat Columbus by Century

NEW YORK (AP)—In four-teen hundred and ninety - two, Columbus sailed the ocean blue.

In nineteen hundred and sixty-two, the Russians say he was No. 2.

When it came to sailing to the new world, say Russian historians, Columbus was strictly a Christopher-come-lately.

Historian Samuel Varshavsky announced in Moscow he suspects that an Englishman, Nicholas Lynn, discovered Hudson Bay in 1360—132 years before Columbus landed westward.

Professor Henry F. Graff, chairman of Columbia University's department of history, dismissed the Russian claim today as "another propaganda scheme," adding:

"The Russian historians will have to come up with something more substantial than what they have, to kill the cherished belief that Columbus discovered America."

Here is what the Russians have come up with:

Following Varshavsky's claim broadcast by Moscow radio, the Soviet news agency Novosti distributed an article written by Russian historian David Tumanovsky, who said:

"A detailed study of Columbus' first voyage suggests that his fleet sailed not on the ocean as somebody else's heels . . . There is every ground for the conclusion that Columbus had predecessors. He used their information when setting out for the new world."

CITES RECORDS

Tumanovsky said he based his theory on records left by Columbus and that "the circumstances of Columbus' first trip show that the map and sailing direction used by Columbus contained precise information not only about the location of the new world islands but also about the routes both ways."

He says Columbus, before leaving on his journey, told King Ferdinand and Queen Isabella of Spain what he expected to find. Tuskernik cites a letter the royal couple wrote to Columbus after the latter's return.

"It seems to us that everything which you told us might be found has for the most part proved trustworthy, as if you had already seen everything before telling us about it."

Varshavsky, to back up his claim that Englishman Lynn may have discovered Hudson Bay in 1360, cites old writings which refer to a 14th - century Latin book entitled A Happy Discovery, Voluntarily Made from the 24th Parallel in the Pole.

The book itself has apparently not survived but has been quoted in other works. Many historians consider it pure fantasy but Varshavsky says he disagrees.

In picking up the gauntlet for Columbus, Graff said: "It is well known that there were a number of northern Europeans sailing in those general directions before Columbus made his discovery, and that Columbus relied heavily on information from other navigators.

But he added:

"When you put all the facts together as we know them, contemporary historians generally agree that Columbus discovered America."

PRESS CLAIM

RANGOON, Burma (AP) — Burma's military government is pressing the Soviet Union for payment of some $10,000,000 owed for rice shipping in 1954, the newspaper Hanthawaddy reports. The paper says Burma reluctantly agreed to accept-agricultural goods in settlement of cash. But when the first samples arrived, the Burmese balked because the quality was poor and the machines outdated.

Storms Whip Two Snowbelts Around Lakes

BUFFALO (AP)—The snowbelts east of Lakes Erie and Ontario continued today to be lashed by a wind-driven, whipped Christmas weekend snowstorm that made travel hazardous and knocked out power temporarily in some sections.

Eight fatalities in New York state were attributed, in part, to snow since the long weekend began at 8 p.m. Friday. It continues until midnight Tuesday.

The weather bureau said as much as 12 inches of snow and winds of up to 45 miles an hour would hit the snowbelt area before tapering off.

The squalls off Lake Erie battered coastal Chautauqua and southern Erie counties south of here Sunday and pelted Cattaraugus, Allegany, Genesee, Livingston and Wyoming counties inland.

Visibility was zero at times, and the wind caused severe drifting of snow. Authorities advised against unnecessary travel.

Main roads were reported open but slippery and snowpacked.

The snow depths averaged about seven inches in the hardhit areas at midnight.

Buffalo escaped the brunt of the storm and areas north of the city received a little snowfall.

At Snow Ridge in Turin, in the Tug Hill area southeast of Watertown, ski trophy presentations were wiped out by a two-blizzard which struck in mid-afternoon and sent enthusiasts scurrying for home.

Elsewhere in the United States icy air spread from Montana across the Middle West into the East and South. Temperatures were generally below zero from northern sections of the central plains into the middle Mississippi Valley. The 21 below in Drummond, Mont., was one of the lowest early morning readings.

Temperatures dropped into the 20s in eastern Tennessee and western North Carolina, with freezing marks in northern sections of Georgia and Alabama and in most of the interior sections of the Carolinas.

A.N.A.F. Weekly News

As these are the last notes for this year, the president and members of the executive wish to take opportunity to wish all the members and their friends and families a very Merry Christmas and a safe, healthy and Prosperous New Year and may they be many.

On account of the holiday rush, notes are scarce. The big New Year's Ball arrangements are all set, however, and tickets are still available but not too many, so be sure and get yours before it is too late. A big surprise awaits you and it is expected to please everyone and it is thought will be the only one of its kind in Belleville, this year.

Keep Sat., Dec. 8, 1963 available as that is the night to meet your candidates for office on the 1963 executive. Hear their views and air your own. It should be a lot of fun. It is hoped to make this an annual event and the members are invited to submit a name by which it may be known. Come on down and help make it a big evening. Refreshments will be served.

It is a great pleasure to report that our good Comrade Mitch Rashotte is feeling quite a lot better and is able to sit up and will be able to enjoy Christmas, even if it will not be as active as in the past. All comrades join in wishing him the season's best and a continued recovery.

Watch for the advertisement for the Big Dance in the Belleville Intelligencer. Be there for a wonderful time and to welcome in the New Year with your comrades, you couldn't be in better company.

So farewell 1962 and a big hello to 1963.

"The Night Before Christmas"

'Twas the night before Christmas when all through the house,
Not a creature was stirring, not even a mouse,
The stockings were hung by the chimney with care,
In hopes that Saint Nicholas soon would be there.

The children were nestled all snug in their beds,
While visions of sugarplums danced in their heads,
And mamma in her kerchief and I in my cap,
Had just settled down for a long winter's nap,

When out on the lawn there arose such a clatter,
I sprang from my bed to see what was the matter,
Away to the window I flew like a flash,
Tore open the shutters and threw up the sash.

The moon on the breast of the new-fallen snow,
Gave a lustre of midday to objects below,
When, what to my wondering eyes should appear,
But a miniature sleigh, and eight tiny reindeer:
With a little old driver, so lively and quick,
I knew in a moment it must be St. Nick.

More rapid than eagles his coursers they came,
And he whistled and shouted and called them by

"Now, Dasher! Now, Dancer! Now, Prancer! and Vixen!
"On, Comet! On, Cupid! On, Donner and Blitzen!

To the top of the porch, to the top of the wall!
Now, dash away, dash away, dash away all!"
As dry leaves that before the wild hurricane fly,
When they meet with an obstacle mount to the sky,
So up to the house-top the coursers they flew
With a sleigh full of toys and St. Nicholas too.

And then in a twinkle, I heard on the roof,
The prancing and pawing of each little hoof.
As I drew in my head and was turning around,
Down the chimney St. Nicholas came with a bound.

He was dressed all in fur, from his head to his foot,
And his clothes were all tarnished with ashes and soot;
A bundle of toys he had flung on his back,
And he looked like a peddler just opening his pack.
His eyes how they twinkled! His dimples how merry,
His cheeks were like roses, his nose like a cherry,
His droll little mouth was drawn up like a bow,
And the beard on his chin was as white as the snow.

The stump of his pipe he held tight in his teeth,
And the smoke, it encircled his head like a wreath.
He had a broad face and a little round belly,
That shook when he laughed, like a bowl full of jelly.

He was chubby and plump, a right jolly old elf,
And I laughed when I saw him, in spite of myself,
A wink of his eye, and a twist of his head,
Soon gave me to know I had nothing to dread.

He spoke not a word, but went straight to his work,
And filled all the stockings; then turned with a jerk
And laying his finger aside of his nose,
And giving a nod, up the chimney he rose.

He sprang to his sleigh, to his team gave a whistle,
And away they all flew like the down on a thistle.
But I heard him exclaim as he drove out of sight,
"Happy Christmas to all and to all a good night."

More Wonderful Than Santa

BY SYDNEY J. HARRIS

No, Virginia, there is no Santa Claus.
There is no ruddy fat man with merry eyes and white beard, who comes down the chimney at night to reward little boys and girls for being good.

Because, you see, Virginia, all over the world there are millions of little boys and girls who have been as good as good can be — but they get no toys, and sometimes they awake on Christmas morning without enough food to eat.

There are fathers and mothers, Virginia, who have been appointed by God to love their children — and they give them love, although they cannot always give them presents.

And these fathers and mothers are more wonderful and magical and mysterious than Santa Claus could ever be. They bring something infinitely more precious than dolls or trains to their children — they bring the mark of God's love down to every boy and girl.

And, sometimes, even these fathers and mothers are taken away. But there are others in the world, divinely touched, who look after these children and share with them their meagre possessions.

Compared with this miracle of care and tenderness, Santa Claus is a pale figure of fantasy. For he, you see, only rewards boys and girls who have been "good". But in the eyes of God, and parents, all boys and girls are truly good at heart.

Presents at Christmas are fun, of course, but do you imagine, Virginia, that the children with the most presents are the happiest ones?

When there is little love in a home, there is little reward — and without merriment, the doll is dust and the train is tin.

All over the world, oh Christmas morning, children will be waking up without a visit from Santa Claus — or with a gift you would hardly look at, an orange, an extra slice of bread, a frayed piece of string.

Yet if there is someone who loves them, who frolics with them and laughs with them, they have a greater gift than any fat man in a tight red suit could possibly bring them.

There are fathers who work for their children, and mothers who sing to their children, and God who gives fathers the strength to work when they are weak, and mothers the spirit to sing when they are sad.

No, Virginia, there is no Santa Claus — there does not need to be.

A Shocking Sentence

The world will be shocked by the action of a court at Rabat, Morocco, in sentencing three members of the Bahai sect to death.

Though accused of rebellion, disorder and attack on public security, it was made painfully plain that their real "crime" consisted of their religion. King Hassan II told a press conference that "Islam does not accept the Bahai sect or other sects which are true heresy," though Hebrew and Christian religions are recognized and can be freely practised.

There can be no doubt that those who compete in Wimbledon will display their dainty derrieres in white panties today. From a spectator standpoint the ladies will be as indistinguishable as a flock of white-breasted sea-gulls.

No more will the crowded stands be startled with fancy lace like Gussie Moran wore in 1949. There will be no more 15-year girls briefs displayed by Carol Fageros.

It was getting to be that people would play tennis games not knowing who won — and caring little or less. That was bad.

But when Maria Buena of Brazil wound up last season during her match with her athletic hips covered with a pair of shocking pink panties under a twist dress it was the last straw. The sartorial display was voted an astounding success. Maria lost, but few of those who were on hand thought that mattered much.

Last week referee Col. John Legg of Wimbledon announced that from now on the tethers of the ladies must be covered with pristine white to do what these are supposed to do. He said they "make the crowd restless and this in turn upsets the player."

From now on the Wimbledon darlings will present only their skills and unfrilled and monotonous expanses of white to a climate which has become accustomed to more exciting things.

Toronto reports that two of its three burlesque houses have been closed by bailiffs. Strippers have no place to strip. As a result, some of them have already felt the pinch of hunger—through their clothes, of course. It is sad, at this season of the year, to read of such unbare-able hardships.

Overlook Goo In Fish Stew

VANCOUVER Sun

Those Frenchmen fled and died.

No one, they said, outside Marseilles could make a real bouillabaisse. For why? Because only there can you catch a rascasse. And what's a bouillabaisse? Just the most wonderful stew in the world. A fish stew. And what's a rascasse? Well . . .

"A fish that looks like an old shoe

"But puts such a wonderful goo in the stew."

Or so said the French poet (loosely translated) and William Makepeace Thackeray and most of the literary gourmands of the last century or two. Oh, people all over the world have been building bouillabaisses ever since. Even here. But not real ones, said all those Frenchmen. No rascasse.

Well, they lied. In a way. We weren't building bouillabaisses. But we have something just as good. We weren't putting them in to make the real original goo in the stew.

First a New York ichthyologist had his doubts. Identified the rascasse by its scientific name, about three feet long. Said New York fishermen had been throwing them overboard for years. So we went down to the Stanley Park aquarium. Oh, yes, said curator Murray Newman, reading the three-foot name like a menu for scientific spaghetti. Took us out to a tank and introduced us.

To whom? To the copper rockfish.

In other words, to the common, garden or small boy's string-and-safety-pin "Just rock cod" makes Dr. Newman shudder. Highly unscientific. Highly indefinite as far as particular scale here and a particular spike there goes. But still, so far as fish stew goes . . . bouillabaisse, we called it. Well, so it was. But as for the "rascasse" is equally indefinite. Rock cod? Rascasse. There you are.

Of course, even our cooking editor does not put rock cod in her bouillabaisse recipe. So we never ate bouillabaisse. And British Columbians for years have been faking up imitations of the world's greatest fish stew while throwing back the real ingredient.

Moral — Ignorance is a great waste of fish.

Watch Aces, Not Laces

Barrie Observer

Wimbledon, the Delphic Oracle of lawn tennis, has spoken and given the game back to the players. Not racquets, balls, nets and serious things.

It has taken it away from designers of weapons of frilly things and returned it to those who swing their heads from side to side as the ball whizzes in the white ball shuttle back and forth.

From now on, as far as Wimbledon is concerned, the game will become a sport again. No more will it be dominated by those whose interest in tennis has been weaned away from its frills in wonderful what the girls will be wearing rather than who will win.

From now on the ladies who compete in Wimbledon will display their dainty derrieres in white panties today. From a spectator standpoint the ladies will be as indistinguishable as a flock of white-breasted sea-gulls.

GLEANINGS FROM OUR FYLES OF BYGONE YEARS

December 24th, 1932

The greatest of festivals of the Christian year is at hand — Christmas. And in a few hours people will be caught up in the full contagion of the spirit of Christmas Day which begins somewhere about or after dawn. But Christmas is a day that starts directly when Christmas Eve ends. In many churches this time is one of great spiritual significance in the glory of the coming of the natal day of One who has transformed history and human society.

On this day adults are content to be led by the children. Ordinarily adults instruct the children. On this day the young teach the old the most beautiful lessons. A little child leads them; what is more emblematic of the ideal society and civilization? What lessons of kindliness and generosity does it not teach? They call for little effort. As a brief respite among the toil and sacrifices we shall be called upon to make, that the very foundation of civilization and the basic principles of Christianity may survive, let us keep Christmas in our homes. Let us bring cheer to the children.

The religious significance of the day is not lost in this form of celebration; the spirit of Christmas is catching. Once one is thoroughly imbued therewith, it cannot be laid aside for it is something that lives from childhood to age, from century to century. Such a festival binds the human heart by ties that cannot be broken.

Sunday Film Censorship

Ottawa Journal

Now that Sunday has been voted open to commercial motion pictures and other entertainment, Mayor Whitton proposes setting up a board to see that the only motion pictures shown on Sunday are those that, in the opinion of the board are suitable for Sunday showing. The Mayor suggested, for example, that a film would be approved and a Brigitte Bardot film rejected.

Having opposed commercial entertainment on Sunday, The Journal admires Mayor Whitton's desire to keep Sunda as much like other days as possible. But . . . .

If a theatre were showing Hamlet, would a film which the board found unsuitable for Sunday, the theatre operator would either have to close down on Sunday, and lose the Sunday business to which everybody else has access, or bring in a special film for Sunday showing. His contracts with film distributors might make the latter difficult. But even if it could be arranged it would still be unfair to substitute film here in time we have it viewed and judged by the board. And if the substitute film were rejected he would have to bring in another and have it judged, and so on. For the board could hardly reject a film it had not seen.

And there would be some sticky questions of principle.

Before the board could judge films it would have to set up some standard of decency or morality to judge them by. So when the board rejected a film it would be saying that, by its standard, the film was indecent or immoral. Thus this system would imply that while it is wrong to show certain films on Sundays, it is all right to show them on Saturday nights.

The question before the voters on election day was whether Sunday was to keep its special character or to become just another day of the week, insofar as commercial entertainment is concerned. The majority of voters decided that in this respect Sunday was to be just another day. Can we now arrange for screening Sunday entertainment that will be in the special character of the day? It seems unlikely.

Strictly Personal
Will There Be A Second Crucifixion?

BY SYDNEY J. HARRIS

If there should be, on Christmas night, a second coming — would it there not be soon a second crucifixion?

And this time, not by the Romans or the Jews, but by those who proudly call themselves Christians?

I wonder. I wonder how we today would regard and treat this man with his strange and frightening and "impractical" doctrines of human behavior and relationships. Would we believe and follow, as we did when the masses of people in his day believed and followed?

Would not the militarists among us assail him as a cowardly pacifist because he urges us not to resist evil?

Would not the nationalists among us attack him as a dangerous internationalist because he tells us we are all of one flesh?

Would not the wealthy among us castigate him as a troublemaking radical because he bars the rich from entering the kingdom of heaven?

Would not the liberals among us dismiss him as a dangerous vagabond because he advises us to take no thought for the morrow, to lay up no treasures upon earth?

Would not the ecclesiastics among us denounce him as a ranting heretic because he cuts through the cords of ritual and commands us only to love God and our neighbors?

Would not the sentimentalists among us deride him as a cynic because he warns us that the way to salvation is narrow and difficult?

Would not the Puritans among us despise and revile him because he eats and drinks with publicans and sinners, preferring the company of harlots, beggars and harlots to that of "respectable" church members?

Would not the sensual among us scorn him because he fasts for 40 days in the desert, neglecting the needs of the body?

Would not the proud and important among us laugh at him when he instructs the twelve disciples that he who would be "first" should be "last," and he who take the role of the least and serve all?

Would not the worldly-wise and educated among us be aghast to hear that we cannot be saved except we become as children, and that a little child shall lead us?

Would not each of us in his own way find some part of this man's saying and doing to be so threatening to our ways of life, so much at odds with our vested habits, that we could not tolerate him for long?

Need to Speak Many Tongues

Brantford Expositor

There is a sort of legend that Europeans (and the British people of the British) are natural — born linguists, and speak up to eight different languages. This is largely fiction, of course, but it is true that far more conventional Europeans speak languages other than their own than do most people who speak native tongue is English. And that does not apply to residents of the British Isles alone.

The main reason for this is not so much a gift or liking for languages as the need for business necessity of doing so. Europe is a patchwork of countries with many tongues, and the ability to speak reasonably well the language of those with whom one does business is an obvious asset.

Britain's pending entry into the European Common Market has given impetus to an educational drive along this line. While many alert Britons are linguistically adept, many more are not. They seem to cling to an old and lazy and unjustifiably "superior" notion that if anyone wishes to hold converse with them they will learn English, not vice versa.

This theory is going out of date. At the same time it is being realized that the arch-orthodox methods of learning is an additional language or two are not good enough in this fast-moving age.

So the European Cultural Fund (United Kingdom), a branch of an organization having headquarters in Amsterdam, is trying to speed up the process. It has launched in Britain, a TV course, a project which provides a concentrated course in any chosen language, and this course has a duration of only five weeks (provided you really work at it). It operates on the latest audiovisual teaching principles which have proven effective on the Continent and elsewhere.

It would be a good idea if ECF would set up shop in Canada, too. This is (theoretically and officially) a bilingual country, but how many "English" Canadians speak French, as against the comparatively large number of "French"- by in English) on the subject.

To Your Good Health
If You Get Trench Mouth See Your Dentist at Once

By JOSEPH G. MOLNER, M.D.

The basic treatment today is the same as that in the days when I had a good deal of contact with the disease: Cleaning up the infected areas of the gums, removing debris whether trapped food particles or calculus (tartar) along with the use of a foaming agent — hydrogen peroxide or sodium perborate.

Where the infection has had a chance to penetrate more deeply into the tissues, penicillin is used, but as told by dental experts that this or other antibiotics will not permanently end the trouble unless the cleaning-out process also is performed.

Treated promptly, Vincent's angina can be cleared up in a short time, say two or three weeks. Neglected, it can lead to loss of teeth and the infection can spread to other tissues of the body area.

So however it manages to attack, the basic burden of my song remains the same. Don't dawdle, and don't try to treat it all by yourself. Get dental care.

Dear Dr. Molner: What is the best way for kids to stop from wearing shoes that are too tight, too short or too wide. What do you say? — Mrs. B.

Tight shoes, yes; short shoes, yes. Too wide? No.

A too-wide pair irritation of a joint, usually the big joint of the big toe. People who go barefoot however, and for hundreds of people who wear shoes that are too wide. There has to be pressure from the joint out of normal position.

Dear Dr. Molner: We are girl cheer leaders for our high school's basketball team. We recently heard that such strenuous activity might ruin the female internal (reproductive) organs. Is this true?

No, it won't harm a thing — and where do these fantastic scare stories come from, anyway?

THE PACKSACK

—by GREGORY CLARK

The word holiday, as almost everybody knows, comes from "holy day" and carries us back to the days when religion provided our forebears with about the only organized entertainment in an otherwise dreary existence. Holy days were for prayer and religious processions, of course. It was for that our ancestors were excused a day's work. But it is a great pity it has brought forth not only the finest display materials of the church, but the noblest of the many sites enjoined in the pageant. There churches reserved for holy days their best music and most impressive ceremonial. Holy days were something to look forward to.

It is difficult to pin down the date upon which holy day became holiday. Now the word holiday has hardly any holy connotation whatever. But of one thing we may be sure. In all the history of mankind, no processions of pageants of any kind can compare for cost, splendor, excitement and universal participation with the holiday of modern Christmas.

Question: how conscious are we candidly, of what it is all about?

Canadians who speak English? And can we afford to stop at French when so many of our newer citizens speak, as their native tongue, Dutch, German, Italian, Ukrainian, Hungarian, etc?

We could do far more for our desired national unity by learning languages than through all the high-sounding political and constitutional talk we hear.

Zorin Removed as Soviet Delegate to United Nations

By GEORGE SYVERTSEN

MOSCOW (AP)—Valerian A. Zorin, veteran hard-line Russian negotiator tripped by the Kremlin's softline switch in the Cuban crisis, was removed Sunday as Soviet delegate to the United Nations.

Nikolai T. Fedorenko, until recently ambassador to Japan, was named his successor, Tass news agency reported.

In announcing the change, Tass mentioned no new assignment for Zorin and left unclear whether Zorin's rank as a deputy foreign minister was affected. When a senior Soviet official loses his rank, this usually is made clear.

At the UN, acquaintances of Zorin suggested health might be a factor in the change. They said Zorin was tired and seemed somewhat unsure of himself at a press conference Saturday reviewing the UN general assembly session.

Fedorenko, 50, is a Far East ern affairs expert who also has served in the Soviet Embassy in Peking.

The standing of the 60-year-old Zorin apparently suffered because of the Cuban crisis. In the United Nations, he denied U.S. charges in October that Soviet missile bases were being built in Cuba, only to have Premier Khrushchev admit their existence shortly afterwards.

Zorin also was overshadowed in the negotiations that followed in the United Nations. The Soviet Union sent First Deputy Foreign Minister Vasily Kuznetsov, known among Westerners as more of a soft-line diplomat First Deputy Premier Anastas I. Mikoyan also took part in the talks after a lengthy stay in Cuba.

Zorin has ranked with Foreign Minister Andrei Gromyko at the front of Soviet diplomacy. A special in European affairs, Zorin was ambassador to Czechoslovakia in 1945-48 and engineered the Communist coup there in February, 1948.

20, saying a larger number is "featherbedding." The ILA says it will not "negotiate our men out of business."

Loading and unloading of ships moved at a frenzied pace Sunday in an effort to get the vessels on their way before the 5 p.m. strike deadline.

SOME BEAT DEADLINE

A steady stream of ships—the coast guard put the number at 35, unusually high for a Sunday —put to sea from New York before the strike began.

How long will the strike last? "Who knows?" said David Alston, an ILA international vice-president and boss of 7,000 longshoremen at Hampton Roads, Va. "We've just now pulled the plug out of the barrel."

Even before the strike deadline, the United States Lines announced cancellation of two sailings this week—a Caribbean cruise of the liner America, scheduled for Wednesday, and the trans-atlantic crossing of the liner United States, set for Thursday.

Fifteen hours before the walkout started, President Kennedy's message asking for a postponment was read to negotiators for the ILA and the New York Shipping Association, which represents 125 American and foreign-flag firms.

Kennedy, saying a dock strike would choke the economy and cut the nation's lifelines with the rest of the world," appealed for a 90-day delay to give a presidential board time to study the disputed contract issues and hold hearings on them.

But Thomas W. Gleason, the ILA's chief negotiator and executive vice-president, told Kennedy in a telegram rejecting the proposal:

"Any additional extensions would only prolong the situation and in our opinion would be fruitless."

Governor of Michigan's Win Personal Not Political One

LANSING, Michigan (AP)—Years ago, when a boy named George Romney needed the price of admission to a basketball game, he cast around for something to sell, settled on light globes, ("everybody needs light globes") and went from house to house peddling them.

"It seemed the natural thing to do," he says today.

Having discovered selling, when he was about 14, Romney has been selling ever since—aluminum, automobiles, community projects, religion (as a missionary) and ideas, especially ideas.

His latest triumph in the art of persuasion was to convince 1,420,000 voters in Michigan that he would make a good governor. Last month, he defeated the incumbent, Democrat John Swainson, a native of Windsor, Ont., by 80,000 votes out of the total 2,800,000 cast. He points out that this margin was almost identical with the number of "citizens"—one of his favorite words—who volunteered to work in his campaign.

The slim victory ended 14 years of Democratic occupancy of the governor's office in Lansing.

It obviously was a personal, not a party, triumph. Romney was the only Republican on the administrative ticket to win.

So Romney, 55, now stands in the charmed, circle of men who are considered potential Republican nominees for president in 1964—Governor Nelson Rockefeller of New York, Senator Barry Goldwater of Arizona and governor-elect William Warren Scranton, of Pennsylvania.

Regulator Key Member of Battery Circuit

By EUGENE B. MILMOE

The generator regulator is often a forgotten member of the battery circuit. One motorist — and this is not a rare case — recently related that he bought two new batteries within a few months before a bad regulator was uncovered as the true culprit.

The regulator's sole job is to control the generator charge rate according to battery requirements. If the battery is low, it automatically boosts the rate until the battery is well charged. When the battery is fully charged, the regulator will slow down the charging rate, keeping voltage within safe limits. The regulator accomplishes this via electrical resistance which is cut into and out of the generator field circuit, depending on battery needs. It's an efficient unit which usually gives long trouble-free service, but is not guaranteed forever. So when a good or new battery acts up, keep the regulator in mind.

From M.A.: "On a car with power steering, can tire condition affect the way the way the steering comes back after a turn?"

(A) If tires are soft — e.g., underinflated — recovery on turns will certainly not be up to par.

D.P. writes: "My car has standard shift, and the clutch constantly slips out of second gear. Could this be due to the shift mechanism or to the clutch itself? It's a '52."

(A) Chances are its due to worn clutch gear teeth.

C.W. says: "My stop lights won't work when the brakes are applied. I checked the bulbs in a neighbor's car and they are OK. I also put in a new fuse and cleaned both sockets. Would you say the trouble is in the wiring?"

(A) It's possible, but you've overlooked a more likely cause — a defective stop light switch which is concealed at the brake master cylinder).

From H.L.: "When my car wouldn't start, a service station man came and disconnected the fuel line at the carburetor, and found there was only a trickle of fuel coming through when the engine was cranked. On his recommendation I agreed to a rebuilt fuel pump . . . but couldn't this trouble have been caused by a clogged pump-to-carburetor line?"

(A) Yes . . . or a partially blocked tank-to-pump line . . . but a new pump alone wouldn't cure it.

Bethlehem-Bound Pilgrims Cross Quickly Into Jordan

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

About 3,000 Christian Arabs from Israel and 2,000 Bethlehem - bound foreign Christian pilgrims crossed from Israel into Jordan today in "the smoothest ever" Yuletide crossing.

This description of the first three hours of the annual flow across the no man's land was made by an Israeli official. Other Israeli officials at the Mandelbaum Gate in Jerusalem said it was a record day for at the number of pilgrims crossing as well as for the speed with which this was handled.

A Jordanian official said "there were no difficulties this year." However, 360 names of would-be border crossers had been removed from Jordanian lists, barring them from entry.

The foreign pilgrims went to celebrate Christmas at the small Judean town of Bethlehem, scene of the first Yuletide. The Christian Arabs were visiting Jordanian relatives and friends from whom they are separated during the rest of the year by Arab-Israeli hostility.

Many of them carried gifts of oranges, olive oil and medicine for their hosts. They will return across the lines Tuesday night with presents of their own from those they have visited.

POPE ADVANCES MASS

At Vatican City, Pope John planned his Christmas Eve midnight mass two hours early so the aged and infirm could follow it over the Vatican radio.

The 81-year-old pontiff, who himself was seriously ill a month ago with a stomach disorder and anemia, was to celebrate mass in his private chapel.

Pope John announced he will pay a Christmas Day visit to a children's hospital in Rome's Janiculum Hill, about a mile from the Vatican.

At Sandringham, England's Princess Anne read one of the nine lessons at a carol service attended by her parents and other members of the Royal Family.

The 12-year-old princess read the second lesson from the Book of Genesis. The West Newton parish church was crowded by some 200 villagers. The Royal Family is spending Christmas at the Queen's Sandringham estate.

MANY LEAVE LONDON

More than 60,000 people left London airport in 48 hours to spend Christmas on the continent. It was a record number.

In Peking, Christmas greetings in Chinese characters and nativity scenes decorated the churches where 20,000 Christians will celebrate Christmas with midnight masses and special service.

Florist shops were selling Christmas trees, set at a price of up to 120 yuan (about $55) each, and in some stores there were small models of Santa Claus.

300 Volunteers Fail to Turn Up New Clues

NIAGARA-ON-THE-LAKE Ont. (CP) — A search by 300 volunteers for 15-year-old Rudolph Nuss, missing since Dec. 9, has failed to turn up any new clues to the boy's whereabouts.

"But we're not finished yet," said Richard Gorham of Niagara Falls, organizer of the search. "As soon as the snow clears we'll concentrate our efforts in the area where Rudy is thought to have done some target shooting."

The boy took his 22-calibre rifle into the woods on the day of his disappearance. Empty 22 shells were found by one of the first search parties in the area, 15 miles north of Niagara Falls.

Mr. Gorham said he thinks the boy was a victim of foul play. He plans to use a mine detector in an attempt to find the rifle.

Belleville Jews Celebrate Ancient Festival of Lights

Christmas is not the only festival being celebrated in Belleville tomorrow. Chanuka, The Festival of the Lights, began Friday, and continues through to next Saturday. The festival celebrates the victory of Judas Maccabee and a few officers over King Antiochus; a tyrant who had conquered Jerusalem and desecrated the temple.

After Maccabee's victory, the Jews found that there was just one day's supply left of the sacred oil, used to fuel a sacred lamp. The lamp, by tradition, should have been kept burning continuously and eight days were required to refine a fresh supply of oil. By a miracle though, the one day's supply of oil lasted for the eight days, and the lamp was kept burning.

In celebration each year one candle is lighted on the first day in Chanuka, in an eight-branched candle stick called a Menorah. On the second day, two candles are lighted, and so on until eight candles are burned on the eighth day. The festival approximates Christmas in more than the date; it is a traditional time for exchanging gifts.

Adeste Fidelis

BY HELEN WHITMER GARNER

George Bartlett was disgusted with the wind that howled around the building, with the snowflakes that he could see through the plate glass windows, above all he was disgusted with himself. Why hadn't he gone through on the train instead of waiting for Ed Gordon to pick him up in this God-forsaken place? He knew why. It was because he didn't have the nerve to tell Jacqueline that he'd failed. He had a hunch that it would mean the end of everything between them. Jacqueline didn't have much time for failures. Right now in his mind's eye, he could see her getting ready for a party and he was pretty sure that Jim Crandall would be in attendance. Jim hadn't failed to get a big job. He was a key man in his company at the age of twenty-seven.

His clear, beautiful tenor rang out in utter self-forgetfulness.

George was so occupied with his gloomy thoughts that he didn't see the brisk little woman come through the swinging door, cross the lobby and say something to the hotel clerk.

AN INVITATION

"Anybody in here want to go Christmas caroling?" The clerk addressed the entire room.

Three men got up from their chairs, grinning sheepishly. George got up, too. Why not? He'd rather sing than do anything else.

The little woman shook hands with each of the volunteers. "We'll meet at seven thirty in the church just three blocks up the street," she said.

"That's Sarah Mitchell, wife of a doctor here in town," the clerk explained after she had gone. "Used to be a church soloist in Philadelphia. Always comin' in here to get men to help out in the choir of her little church. Hope you fellows enjoy yourselves."

At seven-thirty George and the other men walked up the street. At the church they found Sarah Mitchell, the pastor, his wife and daughter, and fifteen or twenty singers.

The daughter, Martha came up to say something to her mother. She wore a little black poke bonnet with a string of pearl beads around the brim for trimming. The glowing translucent quality of the pearls was reflected in her clean white skin.

There was an aura of fellowship about the group that enveloped the strangers as they stepped out into the sparkling cold of the night. In the beginning, George sang with restraint, but with the strains of "O, Come All Ye Faithful," his clear, beautiful tenor rang out in utter self-forgetfulness. One by one the other singers stopped to listen to him.

"You're a grand opera star, aren't you?" Sarah Mitchell asked.

"No, just a would be," George answered.

"There are compensations," Sarah answered. "I gave up a career for love and I've never regretted it. After all, the footlights are transitory."

George nodded. "Perhaps," he said tersely.

He urged the others to join with him in the singing. They carolled at the judge's stately mansion, at homes of wealth and where there was poverty, hunger and sickness.

It was almost midnight when they finished and went into the basement of the little church where Sarah served coffee and cake. In the atmosphere of companionship George found himself telling the others of his failure to attain grand opera in New York.

"There's always another time," the pastor's wife said.

"There are compensations in failure," Sarah Mitchell added.

"You'll sing Adeste Fidelis at our midnight service tomorrow, won't you?" Martha asked.

Well, why not? Why not stay? Jacqueline and Jim Crandall, their cocktail parties, their brittle, sophisticated conversation seemed very far away. George looked at the violet eyes under the little poke bonnet. He was quite sure that the interest he felt was reflected in those eyes.

BULLETINS FROM BIRDLAND

By WINIFRED E. WILSON

TIME KEEPERS

If you have a feeding tray and also keep track of the arrival and departure of the various migrants each year, you will agree that birds carry both watches and calendars. As these convenient gadgets are not visible they must somehow be built in.

At dusk many patrons come regularly to our feeding tray, evidently wanting to dine before complete darkness impedes foraging. This is understandable. But we cannot altogether comprehend the regularity with which certain individuals arrive daily at 4 a.m. now, by 6 a.m. Yet such is their habit. We recognize them partly by their looks but largely by their little eccentricities which we have learned to know. One always approaches from the right, lands on a nearby branch, then jumps to the tray; another bird shows up at the same hour and we are convinced each possesses a watch — carefully hidden.

How do coastal birds discover the right moment when the tide will be suitable for picking up sea food that has been washed ashore? Yet day after day they return from long, inland excursions "on the dot". How do black-crowned night herons know when to leave their daytime treetop roosts for their evening excursion to their waterside feeding grounds? They always get there for their supper say something to the hotel clerk.

Toys Not Different For Children in Other Lands

What kind of toys do children in foreign countries like? Pretty much the same as kids in America.

For instance, some popular toys in France last Christmas were a Davy Crockett watch and a cowboy outfit of the type worn by a leading TV star. For the girls, dolls of course, and miniature household appliances.

The best foreign market for French toys last year — the United States. Best export items: boxwood chessmen; wooden darts with turkey-feather tails and steel points; perfect-scale miniature doll prams; and dolls themselves.

He Missed On 'Carol'

Historians often credit Charles Dickens' immortal "Christmas Carol" as being perhaps the most effective single force behind England's return to the observance of Christmas. Yet, Dickens did not consider it his greatest work, nor was it the best seller during his lifetime.

The most popular of Dickens' stories in his day was "The Cricket on the Hearth." The story of a father who tries to shield his blind daughter from the realities of life. "The Cricket" made its appearance in 1845 and was an immediate success. It sold twice as fast as the now-familiar story of Scrooge and Tim. Less than a month after "The Cricket" reached bookstands, dramatic versions of it were playing in 12 prominent London theatres.

Despite the immediate success of "The Cricket" and the relative popularity of "Christmas Carol," Dickens did not believe either to be his greatest work. His personal favorite was "The Chimes," which, he told friends "would knock 'the Carol' out of the field.

Dickens, of course, was wrong. "The Chimes" and "The Cricket" have each taken a back seat to "The Christmas Carol," the cheerful Christmas story of Tiny Tim and his friends.

Puzzle Of Bethlehem

The exact route that Mary and Joseph followed in travelling from Nazareth to Bethlehem is not known.

One route led along the seacoast and through the plain of Sharon, but it was shunned by pious travellers as much as possible because of heathen cities and rowdy travellers.

A second route, the shortest, was via the fruitful plains of Esdraelon into the mountains of Samaria and through Shechem and Bethel. Although steep, the road was not too bad. But Jews had little use for Samaritans, and vice versa, so this route most likely was not chosen by Mary and Joseph.

The Jordan route, which descended into the Jordan valley and followed the river around Jericho, was favored by the majority of Galilean travellers. This route, fairly level, was even then steeped in Jewish history.

Whichever the route, Mary and Joseph travelled nearly 100 miles to seek shelter in the lonely stable where the Child Jesus was born.

Holiday Season Time for Ulcers

The holiday season approaches and with it comes candy, fun and merriment for children. For adults it usually brings over-indulgence in rich foods and spirits, shopping worries and also — bills. While the total effect for children is the happiness-highpoint of the year, for many adults the holiday season means tensions, gastric distress and debt.

It is not coincidental that the incidence of peptic ulcers takes a gradual upturn in October and remains higher than normal through the holiday season. There is little doubt in the minds of many medical investigators that the excesses of the winter holidays are contributing factors in the seasonal bumper crop of ulcers.

HARD TO CONTROL

Many peptic ulcers could be controlled if the victim were to restrict his diet to bland, uninteresting foods — a task most difficult to achieve when the rest of the family is enjoying those huge and super Thanksgiving, Christmas and New Year feasts. Another preventive measure would be a more relaxed pace — almost an impossibility when Christmas shopping must be done and bills must be paid. Instead, most ulcer patients will turn to medical help.

Consequently, doctors will be prescribing more drugs to cure and relieve ulcers in the next four months than at any other time of year. Some of the most useful new drugs in ulcer treatment are tranquilizers to calm people down, nerve-blocking agents which slow the secretion of acid in the stomach, and antacids, to neutralize or deactivate it.

Although Santa Claus may not live up to give you a happy, ulcer-free Christmas, it is now possible that you doctor can.

Fire Can Spoil Happy Holiday

Babbs Switch, Caribou and Billings can tell you that a happy Christmas is a safe Christmas.

Babbs Switch is a small Oklahoma community. On Christmas Eve, 1924, about 150 men, women and children were gathered in the frame schoolhouse for the community's big observance of Christmas party. A series of incidents — a Christmas tree branch brushing against a candle, a kerosene lamp knocked off a table, and a stage curtain ignited — led to a fire which destroyed the schoolhouse, killing 36 persons and injuring 40.

In more recent years, church fires occurred in Billings, Mont., and Caribou, Me.

In Billings, an attendant lighting candles accidentally set fire to a large velvet curtain behind the altar. Fire spread to a combustible fibreboard ceiling.

In Caribou, Christmas trees placed around an altar in the auditorium of a church fed a blaze. They were ignited when a small girl knocked over a tree which fell on lighted candles nearby.

And in Missouri, Christmas trees placed along the altar rail fed a blaze of undetermined origin.

Cranberries Traditional At Christmas

Cranberries, so much a part of our holiday dining tradition, was t-bimi, or "bitter berry" to the Indians, who peopled the fruit with spirits into a paste called pemmican; used cranberry poultices on wounds and used the juice as a red dye.

The Pilgrims, tasting the berries were a favorite food of the natives, called them cranberries, and this eventually changed to cranberries.

PIONEER GROWER

Cranberries were harvested from wild vines until 1816, when Henry Hall, a veteran of the Revolution, transplanted wild vines to a swampy site near Dennis, Massachusetts. Hall had observed that the choicest wild berries were usually found in sandy areas, so he spread sand over his fields and produced an excellent crop.

Many other early plantings failed, in Massachusetts and New Jersey, before growers learned that the cranberry would thrive only under certain conditions. Cranberry fields today are located in bog areas where peat soil, the fields are well-drained and can be flooded to protect vines from cold and control insects and is plentiful, and necessary to slow evaporation, provide a good medium for root growth, and keep down weeds.

Fields welcome visitors to cranberry bogs. Some bogs are lined with birdhouses—homes for swallows, which eat destructive insects.

And with the birds, are the bees, who also perform an important service. Cranberry pollen is too heavy to be carried by wind, so bees are necessary to pollinate the flowers.

Two Feasts For Swedes

A Swedish custom of long-standing is the observance of Lucia Day on December 13. The celebration takes its name from St. Lucia, or Lucy, martyred for her faith and virginity in Syracuse in 304 A.D.

Pretty blonde girls compete for the honor of being elected "Lucia"—with fair hair, good disposition and high marks for being outstanding recommendations.

Wearing a traditional costume (long white robes and crowns of lighted candles) the "Lucia" visits the sick, leads carnivals and attends banquets and balls accompanied by her "handmaidens."

The ancient custom coincides with the winter solstice, when the sun swings toward the earth once more and the days begin to lengthen.

Some Progress Made in Early House Session

OTTAWA (CP)—Was the first part of the 1962-63 session of Parliament really such a do-nothing Parliament after all?

It has been compared by some with the do-nothing 60th Congress of the United States which, for two years, with electoral success, by former president Harry Truman.

The Liberals blamed the Conservatives for indecision and incompetence in arranging the business of the Commons; the Conservatives blamed the opposition for obstruction.

But in its 58 sitting days—12 weeks of the five-day, 25½-hour work weeks MPs put in on Parliament Hill — the Commons took up 30 pieces of government legislation. Fifteen were passed. Of the remaining 15, six were advanced beyond the initial stage of Commons consideration.

When members of Parliament and senators wrapped up the initial stage of the session last Thursday night, there were complaints that more than six days had been spent on an interim supply bill for $300,000,000 which would have been passed in normal circumstances in a matter of minutes.

FEAR EARLY ELECTION

But circumstances were not normal.

The opposition parties—particularly the Liberals—believed the government might call a snap election during the Christmas-New Year's recess and thereby head up the opposition for the long, aimless debate to put their speeches on the Hansard record while they could.

Prime Minister Diefenbaker said the government had no thought of an election. But the opposition was apparently unwilling to believe him.

Almost stunned by the six days of debate on interim supply was the fact that in its dying knock Parliament passed six government measures.

These were for establishment of a Crown corporation to handle the 1967 World's Fair in Montreal, easing provisions for federal loans for municipal sewage works, increased university grants, approval of a new CNR branch line near Bathurst, N.B., extension of coal subsidies, and approval of further freight rates reduction subsidies.

BLACK'S MEAT MARKET

SANTA'S BAG

BY F.L. ROWLEY

It was Christmas Eve. Bertram Hollinghead shuffled down Railroad Lane dragging a lumpy sack in his wake, and no one gave him a second look. It wasn't unusual for tramps and vagrants to leave the terminal toting all manner of hurriedly assembled gear. And Happy Noonan, who walked this particular beat, could amble along at a comfortable distance behind them, wondering what it was they had stolen.

But tonight Happy Noonan was miffed. Not only had Bertram declined to pursue his questionable work on Christmas Eve, but he had brazenly shrugged his unsavory sack across the surprised Noonan's smartly polished shoes. Then Bertram strode through the big gate, contentedly puffing on a cigar, and disappeared before Happy's ears had turned red.

A big man stomped nolsily across the platform. Noonan recognized him as Sergeant Dennis.

"I see you are your usual sharp self this late p.m." said the sergeant.

He knew where to find Bertram

"What do you mean?" Noonan asked innocently.

"I'm referring to the gentleman who just walked out that gate. Anyone else would have mistaken him for a hobo—or a burglar. Not you though. You know the real goods when you see 'em."

"I do?"

"You certainly do. Even in the dark you can recognize Santa Claus."

"I thought that was Bertram Hollinghead," said Noonan.

"It was Bertram, you idiot!" screamed Sergeant Dennis. "And if you value your job you better bring him in! There's been a robbery over on Main Street. The owner of Burke's Jewelry Store is down at the station right now. We promised to give him some action. He doesn't know you are on the force."

THE SEARCH

Noonan had a good idea where he'd find Bertram. The hobo had been working for the Widow Joyce for almost two months now, and purportedly going straight. Happy was glad that he didn't have far to walk.

He flew Bertram on the Widow Joyce's back porch. The little man was in a characteristic pose, trying to jimmy a window. He jumped when Noonan called out: "All right, knock it off! I've got you covered!"

Bertram smiled weakly. "Well if it isn't my old pal Noonan. I'll bet you don't know what I'm doing?"

"That's no ticket window," said Happy.

"I didn't want the widow or her son Timmy to hear me," said Bertram. "I got a bag full of toys here for the little fellow. Tonight I'm Santa Claus."

"And I'm Little Bo Peep. Come on, I'm running you in."

"Wait, if you don't believe me look in the bag."

"March!" Noonan commanded.

SHOULD PLEASE

Sergeant Dennis would be pleased with him tonight He'd done what he'd been told to do. Bertram tried to protest on the way to the station, but Happy prodded him with his revolver.

When they entered the station Sergeant Dennis was not smiling. "We caught the men who robbed the store," he whispered to Noonan. "Now what charges will we bring against Bertram?"

Noonan winked and produced the necklace. Then he turned to Bertram and said: "Empty your bag!"

Bertram poured out the contents of the sack. There was a teddy bear, three games, and a football. The necklace is for the Widow Joyce. I was trying to surprise her and Timmy. At least they believe I've gone straight."

Sergeant Dennis was looking at him... "I guess we've forgotten, haven't we, Noonan?"

"What's that, sir?"

"We've forgotten the wonderful things that can happen on Christmas Eve. Merry Christmas, Bertram!"

And the little man absolutely refused his pack and smiled.

with America . . . is another nail in the coffin of the Conservative government. From now on, the government lives on borrowed time. Every Conservative member of Parliament knows it."

The right-wing Daily Express urges Britain to build its own missile and not rely on the U.S.

"From the exchanges in the Bahamas, it is quite clear that if Britain wishes to maintain a truly independent deterrent she can rely on neither the Americans nor anyone else," the paper says. "She must build it for herself."

The Daily Telegraph, Conservative, urges the government to make a careful survey of its over-all nuclear policy.

"An immediate and thorough look at Britain's own capacity for production of missiles and launchers would stand it in good stead," the paper argues.

The columnist of the left-wing Daily Mirror, Cassandra, says:

"We have got a weapon to be fired from a submarine which we cannot afford, which if used will be in a world suicide pact, and which, if not used, will not make the slightest difference to the nuclear balance of power."

President Kennedy Trying To Reshape Atlantic Pact

WASHINGTON (AP)—President Kennedy is trying to reshape and moderate the Western alliance as it ready to deal with the problems of the dawning age of push-button nuclear warfare.

He is prepared to exert much more aggressive American leadership than in the past to bring about great basic changes in the structure of the North Atlantic Treaty Organization. And that seems to have been one of the things which Prime Minister Macmillan found out clearly in last week's meeting with Kennedy at Nassau.

The underlying, long-range significance of the Nassau pact, as Kennedy's associates see it, is not simply that it settles the Skybolt missile controversy with Britain but that it lays down for the first time the outlines of a plan for building a strategic nuclear force within NATO and it made a start on that plan.

OFFER SURPRISES

Kennedy's parallel offer to sell France the same Polaris missiles on the same terms negotiated with Macmillan was a big surprise at the Nassau negotiations.

France now has its long-sought recognition of its right to sit in the deadly game of nuclear strategics, along beside the United States, Britain and Russia. But President de Gaulle also has a message from Kennedy to make up his mind about the kind of Europe he wants to work for and what its relationship with the U.S. should be.

Kennedy is driving for a unified Western Europe with many military, political and economic partnership ties with the U.S. in the broad framework of the Atlantic community.

The Nassau agreement between the American and British leaders proposes, in effect, to organize a special place within the 15-nation Atlantic alliance for the U.S., British and France. This seems to be much in line with de Gaulle's proposal of several years ago for a kind of three-power directorate.

Kennedy sent de Gaulle a personal letter offering him Polaris missiles on condition that the missile force when completed—seven or eight years hence would be put under a NATO umbrella. Meanwhile, de Gaulle would work with the United States and Britain on organization of strategic nuclear bomber forces which would be assigned to NATO.

The point here is that in offering the Polaris to de Gaulle Kennedy asked him to choose forth here in a course of increasing co - operation with Britain and other NATO countries. The Polaris missile sale such a course is essential if the Western Allies are to avoid destroying the strength of their unity by building independe nuclear forces.

Wounds Wife, Then Kills Self

TORONTO (CP)—A man died and two persons were taken to hospital with bullet wounds following a shootout incident in a west-end Toronto rooming house late Sunday night.

Police said the dead man, Josef Sollasi, 61, took his own life after wounding his estranged wife Marta, also 61, and Ernst Heidrich, 44.

Heidrich and Mrs. Sollasi are in serious condition in hospital with multiple wounds inflicted by a semi-automatic pistol.

Credit leader, described him as "one of the great Canadians of our day." John Blackmore, who preceded Mr. Low as national leader, credited him with helping Alberta refund more than $100,000,000 in debt during seven years as provincial treasurer.

Premiers E. C. Manning of Alberta and W. A. C. Bennett of British Columbia, heads of Social Credit governments, praised him for his "invaluable contribution" to the Social Credit cause to Canada's public life.

Former prime minister Louis S. St. Laurent said while Mr. Low "never was able to convert the value of Social Credit doctrine, I have always considered him as sincere in the representations he made before the House."

Liberal Leader Lester Pearson and T. C. Douglas, New Democratic Party leader, expressed shock and sorrow at Mr. Low's death.

Mr. Low's first interest in the monetary principles of Social Credit came during studies at the University of Southern California where he read the writings of C. H. Douglas, Scottish-born exponent of Social Credit.

AIDED PARTY'S BIRTH

He took an active part of its birth in Alberta after he and 17 other leaders of Raymond worked for scrip, which was issued instead of currency by desperate town authorities during the depression years.

Court injunction stopped the practice because it contravened federal currency laws, but to Mr. Low it was concrete evidence that the theory of Social Credit was workable.

He was elected as a Social Credit member for Warner when the party swept into power in Alberta in 1935. Three years later as provincial treasurer he was given the task of putting Mr. Low's monetary theories into practice. Federal courts and the privy council disallowed much of the government's fiscal legislation.

Mr. Low became education minister in Alberta in 1942, and in 1944 assumed the national leadership of the party. A year later he was elected to the Commons for Peace River.

There was also the large heart, the bounty, and the tenderness.

The San Francisco woman, reformed and married after years of frequent jail terms for vagrancy or drunkenness, visited the jail she once occupied with gifts of costume jewelry, necklaces and candy for all 54 women occupants.

In Akron, Ohio, Roy Arnold is ill, and he and his wife are on relief, with nine children to support. But for the 10th successive Christmas, an anonymous gift came — this time for $200.

In Wilmington, Ohio, and Fort Erie, Ont., the town fathers draped hoods over parking meters, to allow residents to park free during the season. But many motorists, distrusting the generous gesture, persisted in lifting the cover and putting in their dimes.

Garden Notes

Fuchsias for Inside or Out

By FLORA M. SAVILLE

There was a time when most housewives had at least one fuchsia in her collection of houseplants. Fashions, in flower as well as personal adornment, go in cycles. Now the fuchsias are back in favor many new hybrids are being introduced and many of the older forms are just as lovely as the new comers.

"Ladies eardrops" was the fanciful name applied to these plants and the blooms do resemble a dangling earring.

In the south east parts of England, and on the continent where mild weather prevails, fuchsias are grown as hedge plants. Many gardeners cut them back to the ground each spring and by July they make large bushy plants with an abundance of the pendant blooms.

In Ontario they should be brought indoors before fall frost kills the leaves if you wish to keep them as houseplants. Where they are kept for bedding they can be stored in a cool basement. When they are developed into standards, that is one main stem and look like a small tree, they may be grown in large pots or tubs and kept for accent plants for the patio.

A fuchsia can look like a tree, a bush or a hanging basket plant. Treated as a basket plant they display their bloom to the very best advantage.

EASIEST WAY

The easiest way to propogate the fuchsia is by cuttings. Take soft young wood in early June. Dip an inch or two of the cut end in rooting hormone powder and plant the cuttings, several to a pot in spagnum moss, perlite, vermiculite or clean sharp sand. They need a temperature of 60 to 65 degrees. Cover the pots and cuttings with a plastic bag, or spray several times a day to prevent new sprouts and roots. Soft cuttings will root in a week or ten days.

As soon as the young plants have rooted transplant to three and a half inch pots, Use sand, peat and soil in equal parts. Every three weeks give an application of liquid fertilizer. Keep humid with frequent light watering and spraying.

When cuttings are three or four inches high pinch out top to induce side growth. When new growth reaches five inches pinch again. This will give you a compact bushy plant.

When the fuchsia is grown as a tree it deserves a handsome oak tub, a redwood planter or pedestal pot. These are a mixture of cement and asbestos. They

Greer Garson Thinks TV Is Wonderful

By CYNTHIA LOWRY

NEW YORK (AP) — Motion picture stars, particularly established ones with proven box-office appeal, are likely to be lukewarm at best about television acting assignments.

But Greer Garson, an Irish red-head who has starred in some of the most successful movies ever made, is an exception: she thinks television is wonderful — her herself at any rate.

"For one who leads a busy, demanding life in other areas, it is great," she confided enthusiastically. "It's a tremendous challenge to any actor because it combines the techniques of stage and screen. And it is all concentrated in two, three or four weeks of work, three busy weeks in New York rehearsing and performing in a taped TV show."

SPECIAL CASE

"Motion pictures take months to make," she said. "A play, if it is a success, ties up a performer for months, even years. Television, on the other hand, is 'instant theatre' — everything else seems to be instant these hectic days—so television is in the contemporary mood. I like being an instant actress."

Miss Garson, it is obvious, is a special case. Most professionals welcome a popular long-running Broadway play or a fat part in a leisurely, hardcarried motion picture.

The slender, chic woman who became a star with one movie —wartime Goodbye, Mr. Chips —today finds her acting career has fallen somewhat behind her preoccupation with the jobs of matron, volunteer worker for causes, Sunday painter and archeologist.

The wife of E. E. (Buddy) Fogelson, an independent oil man, Miss Garson's "home base" now is Dallas. And in her beautiful, moderated British accents, she manages to out-brag the natives about the beauties and glories of her town. She calls herself "an earnest citizen" and works for just about all the most worthy welfare and cultural causes of the community.

Then, when a motion picture job beckons, she has her old home in Bel Air, Los Angeles.

Women Earn Recognition In Fields Once Reserved For Men During Past Year

By PATRICIA RUSAK
Canadian Press Staff Writer

During 1962 Canadian women crusaded for such causes as world peace and nuclear disarmament and even scored a few more firsts in their old battle for equality with men.

But their most significant victory was embodied in the February announcement that children's underwear bearing the Canada Standard Size label was available on the market. This was later extended to other children's garments.

Standardization of the sizes of children's clothing was the brainchild of the Canadian Association of Consumers. The 30,000-member women's organization, headed by Mrs. A. P. Plumptre of Ottawa, seeks to protect, educate and represent the buying public.

The CAC had struggled for 10 years to have the sizing system, based on body measurements and shapes, accepted by the government and by manufacturers.

One of the most vocal campaigns undertaken by Canadian women forged ahead in 1962. Delegations from the Voice of Women presented pleas for peace to the Geneva disarmament talks and the United Nations.

Under leadership of Mrs. W. D. Tucker of Port Credit, Ont., co-founder of V.O.W., women from 17 countries met at a peace conference in Montreal and set up an international liaison committee to unite women of the world behind the peace movement. Mrs. Tucker is chairman of the committee.

WANTS SWEEPSTAKES

A campaign of a different nature, but just as enthusiastic, was undertaken by Mrs. Mary English of Calgary, a dynamic 52 - year - old housewife who made a 10,000-mile trip seeking support for legalized sweepstakes.

In September 500 Canadian women from many parts of the country and many different backgrounds met at a conference in Toronto to explore the social role of today's women.

They declared that women have the right to develop their full potential either in the home or in business or both and that society must bring its values in line.

Among women who earned recognition in fields once reserved for men was Mrs. Violet Cook of Toronto, the first woman ever elected a full brokerage partner in a Canadian securities business.

Quebec got its first woman cabinet minister in Mrs. Claire Kirkland-Casgrain and its first woman judge in Therese Lemay - Lavoie, and Toronto's Gertrude Mulcahy became the first of her sex ever elected to a fellowship in the Institute of Chartered Accountants of Ontario.

The increasing role of women in banking was reflected in Toronto-Dominion Bank's appointment of Holly Armstrong as its first female consultant.

CLIMBED MOUNTAIN

FO Madeleine Thibeault of the RCAF became the first woman flyer to receive a flight dispatcher's licence, and Mrs. Esther Kalter, 29, of Vancouver, was the first woman to climb British Columbia's highest mountain, 13,260-foot Mt. Waddington.

Other firsts included the appointment of a woman coroner in Toronto and the election of an all-woman council on the Metagami Indian reserve near Chapleau, Ont.

Myrtle Bamford became warden of Ontario's Haliburton County at 23, the youngest woman ever to hold such a post. She presides over an all-male council of 12 reeves and deputy reeves.

In the political field, four of five members of the last Parliament were re-elected June 18. A newcomer was Mrs. Isabel Hardie who succeeded her late husband Mervyn Hardie, MP for Mackenzie River.

Mrs. Ethel Wilson of Edmonton became minister without portfolio in Alberta.

In letters, Mrs. Sheila Burnford of Port Arthur, Ont., won the Canadian Library Association's medal for the best children's book in English. The Incredible Journey, and Lillian Smith of Toronto, formerly of Hamilton and Galt, Ont., was the first Canadian, first woman and first children's librarian to receive the American Textbook Publishers' Clarence Day award.

DESIGNS STAMPS

Mrs. Helen Bacon of Toronto had two of her stamp designs used during the year — one marking Victoria's centennial and the other education year.

Eleanor Milne of Wakefield, Que., was appointed Canada's official sculptor, taking on the job of creating carvings and statues commissioned for federal buildings.

Tona Reed, 22, of Sudbury, Ont., won the world championship at the accordion competitions in Prague.

Prominent women wed during 1962 included former world figure skating champion Barbara Wagner of Toronto who married skater Jimmy Grogan, and Una Maclean of Calgary, past-president of the Canadian Federation of Business and Professional Women's Clubs, married to Edmonton Journal columnist Art Evans.

Women continued to do some strange things. Two Toronto women, spurred by challenges from their husbands, crossed Lake Ontario in an amphibious car, a 32-mile trip that took a little more than six hours.

And during the federal election campaign five members of the Sons of Freedom Doukhobors made headlines by stripping as Prime Minister Diefenbaker addressed a meeting in Trail, B.C.

THESE WOMEN MADE NEWS — Women scored more firsts during 1962 in their battle for equality and also campaigned for standardization of children's clothing, world peace and nuclear disarmament. These women were prominent in such roles. They are (left to right): Mrs. A. F. Plumptre, head of the Canadian Association of Consumers, which campaigned for the Canada Standard Size Label; Mrs. W. D. Tucker, co-founder of the Voice of Women peace movement; Gertrude Mulcahy, first woman elected to a fellowship in the Institute of Chartered Accountants of Ontario. (CP Photo)

The treasurer gave a report on the turkey supper, showing a good profit.

The Dorcas secretary, Mrs. E. Heath, reported she had sent the bale.

It was decided to cater to a bowling banquet on January 3rd. Mrs. Barlow closed the meeting with prayer.

The program was in charge of Mrs. Jack Prest and Mrs. Woodbeck.

Mrs. M. Tanner gave an interesting topic, on "Christmas in Other Lands".

Mrs. Maurice Bell was introduced and gave a demonstration on how to make Christmas corsages, she also showed several felt articles made by the Rangers.

Mrs. Barlow thanked Mrs. Bell for her interesting demonstrations.

Mrs. Tanner conducted a contest after which the hostess served lunch.

STATE AIDS DANCERS

MONTREAL (CP) — Celia Franca, artistic director of the National Ballet Guild of Toronto, says that in Russia and Denmark dancers are state-supported throughout training and do not have to worry about finding a position on graduation. When married, dancers receive an automatic salary increase and an additional increase with every child.

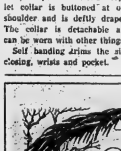
If it isn't suede, it's a suede finish for coats, so this attractive coat is of taupe suede finish wool. It closes all the way over to the side, and is bordered in dark brown sealskin.



The separate sealskin cape-let collar is buttoned at one shoulder and is deftly draped. The collar is detachable and can be worn with other things.

Sleepy-time Girl

By TRACY ADRIAN

Bedtime takes on a bit of glamor for little sisters when their sleep wardrobe includes a pretty nightie like this one.

Made of soft nylon tricot, the gown is charmingly embellished with multi-hued floral embroidery and white lace on its bib yoke. The pouf sleeves and the little collar are also lace-trimmed and the colors are pink or aqua.

Christmas Eve Greetings

The Cook Comes Out of the Kitchen

The old order changeth Here's a switch. Pete's the Christmas host.

I do so much experimental Christmas baking and cooking during November and December that I welcome the thought of the actual preparations for the big Christmas meal being done in someone else's kitchen.

Because Peter is posted to his own home town for the third year of his post-graduate psychiatric work he decided that Margy and he would have Christmas dinner at their home.

Margy made her first Plum Pudding and Christmas cakes in November in true British tradition. If I want to, while last minute dinner preparations are progressing, I can play with five-month old Jennifer, Pretty slick!

News of Marianne and Herbie is a little different: As many of you know they are posted to Calgary and there is a measles epidemic there and you can guess the rest. Gary had not been transferred to first grade there for more than two weeks before he caught it. When I talked to them, on the telephone on Saturday night Herbie said there wasn't a square inch on him (Gary) that was clear of spots. But the worst is over for him. Now Marianne is examining Davey and Sue and Danny hourly. Her Christmas shopping was done by telephone and proxy but they are looking forward to Herbie's family coming from Castlegar for an "adults only" Christmas dinner. But don't misinterpret that — the children will be pampered with their own-special dinner and entertainment.

CONTENTED THOUGHTS:

When you receive a letter from a minister in Saskatchewan saying "I made both your Christmas fruit cakes and think they are fine" . . .

When two of your Y.P.U. members ask for posts on the Sunday School teaching staff . .

When a reader you have never met invites you for Christmas dinner in Northern Ontario. . .

When someone guesses you are ten years younger than you really are . . .

When the scales show you have lost two pounds even with pre Christmas nibbling . . .

When your secretary walks in to you on the morning after you have made a speech which she has heard and gives you a big kiss and hug and says "Well done" . . .

Then I think of you and thank my Heavenly Father for His everlasting munificence in providing me with the kind of work that seems to be the envy of every one I know.

On Christmas Eve I would like to thank the generous and thoughtful and understanding women (and men) who comprise my audience and make my work so rewarding.

Merry Christmas to you all.

SPEAKING of MANNERS

PATRICIA LEWIS

TIPS ON TELEPHONE COURTESY

To hear the average housewife tell it, she spends practically half the day on the phone.

If this is correct, no wonder manners tend to get slack at times. When one tries to cope with a string of phone calls, both coming and going, it's often hard to put one's best foot forward and often one's foot ends up in one's mouth.

Or, at least, that's the way it sounds sometimes to the person on the other end. A friend may call to deliver an innocent invitation to dinner on Saturday and canasta afterward and be greeted with "Hold on a sec," while the busy little woman pollishes off a sandwich with one hand and finished a novel with the other. At least she shows some measure of taste by not chomping away while trying to talk on the phone, but keeping a caller dangling for ages is almost as severe a social crime.

If it's impractical at the moment to accept a phone call, then the polite thing to do is explain the situation and offer to call back. Certainly this is more understandable to the caller than to have to devote ten minutes to constant interruptions when the call should only have taken two.

There are other times when it's more gracious and courteous to return a call, rather than impose on the good nature of the friend on the other end.

When there are visitors present and there's no time to talk. Trying to carry on a three-way conversation is hardly courteous to the invisible person, who may feel she is crashing a party from ten blocks away. Excuse yourself for the nonce, and arrange to call back as soon as you're alone and can take time out for a chat.

When the children are acting up. Nothing is more shattering to a caller than to listen to wails in the background and to mother's crisp, military voice commanding "Johnnie, stop that," and smack into the mouthpiece. Offer to call back — the offer will be gratefully received — when Johnnie's down from the chandelier, or, at least, doing gymnastics in another room, where he's out of sight and not demanding attention.

When dinner's on the table, or almost there. This can be a trying time when visities have to be taken off the stove at a moment's notice and dished out before they get cold. When advised of the situation, a caller is only too willing to bide her time so that she can deliver her message at leisure and make sure it will be received accurately.

Remember that most callers regret catching you at a bad time and much prefer that you speak to them when problems aren't so pressing. Trying to talk on the phone when it's hard to concentrate is really not a courtesy to the person who is calling. Often it's provoking and embarrassing. An offer to return the call at a calmer moment makes the eventual conversation more enjoyable — and enlightening — on both ends.

POOR WEDDING CAKE

Polish Yule Customs Told To Melrose W.I.

Christmas wreaths and festive decorations in the spacious home of Mrs. J. McLaren were a perfect setting for the December meeting of Melrose W.I., which was well attended.

The president, Mrs. M. Lasher, extended a welcome and season's greetings and thanked the hostess for opening her home.

Several thank-you notes were read for cards and flowers received. It was decided to assist two needy families to help bring cheer at this glad season of the year.

The two delegates, Mrs. J. McLaren and Mrs. A. English, gave full and informative reports on the recent Trent Valley Area Convention in Belleville held early in December.

At this stage the meeting was turned over to Mrs. D. Thompson, who presided over the following delightful program, which was in keeping with the holiday season. Several carols were sung by the Grandmothers, with Mrs. Bates Sr. as accompanist on the piano. Mrs. G. Hagerman gave a reading entitled, "So Hallowed and Gracious is Today," after which Mrs. Ron Graham cleverly demonstrated in a most novel manner the construction of several Christmas decorations from foil pie plates suitable for walls, doors or windows. This was indeed instructive and many members will be trying out these ideas.

A Christmas exchange of presents among the members provided many pleasant surprises. Mrs. K. McBechael followed with a reading, "The Spear Over Bethlehem," after which Mrs. Thompson told a moving story which is authoritative and was written by "Vince Prozerak," a native of Poland but now a Canadian citizen, who wrote: "How Christmas is Spent in Poland." He described the customs which were in vogue when he was a child. On Christmas eve all" members of the family dressed up in their best clothes and watched for the "Star," after which the festivities started. The families kiss and embrace one another; cakes are prepared in advance, no cooking is done on Christmas Day; hay was laid over the table and then covered with a large white cloth. They partake of a wafer sharing with others, after which they embrance. There are 14 different varieties of food served. One vacant chair is left for any uninvited guest who may call. Happiness reigns supreme. Carols are sung during the" Christmas season only. The church bells ring out to invite people to attend and worship together. These are all childhood memories as customs have changed under the communist rule and domination.

The president thanked all who helped make this meeting such a happy occasion and wished everyone a "Merry Christmas" after which a delicious lunch was served and a social time spent.

THE FAMILY COUNCIL

Stanley C. — I don't want my child raised by a nursemaid.

Kathryn C. — I'd make enough to pay for an excellent one.

Stanley C. — We're married six years and have a two-year-old son. Right now Kitty and I are arguing over her plan to return to her job and hire a nursemaid for the baby.

I might have weakened and said yes, if I hadn't had an afternoon off last week and watched the "nannies" in the park. Even the best of them pay little attention to the kids and spend the time gossiping with each other. All they worry about is keeping the babies' white shoes white.

One little boy tried to say something to his nurse and got pushed away. Another one was screaming because someone was throwing sand at him. But the governess kept on reading. If those babies could only talk it might scare their mothers into taking care of their own children.

Kathryn C. — I left a wonderful job just a few months before the birth of our son. I worked for a travel agency and they've asked me to return this spring when their busy season begins. They're expanding and I have a good chance to be appointed branch manager after a few weeks of catching up.

The salary offered me would pay for a high-grade nursemaid for Bobby. But Stan can't see it at all. He doesn't realize that Bobby will actually be better off. He'd have a trained person watching over his health and growth every day. I'd still have time to play with him, and weekends I'd take charge completely. Ordinarily I'd agree that a woman should stay with her baby. But this isn't an ordinary job that's come along. Stan should make an exception.

There are fine nurseamids as well as hard-boiled ones. I'll show Stan the nice ones.

The Council: Most mothers of 2-year-olds, including our First Lady, make it their business to be with their child as much as possible, and lament having to leave the youngster in search with others. And here comes Kathryn who has no financial or family reason for working, yet longs to pull out of the picture and substitute a hired worker to care for the mother.

Our comment is direct: Don't. Postpone the resumption of your career, Kathryn. You're trading dollars for sunbeams, and it's a risky swap.

Apropos, we insert a park scene witnessed by one of The Council. It ditto Stanley's impression. A tot, walking with a daydreaming maid, saw some Thanksgiving ragamuffins approaching. "Look!" he called. "There's a Mickey Mouse hat . . . with the ears . . . Look! . . . a Mickey Mouse . . . ears . . ." and his voice and enthusiasm died down, because the maid said, "Oh, shut up." Perhaps a mother would have obliged with "Yes, I see."

Mothers aren't necessarily better than nursemaids. They, too, sometimes rebuff and neglect their charges, or spoil and over-protect them. But they have so much more at stake than a paid employee that the chances are they'll try harder and adapt to the child instead of rigidly making him adapt to them.

Besides, Kathryn, your Bobby is only two. He's still in the most formative of the formative years, when the mother-child bond is the determining factor that can shape his adult attitudes. You are still more like one person, than two. The abrupt deprivation of your presence might puzzle and frighten the child. Even though he thrives physically and smiles a lot, he may still be affected emotionally by your withdrawal from his orbit.

Right now, money can't buy what your baby needs — a mother on tap. Hold off. A few years now your money can buy things Bobby needs — things, not feelings.

Santa Visits Around the World

DORIS CLARK

"Oh Mummy, Daddy, he's been!"

The excited cry thrills us. We hurry to watch our youngsters explore the wonders of Christmas. We delight in the gifts we have provided for our own.

For children not so sure of being remembered by Santa, there's been help too. In our own city, in the spirit of Christmas, generous donors are making it possible for financially depressed parents to share in the joy of Christmas morning, with shining gifts and special treats.

That Canadians have reached out beyond their own prosperous shores is another happy fact. Some work through UNICEF, Canadian Red Cross, CARE or the Unitarian Service Committee. And Mrs. O. E. Schenk of the Toronto Branch of the Canadian Save the Children Fund (CSCF) speaks for all world-wide efforts in telling the following story:

"We have packed and shipped overseas just over three thousand Christmas stockings, and had enough to be able to add children of Hong Kong to our list.

"All the time we were packing this year, I was trying to thing of some way of adequately expressing to you our very great appreciation for all the love and care that went into the stockings. One story about these kept recurring to me and because you will be just as touched as I was when I first held it.

"As well as justifying all the work that goes into each and every stocking, it also answers the question, 'What good is so little when so much is needed?'

"This happened in Greece to one of the many young girls who are trained at Ioanina (Greece) to operate day care centres for little tots from their own villages. The heroine of this tale arrived at Ioanna one day in a state of physical and mental collapse. Her little school way up in the mountains, for which she had laboured the long and so hard, had been completely swept away by the floods.

"The children had lost their few precious possessions and were dazed and more than a little frightened. It had taken her three days to get the school going and now it was all gone! Wearily she said: 'There is little point in trying again.'

"Our field worker there is wondrously wise. Quietly she placed a bright red Christmas stocking in the girl's hands. 'This just arrived from Canada.'

"The girl held it for a moment; then handed it slowly back. It could never decide who was to get it,' she said.

"But there is a stocking for every child,' she was told. . . .

"The girl turned away and wept.

"A week later, with enough clothing (supplied by CSCF) to keep the children warm, food to help them face the winter and the wonderful life of 'Christmas from Canada' to give them delight and new hope, she started back up the mountain to her village.

"For making such things as this possible, we thank you all very, very much."—DORIS.

DEAR DORIS—Please help me! If you don't, there's no telling what might happen.

I first started three years ago when I was twelve. This boy really liked me, asked me to the Prom and all, but my parents won't let me do anything. Then this August I met a divine boy, aged 16. We got along swell and, even though we didn't have a date, we were intimately close and spent a lot of time together. .

Then school started. Now there's this terribly cute boy in grade ten and his locker is next to mine, and I like him swell. And . . . here comes the big problem. He's such a flirt and so naturally he pays attention to others, one in particular besides me. Boris she can go out and I can't and I just know it'll lose him to her if something doesn't give.—BEWILDERED M.

DEAR BEWILDERED—Competition is unfair if you can't date and she can!

Your mother don't keep you in cotton wool all your life. Would she let you have two or three girls in for an evening? Then she might see that your friends are nice and it makes you happy to be with them. Especially if they help with clean up, dishes and so on). Perhaps then she might soften up and let one or two boys in too in groups only, at first.

Meanwhile, you aren't doing too badly, with or without dates, it seems!

DEAR DORIS—The letter from Maria was very true not only in her case. I would say the same situation applies all through Canada. I came to this country ten years ago from a very friendly country indeed, thinking I would find the same happy-go-lucky friendly atmosphere in all the cities and towns I would be living in. But so far I have met nothing but a very sad and non-talkative race of people. The word "neighbor" should be replaced by "stranger," especially when one is referring to someone living next door.

I am sure I am not too far out when I say that this whole situation has been brought on by the fact that people today live in uncertainty, and that everyone is in debt. Therefore, the less friends you have, the less people you hurt.—THANK YOU.

DEAR THANK YOU—"A very sad and non-talkative race of people!" Are we that bad? I can't believe that Canadians are truly unfriendly and uncertain, but if we seem this way to strangers who come here and long for a friendly smile, perhaps we'd better pay our bills (if that's what's depressing us!)

THE TURKEY IS DRESSED — NOW WHAT ABOUT YOU?

Each family builds its own set of private Christmas traditions, interlaced with the more widely accepted festive customs. Some families cling to the tree — specialists in this field are the devotees of the Scotch pine. Some people open their gifts, en masse of course, after the Christmas Eve midnight service. Others, whose children are young, arise before dawn to enjoy these celebrations on a relatively empty stomach! As the children grow older, this awakening can usually be delayed, at least until sunrise.

Each individual family Christmas tradition is precious to a child and therefore unchangeable. We know one young mother who wore a long velveteen housecoat of red on Christmas Eve. The children named this: "Mother's Christmas dress". Although her children are now adults, she still wears red velveteen for the Christmas holidays. Her daughters have adopted this costume, for their own home parties, as their children delight in the color and texture of the fabric.

If your children are young establish your family Christmas traditions now. The bright new star for the top of the tree could be matched by a distinctive brach, which you wear only at Christmas. If it happens to be in the shape of a star, so much the better. The new star for the tree will tarnish, but each year it should have its place of honor. Gradually, as the children grow older, it and your Christmas brooch will be linked in their minds with pleasant memories of childhood — Christmas and a pretty mother.

It is a little difficult to remain cool and pretty, while coping with a turkey dinner, but it can be done. We suggest a sleeveless dress, if you are able to wear this type, becomingly. A bright color, worn with festive jewelry with some sparkle — red if possible, will delight young children. A cocktail apron won't do much to protect you from the inevitable spills. Comfortable shoes and a foundation garment which is a little on the easy side, are recommended. A good make-up job and a hair style which will not wilt in the heat, will help you to stay cool and collected. Avoid dangling bracelets while working near the stove, and don't burn or ruin your Christmas and that of everyone else.

The classic, fashionable accessory for all the Christmas season is a bright cheerful smile, coupled with unending patience in the face of a child's boundless enthusiasm for this most exciting birthday on the Christian calendar.

A Happy Christmas to all of you!

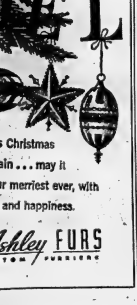
Small Talk

—by Zena Cherry—

Don't look now, but your Christmas cards are showing. One effective way to display them is to cut long strips of colored felt, six inches wide. Pink the edges, hang them as panels on the wall then glue, tape or pin the cards to them. You can fasten a few pine cones at the top, cut the bottom of the streamer to a point and fasten a few colorful balls at the end.



Empty egg cartons make a safe storage place for tree ornaments. Put small balls so you'll have them when you take the tree down after the holidays.

If you're a ribbon saver and stored some away last year it no doubt looks limply sick now. To nurse back to perfect health, wash gently and rinse, then dip in a cup of warm water with a good teaspoon of sugar added. Squeeze and iron when damp.

A sophisticated and inexpensive centrepiece is easily made from one, three or five pine-apples, depending upon the size of your table. Spray the fruit gold or silver; stick on little sprigs of fir or holly and arrange greens at the base to hide the boxes; finish with tall, tall candles in the pineapple tops.

Tiny felt trees, bells or balls make your dinner napkins festive for Noel. Just tack or even pin them on—they're easily removed afterwards.

To be a Christmas belle—you can make gay Christmas earrings in two minutes flat. Buy the earring forms and then just wire on miniature trees, bells or a bit of holly.

Christmas Concert

ALLAN S.S., WILLIAMS S.S.

On Thursday evening a large number of folk from the two school sections, also visitors from Hoards, Stirling and Campbellford gathered in Mount Pleasant-Rawdon church hall for the annual Christmas concert.

A large evergreen tree decorated with Christmas symbols and brilliant with a large array of colored lights welcomed the folks as they arrived. Underneath were dozens of wrapped gifts which were later distributed by Santa and his assistants. The platform was adorned with gift - letters spelling "Merry Christmas" to all.

With the two teachers, Mrs. Grace L. Morton, of the Allan School Section No. 3, and Mrs. Joyce Pratt, teacher of the Williams public school S.S. No. 4, and the pupils entertained with a good program.

Miss Grace Pitman, A.T.C.M., Stirling, the music supervisor for the two schools, accompanied the musical selections, and Mr. Kenneth Weaver manipulated the curtains.

The pastor, the Rev. W. G. Fletcher, was master of ceremonies and at the close of the program voiced appreciation to the group who had presented such a fine entertainment, and to the three ladies involved who spoke briefly.

The financial treasurers were Ross Jeffs and Burton Sharpe.

At the close, jolly old Santa arrived, and, after playing a violin selection, he gave a brief address to the children, and then distributed the treats and gifts.

The program follows:

U.S. Spacemen End Drought With Three Orbital Flights In Year of Space Exploration

By CARMAN CUMMING
Canadian Press Staff Writer

A man, commented one U.S. space official, "is a heck of a lot better than a black box."

The man he referred to was John H. Glenn, 40-year-old U.S. Marine Corps colonel and first American to orbit the earth. In five hours last Feb. 20 he circled the globe three times and returned for a gentle landing in the Atlantic off The Bahamas.

He also started a year of space exploration that was to see four more men — two Russians and two Americans — make orbital flights and prove that man could do much more than a black box; a year which saw vital if less dramatic advances in the field of scientific and communications satellites.

Glenn's flight was overshadowed by longer Russian space voyages both before and after his. But for the United States, which had managed only two suborbital space flights in the previous year while Russia made one-orbit and 17-orbit flights, it marked the end of the drought.

The flight, first on which the world was able to keep informed from liftoff to landing, had its bad moments.

For the control centre at Cape Canaveral, 12s worst came when a warning light indicated—erroneously — that the ceramic heat shield on Glenn's capsule had become unlatched. Without it, the astronaut could not have survived re-entry into the atmosphere.

SPACE FIREFLIES

There was an element of humor, too.

Glenn afterward related an incident in a "debriefing" interview with a space agency psychiatrist. He was telling of the thousands of luminous "firefly" specks that appeared each of the three times he watched the sun rise.

"What did they say, John?" the psychiatrist asked.

Three months later, on May 24, Glenn's flight was matched by a similar trip by LL-Cmdr. M. Scott Carpenter. But here the drama was not so much in the flight as in the landing. Carpenter overshot the designated area in the Atlantic and was out of touch for several tense minutes until a plane spotted him riding in a rubber raft.

Russia's major achievement began Aug. 11, when Major Adrian Nikolayev was rocketed aloft in the spaceship Vostok III. A day later, when the world was waiting for his descent, it was astonished by the news that another man, Lt.-Col. Pavel Popovich, had been launched into orbit within sight of his fellow cosmonaut.

Nikolayev remained in space almost four full days, circling the earth 64 times and covering more than 1,500,000 miles—equal to three return trips to the moon. His companion remained up almost three days, travelling more than 1,250,000 miles in 48 orbits.

Their landings, a remarkable piece of pinpoint navigating, came within six minutes of each other at a scheduled landing point in Kazakhstan.

NEXT MILE-RUN

The fifth space flight of the year—a six-orbit junket by U.S. Navy Commander Walter Schirra, came Oct. 3. Compared with the earlier U.S. flights, this one had almost the atmosphere of a milk run. Schirra travelling 160,000 miles between breakfast in Cape Canaveral and dinner on an aircraft carrier in the Pacific.

A major step ahead in space communications was taken on July 10, when the U.S. Telstar satellite was launched and almost immediately put to work relaying television and telephone messages across the Atlantic. A similar Relay satellite was launched in mid-December.

Canada moved into the world of space exploration in September when its 320-pound Alouette satellite — first ever designed and built by a country other than the U.S. or Russia—was launched by an American rocket from a California base. It was still in a nearly circular polar orbit some 600 miles high to make a study of the ionosphere.

Of the dozens of other spacecraft sent aloft during the year, two of the most spectacular were long shots towards Mars by the Russians and towards Venus by the Americans.

The 447-pound Mariner II, sent up by the U.S. Aug. 27, completed its 34,000,000-mile voyage to the vicinity of Venus Dec. 14. Russia's Mars I craft, launched Nov. 1, weighed almost a ton and was expected to take seven months or more to reach the area of Mars.

Their record dual orbital flights highlighted a year of major advances in space travel. Nikolayev circled the earth 64 times and Popovich 25 times. This photo is from Tass, the Soviet agency. HENRY AND THE 24-INCHER

BY SHIRLEY SARGENT

Henry Duncan raced into the warm, lighted living room just ahead of his older brothers, Harold and Herb. He stared at the red, chrome two-wheeler bicycle under the tree. He had wanted one so badly.

"Wow, a 24-incher and you're only eight!" Harold was still taking in its gleaming newness. "Come on Henry. Ride it around the block."

The "No" was startled out of Henry. The palms of his hands felt wet and his mouth dry.

"Why not?" Herb and Harold were staring curiously.

He couldn't tell them. "It's still dark outside—"

"Dope. It's got a headlight, see?" Harold kicked the stand and up and began wheeling the bike.

"It's too cold." Henry grasped at reasons.

"Here," Herb insisted, "wear my bathrobe."

"No, I don't want to go. Not now." Henry was hoarse, as desperate words slipped as he felt. "Besides, here comes Mother and Dad."

"We'll just go around the block. They won't care." Harold exclaimed excitedly. "Here, take the handle bars and we'll . . ."

Henry knocked his beautiful two-wheeler flat. "No," he said. "Can't you understand English?"

Dad said, "Henry, are you afraid of riding? Why?"

"You'll laugh. You'll all think I'm a coward."

"Henry, Henry!" Dad sounded sad. "You're my boy and you're only eight. I couldn't laugh. Now tell me what happened."

CONFESSION

Then haltingly, between great gulping sobs, Henry did. "I wanted a bike more than anything and I kind of thought I'd get one, so I learned to ride to surprise you. Billy let me use his racer bike . . . and . . . I was flashing along and I didn't see this man opening his car door so I rammed into it. I landed in a hedge and now I'm scared. I don't want to ride again. Ever."

"So that's why your face is so scratched up," Dad said gently.

"Please Dad, don't make me ride," Henry pleaded. He could not, he just knew he couldn't, and it hurt to fall. "Do I have to?"

"No, Henry, not until you want to. No one will even mention riding. Let's open our presents and have breakfast and a happy day. Okay?"

"Okay."

TRYING TO FORGET

The family tore open packages excitedly, but Henry was quiet. His brothers ate enormous breakfasts, but he didn't finish what was on his plate. Afterwards, Herb, without saying anything, helped him wheel the red bike into the garage and shut the door on its newness. And then all Henry had to do was forget about it, but it was there just as surely as the scratches on his face.

He stared at the garage door, swallowed, knotted his fists in his pockets and slowly, reluctantly walked down the driveway. Resolutely he shoved the door open and there stood the bike. His hands were clammy as he wheeled it out.

I'll fall off, he told himself fiercely; that's the worst thing that can happen.

Henry was two-thirds of the way down the driveway when Herb's shout, "Quick, everybody, look!" made him swerve just enough so that he sailed off to land on the grass.

He was on his feet before his excited family closed in on him.

"Are you all right?" Dad asked quickly.

Henry was bending over his fine new bike. "Sure. Gee, Herb, look what you made me do to my bike! It's scratched."

Dad righted the bike. "Now climb on and try again. Okay?"

"Okay," Henry nodded. And, suddenly, everything about Christmas was better than okay. It was terrific.

Plan For Christmas

With "visions of dancing sugar-plums," it's almost impossible to keep children out of the kitchen during the holiday season — a time when the average homemaker is busiest of all.

Amid all the confusion, the family sometimes gets on an irregular eating and sleeping schedule, with the result that tempers get short and the family misses the full enjoyment of the season. A wisely planned schedule will prevent this unhappy set of circumstances.

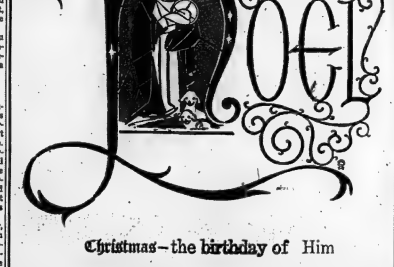
Reserve a small space in one corner of the kitchen for the children. Let them entertain themselves with a small amount of dough and a rolling pin. Wait until the children have gone to bed to make cookies and candies.

Plan hearty evening meals with enough left over for a tasty lunch the following day. Leftover roast is ideal for noontime sandwiches — served hot or cold. Prepared foods that need only be heated and served will cut down on preparation and clean-up time in the kitchen.

If cookies and sweets are made available to youngsters, offer them nutritious snacks as well. Alongside the cookie plate place an assortment of small sandwiches, carrot sticks and fruit slices.

Means More Than Kisses

Boys are fond of mistletoe because of its power to invite a kiss from a pretty girl. Birds like mistletoe, too, for a different reason.



The white-berried plant serves as winter food for mockingbirds, robins and waxwings. These small birds are responsible for the spread of the damaging weed. After eating the berries, the birds clean their beaks on the trees, firmly planting the mistletoe seeds they do not eat.

The tap roots of the seedling pierces the tenderest portions of the tree — young branches or buds — and the tree sap is drawn into the thick leaves and translucent berries of the guest plant.

This cheery wish for Christmas joy, though it's repeated yearly, is just as warm as it can be and meant oh-so sincerely: Happy Holiday!

French-Speaking Members Ask More Attention Be Paid to Their Language

OTTAWA (CP)—French, recognized with English as an official language of Canada's Parliament, commanded more attention in the first 12 weeks of the present parliamentary session than at any time since Confederation.

Almost a fifth of the time spent in House of Commons debates was in French, double the previous high.

The House heard requests for cafeteria menus in French as well as in English, had a French-speaking RCMP constables on Parliament Hill; for a simultaneous translation system in committee meetings so French-speaking MPs could use their native tongue, and allowed on the CNR management for the lack of French-Canadians in its top executive posts.

Main factor in the upsurge of French is the unprecedented number of French - speaking MPs sitting on the opposition benches. Only nearly in previous Parliaments has the French-speaking majority been outside the government ranks.

There are 81 French-speaking members, not all from Quebec, among the 264 Commons representatives. A 265th seat is vacant. This breaks down to 36 Liberals, 28 Social Creditists and 17 Progressive Conservatives. Most of them can speak English, but they are more at ease in French.

Prior to 1959, when a simultaneous translation system was installed, use of French in the Commons averaged under three per cent during a session. It shot up to 10 per cent in 1959, then began dropping again, despite the convenience of the translation system.

CONTENT RISES

When the current session adjourned last Thursday for the Christmas holiday recess, a check of Hansard—the printed record of debates—showed a French content of almost 20 per cent, the same days it was nearly a third.

One veteran officer of the Commons staff said a study of records showed nothing even close to that figure in any previous Parliament.

French Hansard reporters, who sit at desks on the Commons floor taking speeches down in shorthand, have become like a tri-overbred people on Parliament Hill.

One of them recalled how in some recent year he worked out for days without picking up a pencil. "We haven't had a chance to catch our breath in this Parliament."

The political fortunes of 1962 have played a big role in the situation.

In the June 18 general election, Quebec voters stunned federal politicians with an unprecedented solution which gave no party a majority of the province's Commons seats. Quebec elected 35 Liberals, 26 Social Credit and 14 Conservatives. This compares with the Conservatives and 25 Liberals in the previous Parliament.

The new interest in French now has stirred many of the English-speaking persons on Parliament Hill into action.

Top men in all four parties have started taking private French lessons. One group of English - speaking opposition MPs has organized a weekly session with a French tutor. A French-speaking member of the press gallery is giving half-hour daily classes for his English-speaking colleagues.

SUMS UP PHENOMENA

Clement Vincent, rookie conservative, MP for Nicolet-Yamaska, probably did the best job of summing up the phenomena. Speaking in French during the throne speech debate Sept. 28, he abruptly switched into English to remark:

"It was surprising to me on my arrival in Ottawa to meet so many English-Canadians who want to learn French and who are trying to speak it. How wonderful it would be to see in this country, from British Columbia to Newfoundland, people who in addition to speaking their mother tongue could make themselves understood in the other official language of the country."

Last Monday, Opposition Leader Pearson devoted one of his major speeches of the session to a plea for a federal-provincial inquiry into bilingual and bicultural problems. He won quick approving comment from all sides of the House.

The Liberal leader said Canada now is going through "one other serious crisis of national unity" and the time has come "to give extremists their passions, but for a deep, responsible and understaning examination of the basic situations."

Mr. Pearson spoke in English, though he had on occasion delivered French - language speeches in Quebec.

Associate Defence Minister Pierre Sevigny, speaking in French a few minutes later, said the government has already taken steps in this direction through its proposals for a dominion - provincial conference early next year on a flag and national anthem.

Previously, there were suggestions from opposition groups that the government insisted on bilingualism. The government said it would give the idea "serious consideration."

QUESTION CNR HEAD

Probably the biggest bilingual explosion of the year was the Diefenbaker case. His first rumblings were heard Nov. 20, when the Commons committee began its annual questioning of CNR President Donald Gordon.

Gilles Grégoire, Social Credit MP for Lapointe, asked Mr. Gordon why none of the CNR's top executives is a French Canadian.

Mr. Gordon said none of the French-Canadians on the senior staff qualified for the posts at the time of the appointments.

Mr. Grégoire replied in some quarters as a reflection on all French-Canadians. There was a storm of protest from quarters, mainly by student groups, in Montreal, Ottawa and Quebec City. The CNR president was hanged in effigy, once in front of the National War Memorial in downtown Ottawa.

In the last month spokesmen for all three opposition parties have demanded Mr. Gordon's dismissal.

The CNR president's protest that his remarks were distorted in some quarters have gone unheeded by Parliament.

A study of Hansard shows that in the 12 weeks of the session at least 12 oral questions were asked on bilingual topics. At least 10 answers were attempted but ruled out of order.

KEEP UP SNIPING

The Social Credit MPs, from Quebec—60 of them newcomers—kept up a steady sniping against what they insisted was a general trend towards English-only practices.

Complaints from Bellechasse complained one day that the menu board posted at the Commons' parliamentary cafeteria was entirely in English.

"Eat in English," backbencher shouted—in French.

The next day the menu was written in both languages and the change has been permanent. When a spelling error occurred in the French version Mr. Dumont brought it to the attention of the House.

Real Caouette, deputy leader of the party and MP for Villeneuve, rose on a "question of privilege" to complain to Transport Minister Balcer about the lack of French-speaking customs tesses on a Trans-Canada Air Lines flight.

Mr. Caouette, one of the few Social Creditors fluent in both languages, said he made a flight from Montreal to Ottawa on which neither of the two hostesses was able to understand him in French.

The minister said he would take the complaint to TCA.

Frequently, such complaints were ruled out of order by Speaker Marcel Lambert. Once and time again he referred the new Social Credit MPs to Beauchesne's parliamentary rules and forms, the standard reference work on Canadian parliamentary procedure.

NO FRENCH VERSION

To the surprise of many Ottawa veterans, the Social Credit members pointed out that there is no French version, of this book. It was written by the late Arthur Beauchesne, a bilingual lawyer from Carleton, Que., who was clerk of the Commons from 1925 to 1949.

After persistent requests, the government finally agreed to arrange for a French version of the book, which is published by a private firm. It will be translated at government expense and 500 copies will be purchased for Parliament at $20 each.

There was a string of complaints about the lack of French copies of various official pub-

Katangan, UN Troops Tangle Near Big Mine

CP from I.P.-Reuters

ELISABETHVILLE — Heavy fighting between President Moise Tshombe's Katanga gendarmie and UN Ethiopian forces erupted on the outskirts of Elisabethville today.

The Katangans shot down a UN helicopter as it flew over their lines about 300 yards from positions held by UN Gurkha troops. Several soldiers in the helicopter were injured.

The fighting broke out near the giant Union Minière plant here and first Katangan reports said there were "many dead."

The first sound of shooting was a volley of what sounded like rifle shots from the direction of the Belgian mining plant.

Then bursts of rifle and machine-gun fire broke out from other points. Ethiopian troops manning a roadblock fired with machine-guns and rifles toward Katangan gendarmerie lines.

The firing died down after about half an hour.

The shooting came after several weeks of tension between the two sides involving United Nations attempts to bring Katanga province's secessionist government under President Moise Tshombe under the rule of the central Congolese government in Leopoldville.

There was heavy fighting in this provincial capital between UN and Katangan troops a year ago.

As the burst of firing continued today, panic set in and thousands of Negroes fled in panic toward the native part of Elisabethville.

lications or of French-speaking persons in public service jobs.

Typical was the case of Social Credit MP Maurice Cote of Chicoutimi who reported one day that some employees on the CNR train between Montreal and Chicoutimi speak only English. Then though the area is 80 per cent French-speaking."

There were continual demands for the Social Credit corner for a translation service in committee rooms which are held outside the Commons chamber. They pressed, for use of the debates - translation system, portable translation equipment, but the department reported it wasn't available.

Mr. Dumont demanded that the laws passed in 1960 be reprinted in both languages. He also asked why flight insurance machines in the terminals were not available in his language.

"Can't we even die in French?" he asked Mr. Balcer.

DEFIED SPEAKER

One of the major episodes of the session had its origin on Oct. 23. That day Lambert openly defied Speaker Lambert and was ordered to leave the Commons chamber.

The Bellechasse MP, serving in his first Parliament, tried to question the government about what he termed the poverty of farmers in Eastern Canada.

Speaker Lambert, a bilingual French-Canadian lawyer from Edmonton, called for order four times, but the MP ignored him and kept on talking. It is a firm Commons rule that when the Speaker rises all other members must be seated, and silent.

Finally, Mr. Lambert told Mr. Dumont to "withdraw" from the House. When he kept on talking, Mr. Lambert threatened to have the sergeant-at-arms escort him out by force.

Mr. Dumont left, but returned to the House later in the day's sitting.

A few days later a letter appeared over Mr. Dumont's name in Montreal Le Devoir. It accused Mr. Lambert of using a "gag" to prevent questions on bilingualism from being raised in the Commons.

The closing paragraph read: "Newspapers were right when they said we should have had a Speaker from Quebec to represent us."

Lionel Chevrier, Liberal MP for Montreal - Laurier, asked Prime Minister Diefenbaker in the Commons whether the government would take action as a result of the letter.

The minister said a brief discussion before a motion was approved to turn the matter over to the Commons committee on privileges. The Committee has not yet dealt with the matter.

Mr. Dumont apologized to Speaker Lambert a few days later.

Even Tribune of Caesar Knelt at Feet of Jesus In Manger at Bethlehem

By HUGH A. MULLIGAN
AP Features Writer

From the Palatium in Rome he came, on the business of the emperor and bearing the exalted title of tribunus plebis, tribune of the people.

His name was Gaius Cassius Velutus, and he sat himself down at the long table in the courtyard with the Levite Tobias, clerk of the synagogue.

"So this is Bethlehem, the City of David," said the young tribune, opening the scroll across the length of the table and reading the name of the town at the top. "It's not much of a place is it?"

The Roman officer cast a tolerant eye over the narrow, winding streets and the snug white houses glistening in the morning sun against the purple backdrop of the soft Judean hills. No match for Rome, certainly, but a pleasant place nonetheless.

"I suppose this Bethlehem has a history, most places do, you know," he said with a condescending smile.

THINK OF FUTURE

The elderly Levite stroked his graying beard. "Is Bethlehem history? I'm afraid the people here think more in terms of the future than the past."

"The future!" interrupted the tribune in genuine surprise. "Why, there is no future here in this neglected outpost of empire?"

The hands of old Tobias shook quite noticeably and his answer came with stammering hesitation.

"Begging you pardon, oh tribune of the people, but we know Rome's gods are not our gods. We believe in but one god, the great God Jehovah, who promised long ago to send a redeemer to free the world from the bondage of sin. It was one of Jehovah's prophets, a holy man named Micheas, who predicted great things for this town of Bethlehem.

"He will tell you in his own words, as they are writ in the Holy Book: 'And thou Bethlehem, in the land of Juda, are not the least among the princes of Judah; for out of thee shall come forth a ruler, who shall rule my people Israel.'"

LAUGHS AT PROPHECY

The tribune could scarcely no longer the laughter that had been fighting to burst forth from his moment. He looked around his eyes to intone the prophecy. He ruffled the scrolls on the table with a businesslike flourish.

"The emperor's sole concern with Bethlehem," he announced with a rising inflection in his voice that denoted idle conversation, "is that it be brought its tax rolls should be brought up to date. Who is the first in line?"

The Levite squinted at the scrolls. "Joseph, the carpenter, being the districts around the Sea of Galilee, where many of the Hebrew tribes of the tribe of David have their homes."

The first man in line was a fisherman; the second was a shipbuilder, and the third a shepherd, as were the fourth and the fifth. And so it went through the long morning and even longer afternoon.

The sun already had vanished behind the darkening hills when the child-eyed man in the dusty shroud rust robe approached the table.

"Name, please?" asked Gaius Cassius, shouting the cuffs of his tunic back under his toga.

"Joseph, son of Jacob."

"Occupation?"

"Carpenter at Nazareth in Galilee."

"Married?"

"Yes. Mary, daughter of Joachim and Anne."

"Any children?"

"My wife is now with child," said Joseph in a hushed voice. "I must hurry back. Her time is at hand."

The tribune, feeling compassion for this gentle man, hurried in his work. He omitted questions.

"That will be all, thank you. And, oh yes, one thing, before we close out our rolls here, I will send a legate to Nazareth after the baby's name and sex. I presume we can contact you at the inn?"

NO ROOM AT INN

"No," said Joseph. "There was no room at the inn. The boy will be born in a manger, in the stable at the edge of the city."

"Boy! How do you know it will be a boy?" The question seemed to come from both the tribune and the Levite at the same time.

"I know. God has told us," Joseph answered softly. And with that, he was gone.

That night the crowded old inn rang with merriment, but Gaius Cassius brooded alone at a back table. For some unexplained reason, the vision of the gentle-faced man in the russet robe kept swimming into his consciousness.

"I must get some air," he said.

NIGHT IS STRANGE

The narrow streets were all but deserted, and the wind had died to a whisper. Climbing the little hill behind the inn, the tribune saw the rooftops of Bethlehem bathed in the eerie light of what he thought, at first, was a new moon. But there was no moon. Something strange was happening in the constellation of the heavens. Gaius Cassius, so it seemed to the naked eye, had joined together to form one enormous star.

When his eyes became addicted to the pearly iridescence of the night, he saw a great movement of people down from the mountains.

"Shepherds," he called out, "why are you abandoning your flocks? Is a flood or an avalanche coming?"

Only a small boy, carrying a lamb in his arms, slowed up to answer his question.

"Sir," he said, "an angel has appeared to us. The angel has told us The Saviour is born to us this night. We are on our way to find Him. He will be in a stable at the foot of the hill. Come, join us."

OBSERVES FROM AFAR

Gaius Cassius declined the invitation but continued to watch the strange shepherds, as he concluded in disgust, "have surrendered their sanity to the Jewish superstition." Still, he must admit, they do sing beautifully. Never have I heard such singing as came through the hills this night."

The tribune made his way back to the inn in a greatly agitated frame of mind.

It took him two weeks to close out the rolls of Bethlehem. On the 12th day, the tribune called the old farewell to the Levite when it occurred to them that a legate had not been sent, at all, to inquire about the-heir of the carpenter from Nazareth.

"I will go myself," Gaius Cassius decided. "It will amuse to discover whether it was a boy after all."

SEES CARAVAN

The conjunction of the two planets still burned with a silvery luminescence as he made his way down the narrow street toward the abandoned stable. But something in the distance caught his eye, and he reined his horse up short. Through the barren branches of an olive tree, he could discern the outlines of a caravan of richly-caparisoned camels bend to dislodge three wise men from their backs ceremoniously, he approached and traded introductions.

"I am Melchior, from the kingdoms of the Nile," said the black-skinned one. "My saddle bags are filled with frankincense as a gift for the little king who was born in the dusty stable there, where the star sits."

"I am Melchior from the kingdom of sand and sun beyond the Euphrates," said the white-haired old man in the high, pointed cap. "Gold have I brought from our treasure house to welcome the new-born king."

CASPAR BRINGS MYRRH

"And I am Caspar, from the far-off land where the sun comes up and where the pungent myrrh hangs high on the bushes, giving forth an aroma fit for the burial of kings," said the little man with the almond eyes and the high cheekbones.

Those who were there that night, so legends imply, say that three kings from far off lands knelt in homage to the King of Kings, and that Joseph in his mother's lap while Joseph looked on proudly, near the door and out of sight, another king knelt in absentia.

Gaius Cassius Velutus, tribune of the people, taker of the census, emissary from the palatium, took off upon himself to kneel and adore upon behalf of his king, the mighty emperor Caesar Augustus.

Jimmy Hoffa Again Freed By Hung Jury

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP)—A federal judge has ordered a grand jury investigation of alleged attempts to influence jurors and prospective jurors in the lengthy $1,000,000 conspiracy trial of James R. Hoffa which ended with a deadlocked jury.

Three such attempts—including a report by one prospective juror that he had been offered $10,000—were disclosed Sunday as the nine-week trial came to a close.

The Dec. 6 and Dec. 20 court sessions, from which reporters and spectators were barred, immediately preceded the dismissal and replacement of two jurors.

Court records also showed that J. C. Tippins, a prospective juror, told the judge he had been offered $10,000. No mention of who made the offer was included in the report.

Tippins was excused the fourth time in five years that the justice department had failed to put the president of the Teamsters Union behind bars. Several jurors said the jury was 7 to 5 for acquittal.

Hoffa was accused of conspiring with a Michigan car-hauling firm to violate federal labor laws that ban payoffs from employers to union officials. The complex trial began Oct. 22.

As he released the jurors, District Judge William E. Miller ordered a prompt and thorough investigation into mysterious secret FBI testimony that two Hoffa associates tampered with or tried to influence two members of the jury. The two jurors were replaced by alternates earlier this month.

The jury received the case Friday and deliberated a total of 14 hours, including three hours Sunday. Upon receiving the jury's fourth report that it was hopelessly deadlocked, the judge dismissed the panel.

Hoffa said the was disappointed he was not acquitted, but gratified he wasn't convicted.

James F. Neal, special assistant to Attorney-General Robert Kennedy in charge of prosecutor, said he had no idea whether the government would seek a retrial.

Hoffa charged the Kennedy administration, particularly Attorney-General Kennedy, was out to get him.

WRITING IN VAIN

LONDON (CP) — A Labor member of parliament complained that the pensions ministry keeps sending letters to a man who has been dead 11 years. Pensions Minister Niall Macpherson replied: "Presumably it must be because the man has not been able to inform the department he is dead."

Three Defence Questions Face Canadian Govt. After Round of Talks in Nassau

NASSAU (CP)—Three important Defence questions, all involving in some way nuclear weapons, face the Canadian government following the Macmillan-Kennedy and Macmillan-Diefenbaker talks here last week.

The first is whether to give Canada's blessing to creation of a multilateral nuclear NATO force as proposed by President Kennedy and Prime Minister Macmillan in the communique concluding their talks.

The second is whether Canada should play any part in the Polaris missile force which the American and British leaders agreed would be made available for inclusion in a NATO multilateral nuclear force.

The third is whether to arm Canadian air squadrons in NATO with nuclear bombs—for inclusion in the grouping of armed forces which would represent a first step in a NATO nuclear force.

Prime Minister Diefenbaker holidaying here until late this week following talks with Macmillan Friday and Saturday, told correspondents that the first and third questions are matters for the Canadian government and people to decide.

In effect, he said the American and British proposals for a NATO multilateral nuclear force will require agreement from Canada and the other Anglo-American part of NATO.

In addition, he seemed to indicate Canadian rejection of Canadian forces in NATO are a prime political issue for a domestic election.

He declined to say whether Canada approved of a NATO nuclear force. But this too may have repercussions on the Canadian political arena since one of the three opposition groups which together outnumber Diefenbaker's Progressive Conservatives in the Commons, has rejected the idea of NATO becoming an independent nuclear power.

T. C. Douglas, New Democratic Party leader said in a statement issued from his office in Ottawa that Canada "must oppose as strongly as it knows how the disastrous proposal to transform NATO into an independent nuclear power."

Lester B. Pearson, leader of the Liberal party, has announced that a NATO nuclear force under multilateral control would be preferable to one where control rested with individual members of the alliance. Mr. Pearson said the government has a choice of either giving the RCAF's European squadrons atomic weapons to fulfil their assigned role, or change the role.

The question of a Canadian role in the Polaris missile force depends, in Diefenbaker's view, on whether the proposal is acceptable to NATO and whether Canada is asked to help.

A Washington report indicated last week that Canada may be asked to train and crews for maintenance and operations. But a decision on this would be immediate urgency/because the NATO alliance/has not yet accepted the Anglo-American offer and probably won't do so at least until the spring meeting of the NATO council in Ottawa.

The question of a nuclear weapon for the Canadian CF-104 squadrons in NATO may have been complicated by the Nassau discussions.

The plane was designed to carry a tactical nuclear bomb and the eight Canadian squadrons are expected to be fully equipped with it by April. Thus the arming of the plane would have had to be decided relatively soon.

However, Macmillan and Kennedy agreed that a start might be made immediately on a multilateral NATO nuclear force by American U.S. strategic forces, British bomber forces and tactical nuclear forces now held in Europe."

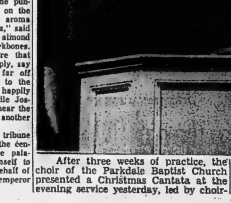
The CF-104 was adopted for the Canadian nuclear role so the Canadian government also faces the question of whether to arm it with a nuclear bomb and turn it over to a multilateral NATO nuclear force as a Canadian contribution.

Nun Is Killed, 50 Injured in Chain Collision

SANTA ANA, Calif. (AP) — A woman motorist was killed and the fog-bound Santa Ana Freeway with a flat tire Saturday and 200 evening rush-hour cars —one of the biggest chain collisions in California history.

Sister Mary Rose Celeste was killed and 50 other persons hurt.

Sixty of the cars were total wrecks, police said.



Off-duty sheriff's deputy Robert W. Bolling, one of the motorists involved, said he was southbound and visibility was "zero" when he suddenly noticed a car in front of him drifting backwards.

"I hit the car and then I got hit twice. I stopped, got some flares and ran back to place them.

"From then on you could hear the crunch of metal on freeway—boom, boom, boom, all the way down the line."

Police Officer Bolling's car, Sister Mary Refuge, 28, was riding in the back seat of a sedan, Eunice Lee Hoffman, St. Francis home of Santa Ana were in front.

Truck driver Burton L. McAllister said he was driving behind them when suddenly the nun's car spun sideways and hit another car. His truck crushed the nun's car broadside.

Aeroson 'Snows' Aid To Novel Decorations

For the party-minded, aerosol "snows" can be used in making novel table decorations from such simple materials as pine cones, boughs, and sprigs of holly. Colorful centrepieces for candlelight suppers can be made with a short length of birch log, drilled to hold red candles, and then sprayed with snow.

With a little ingenuity and imagination, the homemaker can use the white and colored snows in "spray painting" simple Christmas designs on window panes or glass surfaces. Cut-out paper or cardboard masks can be made for each color area.

For best results, the aerosol snow should be sprayed from a distance of about 24 inches—the greater distance, the fluffier the deposit of simulated snow.

Sue Barnaby, folding the evening newspaper, glanced speculatively at her husband. If he'd read the announcement of Michael Haines' return to the Feather Room, he was certainly keeping quiet about it.

"Bill, let's go dancing at the Feather Room tonight. Celebrate Christmas". She tried to keep her voice calm. She knew she was foolish to have a crush on Michael Haines after all these years. "Mother'll stay with the boys".

"Sure. Let's celebrate Christmas at the Feather Room". Bill scowled as he ran one square hand over his thinning brown hair. "I'd like to see if Michael's wearing a toupee".

She saw he was neither fat nor wearing a toupee.

"Bill Barnaby, you know Michael doesn't wear a toupee!" Oh, why did she always defend Michael?

SUSPICION

"I know nothing of the sort. Not only that, but I suspect he's put on weight, too".

Later, at the Feather Room when Sue saw Michael on the bandstand, she saw at once he was neither fat nor wearing a toupee. Bill would be miserable all night. Watching Bill, Sue felt her heart tighten, reached for his hand as Michael approached their table.

"Sue! Bill! Swell of you to come!" Michael's handsome face lit up. After all, they were old friends. But she didn't like the way Bill looked. He became more and more depressed as Sue and Michael caught up on the last ten years. Before returning to the orchestra, Michael spoke gravely, looking at both Bill and Sue. "You're a lucky couple! It's been great seeing you again. Merry Christmas!"

THOUGHTFUL

Sue was unusually quiet on the way home, staring silently into the gray night. No cooing, no humming, no tapping of feet. "Bill what'd you think of Michael?" She spoke abruptly but Bill didn't even turn his head.

Bill cocked his head and looked closely at Sue, who continued:

"Well, first of all, you spent two years in the army, and not singing, either. Then when you came home, you started the used car lot with barely more than our own car, and then you got the agency, and now you have a whole city block, with new cars and used cars and a garage, and everything. Why, we even have money in the bank! And the boys, and our own home—"

"Yeah, I know but—"

"And that Michael Haines isn't one bit different in ten years. Not one bit! He even has all his hair". Sue moved closer to Bill. "Don't you think Michael could have done better after all this time? He's right back at the Feather Room where he started".

"You forgot one thing, Sue. Ten years ago Michael got a measley hundred bucks a week for bewitching the crowd at the Feather Room. For his return engagement, he hauls in about five thousand a week. You can't exactly say the guy's stood still. I won't say he's great or anything like that, but I'll give him credit".

Sue noticed there was no anger in Bill's voice, no sign of jealousy. It was just like him to sense it the minute she changed toward Michael. "How come you're getting so generous all of a sudden?"

"From now on you can hum all you want. Tap your feet, too, if you like".

Sue smiled and felt relieved it was all over at last. Michael was right about one thing. She and Bill were a lucky couple.

TWINS AND TRAINS . . . Two sets of twin boys peek over table edge at train display in department store, presenting a scene that is repeated thousands of times over from one end of the country to the other. Youngsters find Christmas shopping an exciting adventure.

"Merry Christmas, Bill", she whispered, thankful they'd gone to the Feather Room to celebrate, knowing in the dark Bill was happy, too.

Christmas In Summer

The Christmas season in Brazil begins on Christmas Eve and ends with Epiphany on January 6.

And because it is really summertime (south of the equator) festivities and entertainment appropriate to summer-time hold sway throughout the season.

Miracle plays are performed in adoration of the Holy Child. Many take the form of elaborate dances meticulously performed and accompanied by music or an orchestra. The Dance of the Four Parts of the World is a typical example.

The roles are enacted by girls dressed for the part and, in succession, Europe, Asia, Africa and America declaim. The discussion finally involves their respective rights to make obligation to the Christ Child. Eventually, Father Time appears and settles the dispute to the satisfaction of all concerned.

Look for 'Guarantee' On Christmas Gifts

Shoppers eyeing appliances as Christmas gifts should double check on the "guarantee" or "warranty" which accompany them.

Nearly 50 per cent of the total small appliances—frypans, can openers, steam irons, knife sharpeners, shavers, coffee makers, etc.—are purchased as Christmas gifts.

To protect consumers, the Federal Trade Commission requests that advertising mentioning the word "guarantee" clearly state what the guarantee includes. Industry also works for honest advertising, yet misleading or incomplete statements creep into claims — to the extent that what appears a "bargain" may not really be one when all the facts are known.

Greeting's True Spirit

"I am come that you might have life and have it more abundantly."

In these words, are the true meaning of Christmas. Jesus Himself said it . . .

"For the Son of man is come to seek and save that which was lost."

The birth of the Infant Saviour is more than the birth of a child; it is the fulfillment of the promise of God.

The happiest Christmas of all will belong to those who reach out with their heart for the true spirit of Christmas.

McINTOSH BROS.
STORES LIMITED

The Christmas season is one of bells. Mildred kept telling herself this simple fact all morning as she worked behind the toy counter. As noon drew near she found herself saying it through clenched teeth. At one minute to twelve she made a grab for her hat and started for the door. She had to get outside before the dinner bell rang!

"Hello Millie! What's the rush?"

It was her friend Annie. Mildred's momentum carried the two of them through the big doors and into the street. Even there she could hear the muted sound of the noon bell within the store. "Those crazy bells are driving me crazy!" she said as she put her hat on backwards.

"I think bells are jolly. What would a wedding be without them!"

About two o'clock a young woman and her daughter approached the counter.

"That's different," said Mildred straightening her hat.

"I'll trade you jobs," said Mildred.

"Mr. Johnson wouldn't let us do that. Even simple jobs like ours take a few days to learn; and this is Christmas Eve."

"Thank goodness for that, Annie! I couldn't listen to bells for another whole day without going batty."

Annie laughed. "It's all in the mind. Bells are wonderful, especially at Christmas."

"Sure. But if one more kid runs around my counter pulling some fiendish contraption with bells on it — I'll quit!"

"And miss your Christmas bonus? You're kidding!"

EAR PLUGS

But Mildred was serious. After lunch she bought some cotton to plug her ears. The bells had given her a slight headache. About two o'clock a woman and her young daughter approached the counter.

"Do you sell toy xylophones, ma'am?" asked the woman.

Mildred groaned. She'd purposely hidden the noisy little instruments under the counter. She brought out a xylophone and held it up for the woman to admire. "This looks nice, doesn't it?" she asked.

"Well, isn't there a hammer to go with it?"

Mildred reluctantly produced a hammer.

The woman smiled at her daughter, "Now I'll play Silent Night, dear."

The girl looked like she was ready to burst into laughter. "Was this a joke? Mildred reached for the instrument. "You want to buy it?" she asked hopefully.

"My daughter wants to try it."

The girl didn't seem to notice Mildred's scowl. She touched the xylophone gingerly with the hammer. "It's beautiful!" she said, her eyes shining.

"Beautiful!" asked Mildred. "Are you kidding!"

"Oh mother, I'm the happiest girl in the world! What a marvelous Christmas present!"

Mildred's jaw fell. "This?", she said picking up the toy to check the price.

GOOD REASON

The woman laughed. "You don't understand, miss. My daughter has really never heard anything until today. Her father and I have been saving to buy her a special kind of hearing-aid. That's the present she's talking about."

Mildred turned to the delighted girl. "Have you ever heard a music-box, honey?"

The child shook her head. Ordinary speech still puzzled her. Mildred brought out a music-box and wound it up.

The little girl clapped her hands.

Mildred proceeded to demonstrate the other toys. She was on her knees prattling over a waddly-duck with bells on it when she saw Annie and Mr. Johnson watching her. "Aren't bells wonderful?" she asked.

Mr. Johnson shook his head sadly. Annie began wiping her eyes.

"Oh, now look! It's not what you think. This little girl has a new hearing-aid and she's hearing Christmas sounds for the first time."

"Oh," they said in unison. "Merry Christmas, little girl!"

THE Miracle of Christmas

There is so much about Christmas that is all too obvious. Colored lights are everywhere. Store windows come alive with beautiful decorations and a seemingly endless array of toys and gifts. Up and down every street in town, windows and doorways are bedecked in mistletoe, holly and evergreen.

Christmas cards and street-corner Santas, the sound of the postman at the door, the sight and aroma of good things to eat . . . these are undeniable signs of the season.

Less obvious, perhaps, is the change that comes over people, with very few exceptions. Each individual seems to find new purpose, new incentive. He hurries more than usual, yet he is quicker to smile, less impatient and somewhat more tolerant of his fellow human beings.

We cannot describe it adequately except to say that it must be in some small way the miracle of Christmas at work. It has to be; it comes from the heart. It is irresistible. It is compulsive. There is no other explanation.

Amid all the outward trappings of the season — and, perhaps, in spite of them — the miracle of Christmas shines forth from the human heart.

The miracle of Christmas—mankind's greatest heritage—was brought with quiet unassuming dignity into the hearts and minds of living men and women. There it has remained, through centuries of oppression, persecution, and the impartial attrition of time.

Despots, dictators and disbelievers have had their day in history's pages. Good "isms" and bad "isms" have made their mark upon the walls of time. But these change their patterns with the progress of humanity.

Down through the ages the one, single dominating influence upon generations of men and women has been the miracle of Christmas, the simple affirmation of the heritage and dignity that belongs to none but mankind among myriad creatures of land and sea and sky.

Man is a social creature, created in the image of eternity. It is through — and because of — the miracle of Christmas that hope springs eternal in the human breast.

"For on this day is born unto the world a Saviour." In these simple words we find the strength of Christianity . . . the miracle of Christmas which bestowed upon mankind the inalienable right to merit eternal salvation.

Great Story Was Hidden For Centuries

Through his unforgettable Christmas stories, Charles Dickens brought the spirit of Christmas to millions, and achieved much fame during his lifetime.

One of his most moving narratives, however, remained hidden from the world for years, at his own request. Some one hundred years after it was written exclusively for the enjoyment of his children, Dickens' "The Life of Our Lord" was first presented to the world.

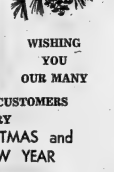
The author's deep veneration for the life and lessons of Jesus Christ are found in these words:

"Everybody ought to know about Him. No one ever lived who was so good, so kind, so gentle, and so sorry for people who did wrong or were in any way ill and miserable, as He was.

"And as He is now in Heaven, where we all hope to go, and all meet each other after we are dead, and there be happy always together, you can never think what a good place heaven is, without knowing who He was and what He did."

Dickens left instructions that "The Life of Our Lord" not be commercialized and it was never made public until the year 1933, after the death of Sir Henry Fielding Dickens, the author's youngest child.

The literary prize was then purchased by the London Daily Mail for the price of $210,000—or $15 per word.



Caution!

What does your living room look like on Christmas morning? If your home is average, it's mess! In fact, it is not a very safe place.

Some folks buy their trees so early that the tree becomes dry and dangerous by Christmas morning. Tree lights left burning day and night have caused needles to become dry and many of them have fallen to the floor, which is also covered with gift wrappings.

One electric spark, the careless dropping of a match or cigarette—and a happy holiday ends quite suddenly. Don't let it happen to you.

UNCLE GUS AND CHRISTMAS

BY ONA F. LAYBOP

The sweet smells of Christmas cookies baking in the old range-oven wafted in where I was deep in a Jack London adventure. The little kids were scrapping on the floor, but for once Mom didn't seem to care. Sister Suzy usually kept them amused, but she was frosting the cookies for Mom.

"Tommy, come here," Mom called. I laid my book down with a sigh. The Eskimos were just coming to meet the sledge team.

"You bundle up and take a box of these cookies to old Uncle Gus. I don't care if your father won't speak to him —It's Christmas and I can't bear to think of him in that big house alone." My dad said Uncle Gus was the meanest man in town when he refused us a loan to pay down on our ramshackle house — even if he was his own uncle and president of the bank.

"Who's meddling with my door?"

"Dad won't like it, and, I'm afraid to go in," I argued.

"Just knock at the door then, or leave them in his mailbox. A twelve-year-old boy shouldn't be afraid of an old man."

DAYDREAM

It was a long hike across town to Uncle Gus's place. I mushed along pretending I was taking supplies to the starving Eskimos. When I came near the big house among all the swanky ones, I eyed it cautiously. There wasn't a mailbox in sight or I'd have stuffed the cookies in and run. Maybe I could put them between the storm door and the big glass one. I fumbled with the latch, but it was stuck. Suddenly the door was flung open in my face.

"Who's meddling with my door?" the crotchety old man snarled. I had to tell him then who I was and why I'd come.

"Cookies, eh! Christmas—bah! Who knew it was Christmas? Folderol, spendin' money on such stuff. Your ma oughta be savin' it to pay on that old shack your dad bought. But come in, boy, don't stand there lettin' in the cold.

"I can't. My feet—I'll track," I hesitated.

"Where's your boots? Soaked to your ankles with no soles! Just like ne'er-do-wells —sending their kids out half-clothed."

That made me mad. "I've got better shoes, but I'm saving them for school. And my folks are not ne'er-do-wells. My dad pays his bills and our house has warmer-looking rooms than this barn of a place ever had."

I had stepped inside now, even though there were puddles dripping on the fine rugs, and I looked about at the high ceilings and the carved stair rail and the antique furniture.

"Chip off the old block, eh! Just like your spunky dad and mother. Wouldn't move in here when your Aunt Sarah died. Oh, no, wanted a place of their own to raise a lot of kids, they said. How many is it now—four? Disgraceful."

He was opening the cookies and in among them Suzy had tucked one she'd frosted with scrawled pink letters—"Merry Xmas to Uncl Gus." He picked it up and fumbled with it a long time.

"Who did this?" he grumbled.

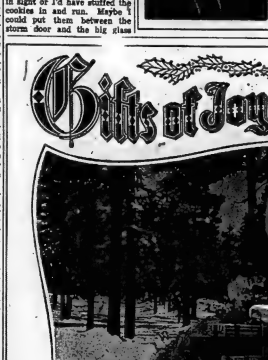
"My little sister, Suzy. She's a funny kid," I had to grin.

He looked at me straight then with watery old faded-blue eyes. He blew his nose like a truck-horn, and stood the cookie on the mantel.

"I've got to go now," I said, edging out. "Merry Christmas."

"Wait a minute boy," he roared. "You think there'd be an extry place at the table for an old man, if he'd send a turkey and a few around? That cookie makes me think of, the way your Aunt Sarah used to frost up things for Christmas every year. Seems as if it might be nice to meet Suzy and make up to my only living relatives for the mean way I've been. And here, get yourself some new boots."

That sure was a tear in his right eye! "You come along," I said. "My Mom will always set an extra place—turkey or not."



And I ducked out of the door with the crisp bill and rushed home.

Rams Upset Woodstock

Bulldogs Beat Tigers

BY THE CANADIAN PRESS

Windsor Bulldogs widened their first-place margin in the Ontario Hockey Association Senior A standings Sunday by scoring an 8-3 win over Kitchener-Waterloo Tigers at Windsor while the tail-end Sarnia Rams upset the second-place Woodstock Athletics by the same score at Sarnia.

The combination left Windsor with 38 points, four more than Woodstock. Chatham Maroons, 6-0 victors over Galt Terriers in Sunday's third game, are in third place with 32 points. Galt has 18, Kitchener-Waterloo 17 and Sarnia, with two wins in 24 games, four.

Ron Urry's steady goalending gave Sarnia its unexpected win over Woodstock. He stopped 44 shots, including 22 in the second period.

Willie Menard had three goals and two assists for Sarnia and Paul Crawley had two goals. Single goals were scored by Tom Clark, Ray Morton and Jimmy Bloomfield. Woodstock scorers were Andy Gauthier, Tom Wilson and Gerry Theberge.

EXTEND STREAK

At Windsor, Bulldogs ran their record to 12 wins in 13 games. Jerry Servias, Jack Coytello and Tom Walker scored two goals apiece while Irwin Gross and Budd Hillman got the others. For Kitchener-Waterloo, Reg Whaley, Don Duke and Mac Dubois scored.

The Chatham victory came before the club's smallest crowd of the season, 596 fans. Chatham goaltender Al Bennett, the top goalie in the league, got his fourth shutout of the season.

Two defencemen, Don McGregor with two goals and an assist, and Jack Douglas, with a goal and three assists, led Chatham. Converted defenceman Gus Mortson, George Ustalo and Ted Fewer had the other Chatham goals.

Next league action is Boxing Day when Windsor is at Kitchener.

First To Score 20 Goals ★★★★★

Big M Leads Leafs To Second Place

BY THE CANADIAN PRESS

After a sluggish start, big Frank Mahovlich, of Toronto has taken off on a scoring streak that could propel him past the National Hockey League's 50-goal season record.

The 196-pound left winger became the season's first 20-goal scorer with a goal in each of the Leafs' two weekend victories. Toronto beat New York 4-2 Saturday night and then edged Boston 5-4 Sunday.

In other weekend games Montreal tied Chicago 1-1 Saturday and then tied Detroit 2-2 Sunday. Chicago crushed New York 3-1 Sunday night.

Mahovlich's two goals kept up the torrid goal-a-game pace he has set in the last 18 games. He managed only seven in his first 18 games.

He will get 45 goals this season if he maintains his output of 20 goals in 31 games.

But if his goal-a-game streak continues much longer—and the Big M is one of the league's streak scorers—he'll shoot past the 50-goal mark, held jointly by Maurice Richard and Bernie Geoffrion of Montreal and Chicago's Bobby Hull. Mahovlich threatened to break the record in 1960-61, but tapered off to end the season with 48 goals.

HEADS HULL'S PACE

Hull took 44 games to get his first 20 goals when he tied the record last season. At present, he has nine goals while at this point last year he had 13.

Montreal's Claude Provost was the league's first 20-goal scorer last year, taking 33 games to do it. But he wound up with only 33 goals.

In Mahovlich's 18 - game streak, three times have come correspondingly well. They won eight, tied three and lost only two to take 19 of a possible 26 points.

Instead of being in fourth place, as they were early this season, they are now in second spot, two points behind league-leading Chicago. Leafs have played two fewer games than the Hawks.

Detroit follows two points behind in third spot, and Canadiens are two points behind them in fourth spot. Rangers are fifth with 24 points and Bruins sixth with 16.

IN A 5-WAY TIE

Mahovlich, a 24-year-old native of Timmins, Ont. who jumped directly from junior hockey into the NHL and won the best-rookie award, moved into a four-way tie for first place in the league scoring race with his two goals and an assist.

Chicago's Stan Mikita, Detroit veterans Gordie Howe and Norm Ullman and New York's Andy Bathgate have 31 points also. All have 13 goals and 18 assists.

Mahovlich scored the winning goal with a 25-foot scorcher in Toronto Saturday night. Toronto's Ron Stewart and New York's Camille Henry scored first-period goals, and Toronto defenceman Tim Horton gave Leafs a 2-1 lead with a close-in goal mid-way through the second period.

HALL ALSO BUSY

In Montreal's 1-1 tie with Chicago Saturday night, Hawks' goalie Glenn Hall was outstanding, stopping Canadiens at his doorstep time after time. Hawks were outshot 32-20.

Chicago coach Billy Pilous was disappointed with his players performance after the game and said:

"They would have given the game away if it hadn't been for Glenn."

Hull scored Chicago's goal with little more than a minute gone in the game.

Centre Jean Beliveau—playing his best game of the season—set up Montreal's goal by Bobby Rousseau 19 minutes later.

Montreal didn't use defenceman Tom Johnson, recovering from a wrist injury, or offered as trade material by Montreal general manager Frank Selke.

Montreal coach Toe Blake said he might bring defenceman Jacques Laperriere up from Hull-Ottawa Canadiens of the Eastern Professional League for Tuesday's game.

LEAFS SHOW POWER

In Boston Sunday night, Leafs struck with amazing power in five goals in the second period —including Mahovlich's 20th—but then had to hold on for a 5-4 win.

Eddie Shack scored two of Toronto's goals. Captain George Armstrong scored his 13th of the year, with centre Bob Pulford adding the remaining Leaf goal. Irv Spencer and 21-year-old Tommy Williams scored for Boston in the last five minutes of the second period to make the score 5-2.

Williams and defenceman Doug Mohns scored for Boston in the third period to make it 5-4, and the siren sounded with six Boston attackers, buzzing around the Toronto goal.

Spencer was switched to defence from forward for the Field Goal Gives Dallas Title

HOUSTON (AP)—Tom Brooker's 24-yard field goal in the second overtime period brought Dallas Texans a 20-17 victory over Houston Oilers in the American Football League championship game Sunday.

Houston, league champions for the first two years of the game, will came through with a goal and two assists.

In New York Sunday night, Mikita scored his 13th goal of the season in the last period to clinch the Hawks' 3-1 win. Ron Murphy and rookie Chico Maki had given Hawks a quick 2-0 lead in the first period.

Bathgate scored his 13th goal of the year to bring the Rangers to within a goal, but then Hall came through with point-blank saves on Bathgate and Camille Henry to keep the Chicago lead intact. Hall only saves compared with Worsley's 28.

Hawks have won all seven of their games with Rangers this year.

In Montreal's 2-2 tie at Detroit Sunday night, rookie centre Alex Faulkner gave Montreal a 1-0 lead in the first period with his seventh goal of the season.

Veteran defenceman Bill Gadsby scored in the second period to move Detroit into a 2-0 lead. Again the kid line of Faulkner, Larry Jeffrey and Bruce Gamble was on the ice for the goal.

But Canadiens scored twice in the last period to produce the tie. Gilles Tremblay scored his 13th goal of the season and Billy Hicke added the tying goal with less than two minutes left.

Detroit has yet to beat Canadiens after tripping them up 3-1 in the season opener in Detroit.

The game featured a wrestling match late in the first period between two of the league's bad men—Howie Young of Detroit and Montreal's Lou Fontinato got a 10-minute misconduct.

All six teams play Christmas night. Montreal travels to Chicago and Toronto goes to Boston in crucial games, while the two tail-enders, Boston and New York, play at Boston.

Aces Grab Lead

Clippers Clipped Twice

BY THE CANADIAN PRESS

It was a bad weekend all round for Baltimore Clippers in the American Hockey League.

Springfield Indians trapped them 5-1 Saturday and on Sunday the Clippers arrived an hour and 15 minutes late for a game at Quebec and took it on the chin from the Aces.

With their 5-2 win over the unlucky Clippers, whose bus was delayed by snow, the Aces moved into a three-point lead in the Eastern Division.

Springfield's win moved the Indians into a three-way tie for second place with Hershey Bears and Providence Reds. The Reds, with a chance to move into first place with a pair of wins, lost 8-2 to Hershey Sunday and 5-1 to Pittsburgh Hornets Saturday.

Hershey moved up the ladder with the win over the Reds and a 5-2 victory over Rochester Americans Saturday.

BISONS LOSE TWO

Buffalo Bisons, leaders in the Western Division, dropped two weekend games, 6-5 to Cleveland Barons Saturday and 3-2 to Pittsburgh Sunday, but still hold a nine-point edge over second-place Rochester, which fought to a 2-2 tie with Cleveland Sunday.

Danny Lewicki, Claude Labrosse, Guy Rousseau, Terry Gray and Skippy Burchell scored for Quebec Sunday. Leon Rochefort and Don Johns replied for Baltimore.

Ed Joyal, Howie Glover and Bob Dillabough gave Pittsburgh its win over Buffalo. The Bison marksmen were Brian Smith and Ian Cushenan.

Hershey came up with five third - period goals to dump Providence. Pete Conacher, Willie Marshall, Les Duff, Wayne Rivers and Keke Mortsiaman and Pirre Brillant scored for the losers.

Cleveland had to overcome a 2-0 deficit to tie Rochester for its first point on the road this season. Jean Ubriaco and Jim Pappin had given the Americans a lead and Jim Mikol and Hank Ciesla wiped it out.

Bruce Cline, Jimmy Anderson, Brian Kilrea, Bill Sweeney and Larry Hillman scored for Springfield Saturday. The lone Baltimore goal was notched by Vic Hadfield.

Dillabough scored twice for Pittsburgh against Providence and Eddie Joyal, Howie Menard and Keith Walsh got one apiece. Eddie Mazur was the Providence marksman.

Barry Cullen scored three

Brooker had given Dallas a 3-0 lead in the first quarter with a 15-yard field goal. Two second-quarter touchdowns jumped Dallas to a 17-0 lead at half-time. Dawson engineered an 80-yard drive, passing the final 28 yards to Abner Haynes.

SCORES SECOND TD

Haynes got his second touchdown from the two-yard line minutes later on the seventh play after Dave Grayson returned an interception 30 yards to the Oiler 29.

Houston took the second-half kickoff and struck 67 yards in six plays for its first touchdown. Willard Dewveall scoring on a 15-yard Blanda pass.

The Oilers used a Blanda field goal, and a one-yard touchdown run by Charlie Tolar for 10 points in the final quarter to gain the 17-17 tie.

Frank (Pop) Ivy, who coached Edmonton Eskimos to three Grey Cup championships while in Canada, was the losing coach Sunday. He came to Houston this year after coaching St. Louis Cardinals of the National Football League last season.

Mike Mahoney and Morrison scored two goals apiece to lead Hershey over Rochester. The other scorer for the Bears was Myron Stankiewicz. Rochester marksmen were Dick Gamble and Lou Angotti

Montreal Canadiens moved back into first place in the Ontario Hockey Association Provincial Junior A group standings Sunday with a narrow 4-3 win over the fourth-place Hamilton Red Wings.

Peterborough Petes had taken over first place by one point Thursday, but were idle over the weekend. In other weekend action, Guelph Royals tied St. Catharines Black Hawks 4-4 Saturday night.

Montreal notched its victory when left-winger Germain Gagnon scored with less than a minute to play. Leo Thiffault, Yvan Cournoyer and Bob Charlebois scored the other Montreal goals. Earl Heiskala, Paul Henderson and Nick Libett scored for Hamilton.

Saturday night, the last-place Guelph club took a 4-1 lead over St. Catharines in the first 11 minutes but barely held on for the tie.

St. Catharines is in fifth place, four points ahead of Guelph.

Trevor Fahey, Bruce Rier, Gary Sabourin and Borden Smith scored for Guelph. John Brenneman had two for St. Catharines and Paul Popeil and Don Snider one each.

It was the second game for Guelph goalie Dave Quarrie, who was acquired from the Kitchener Greenshirts junior B club. His first game was an upset win over Montreal.

Hurricane Blows Down Mr. Mims

NEW YORK (AP) — Rubin (Hurricane) Carter stormed back from a fourth - round knockdown to take a unanimous decision from veteran Holly Mims of Washington in a 10-round bout at Madison Square Garden Saturday night.

Carter, from Paterson, N.J., weighed 153½ pounds, Mims, a last-minute substitute for Gomez Brennan of Bimini, British West Indies, weighed 160½.

Brennan was replaced after the weigh-in at the New York State Athletic Commission at noon when he complained of a heavy cold Mims, notified that he was to fight at 3 p.m., arrived in New York less than four hours before the fight.

However, the veteran of 86 bouts gave a good account of himself, scoring the only knockdown of the bout in the fourth round and finishing with a flourish that earned him an "even" vote on two official scorecards in the last run.

Referee Joe Lo Scalzo and Judge Tony Castellano both had the fierce-looking Carter ahead, six rounds to three, with one even. Judge Tony Rossi scored it 7-3. The Associated Press tally was 7-3-1 for Carter.

KAMLOOPS, B.C. (CP) — Grant Warwick, former coach of Penticton Vs, said Saturday it was a big mistake to send Saskatoon Quakers to Europe.

Warwick, playing coach of the Vs when they won the world hockey championship in 1955, said:

"There was a time when any team could pronounce the best Europe had to offer but that's a thing of the past."

The Quakers have taken some severe trouncings on their tour.

Sweden, Czechoslovakia and the Soviet Union are beating Canadians at their own game, Warwick said.

"They have learned how to use their bodies to good advantage. Their players are in superior condition and they have mastered the art of passing."

Warwick said an international hockey league linking Canada with Sweden, Czechoslovakia and the Soviet Union will be a reality in five years.

"This isn't something I've just dreamed up," he said. "This thing has been coming for two years."

The progress made by Europeans and the quickness of jet travel made the idea feasible, he said.

Big Seven

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Another deadlock developed in the National Hockey League's individual scoring race during the weekend.

Big Frank Mahovlich picked up his 19th and 20th goals and an assist in Toronto's two games. Andy Bathgate netted a goal in each of the New York's two outings. Chicago's Stan Mikita scored once in two games and Gordie Howe was held scoreless in Detroit's only game.

That makes 31 points for all four players.

Mahovlich has the edge technically since he has scored most goals. The other have 13 goals and 18 assists each.

Two points behind the leaders are three players tied for fifth place with 29—Boston's Johnny Bucyk, Chicago's Ab McDonald and Boston's Murray Oliver.

The leaders:

PRAGUE (AP) — A junior Czechoslovak national hockey team beat Canada's touring Saskatoon Quakers 5-4 Sunday in a match played at Zilina, Slovakia, the official news agency CTK reported.

Saturday night at Bratislava the Canadians gained the first victory of their 13-game European tour, defeating the Czech national A team 6-3. Right-winger Jackie McLeod scored three of the goals and assisted on a fourth.

In Sunday's game the juniors did all of their scoring in the first period and the Quakers all of theirs in the third.

The Canadian side had a slow start, CTK said. This helped the Czechoslovaks to overwhelm the visitors in the first period.

During the second period, the Canadians rallied and kept their goal clean.

In the last period, the Quakers went all out in their effort to tie the score.

Some 6,000 fans packing the local rink cheered when the visiting team scored four goals by defenceman George Hunchuk and two each by McLeod and Bill Lindsay.

The Quakers were without the service of defence stalwart Clements Harry Smith and Don Fletcher Sunday. The pair, borrowed from Trail Smoke Eaters after the Canadians were badly beaten in their first games in Sweden, had to leave for home after the Bratislava game.

In that game Smith, George Senick and Frank Summa added single goals to McLeod's three.

Western Hockey

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Ten days ago Seattle Totems had the jets in a fresh, first place club, stood up through a fast 65 minutes of hockey, and treated their fans to a 2-1 overtime victory over the powerful Portland Buckaroos.

They haven't won since. Six games in nine exhausting days have taken the toll of a Western Hockey League team that seems old at an average age of 28.

Totems entered the seven-game stretch with a three-point lead over Vancouver Canucks in the Northern Division. Now they trail Canucks by a point and Vancouver has played four fewer games.

Seattle lost 6-1 to the Blades in Los Angeles Saturday and 7-5 to the Vancouver Seals Sunday.

Sunday night, the Buckaroos trounced Los Angeles 6-2 after a 6-3 loss to Spokane Comets Saturday. In another Saturday game, Edmonton Flyers defeated Calgary Stampeders 3-2 in overtime.

Totems fell behind 6-0 Sunday night before Jim Powers scored at 18:10 of the second period. Seattle got third-period goals from Guyle Fielder and Jim Pappin, Art Sticknell, Les Haley and Moe Mantha each scored twice and Jean Marc Picard once for San Francisco.

Mexicans Confident
Aussies Top Favorites

BRISBANE, Australia (AP)—A young and confident Mexican team which has scored one upset after another will try to pull off the tennis coup of the century this week by wresting the Davis Cup from Australia.

The Australians, with the world's two top amateur players in Rod Laver and Roy Emerson, are heavily favored.

But, says Mexican captain Pancho Contreras, 28, himself a Davis Cupper: "We are completely unimpressed by Big names. We believe we are as good as the other side. We have come here to take back the cup."

The matches open Wednesday with two singles matches. The doubles are scheduled for Thursday and the final singles Friday.

The draw will be made Christmas Day.

The Mexicans are depending on two young men now completing their schooling in the United States. Rafael Osuna, 24, a lightning-quick natural athlete, attends the University of Southern California, and Antonio Palafox, 26, a brilliant but erratic stylist, attends Corpus Christi (Tex.) University.

Osuna is ranked by many as the fastest player in tennis, professional or amateur.

Palafox a diminutive stylist whose main drawback is his inconsistency. In top form he can beat the world's best—he defeated Laver at Bristol last June—but when things start going badly he is inclined to lose heart.

Hull Ottawa Takes Over EPL Lead

Kingston Frontenacs, in first place in the Eastern Professional Hockey League until Friday night, dropped two weekend games and fell two points back of Hull-Ottawa Canadiens.

Sudbury's third-place Wolves defeated Kingston 4-3 Saturday night and Hull-Ottawa did the trick Sunday with a 5-1 margin. Sudbury tied Syracuse Braves 4-4 in the U.S. city Sunday.

Kingston's losses were its fourth and fifth straight.

Grant Moore, a junior with Toronto Marlboros of the Metro Junior A League, scored his first professional goal for the winning margin for Sudbury Saturday. Dave McComb, Dave Richardson and Gord Labossiere were the other Sudbury scorers.

Don Blackburn, Randy Miller and Harry Sinden scored for Kingston.

Sunday, Bob Courcy scored three goals for Hull - Ottawa against Kingston. It was Canadiens' ninth straight win. Keith McCreary and Jacques Laperriere scored the other Canadien goals.

Sinden scored on a third-period screened shot to avert a shutout.

The Syracuse game was tied by Sudbury in the final minute when Dave Richardson scored after goalie Ed Babiuk had been lifted for an extra forward.

Ed Ehrenwirth, Marc Dufour and Jim Johnson were the other Sudbury scorers. Merv Kuryluk had two for Syracuse and Phil Esposito and Al Cares got the others.

Next action in the league is Boxing Day when Hull-Ottawa is at Kingston.

They'll Do It Every Time

By Jimmy Hatlo

Dean Of The Maritimes

Sports Editor Has Had Colorful Career

By ED SMITH

HALIFAX (CP) — The grey-haired little chap has emerged often enough from behind the mountain of paper routine and acrid veil of cigar smoke to disprove the idea that he's been a 42-year slave to routine.

Wilfred J. (Ace) Foley has been knocked out in the ring and then called a cheat, has stopped noon traffic on a main business street and has advocated public spanking in print.

At 57, Foley, supervising sports editor for the morning Chronicle-Herald and the evening Mail-Star, is the dean of Maritime sports writers.

Ace wryly admits the ball and chain of routine, early deadlines and greater attention to minor sport may not make for the most colorful job these days. But his personal 60-hour week is "a big break from the old days."

Mention of the old days invariably brings a distant look and stokes up a smoke screen and a flow of anecdotes. There's one about Dipper Lawson, for instance.

Lawson was highly rated for his boxing skill as an amateur and later as a pro in the 1920s but he was never rated as much of a puncher.

TOOK THE COUNT

One night Foley promoted a charity card and was persuaded to referee the bout in which Lawson was one of the principals. Lawson had contracted to throw a "friendly punch" at the guest referee.

As Lawson started to swing Ace moved the wrong way.

"I have no idea how long I was down but I do know that when I got up I was so mad I could have taken on the pair of them."

Foley, who has never weighed more than 135 — cigar and clothes included—says a hurried trip to a doctor averted a cauliflower ear "and Lawson went up in my estimation as a puncher."

Then there was the occasion of the Old Timers baseball game, sponsored by Ace for a pet charity. As sponsor and base umpire, he was more concerned about the health of the players than the result. Most of the veterans were padded with surplus fat. Ace decided to take steps against such possibilities as heart attacks.

"I'd get talking with a base-runner and signal behind my back for the pitcher to throw to a base. Then I'd call the runner out. Some got sore, but later thanked me after they'd looked at the next day's card and realized how far away it was."

Today's well-shaven Foley is the version that emerged from a chair placed in the middle of Barrington Street one spring afternoon in 1935.

Players on the 1934-35 Halifax Wolverines hockey team spent considerable time kidding him about his waxed moustache.

"I told them one night during the playoffs they could shave it off if they won the Allan Cup." The barbering piled up a lot of traffic.

Ace has attempted to promote a public spectacle only once since. In defence of strong-headed Halifax St. Mary's junior hockey team in 1947, and peeved over disdainful remarks by this writer, then a Sydney, N.S., sports columnist, Foley advocated in his column "Ace Even Break" that the Cape Breton scribe be publicly spanked. The spanking never took place.

Foley says he has been "retired" from sport twice. Once during the Second World War he was asked to fill in a six-month shift on the news desk of the Chronicle.

The second time was when The Chronicle merged with The Herald in the last week of 1948. On vacation at the time, he slipped back to write a farewell column, stayed at home for a week to look around for another job, then decided to telephone Chronicle-Herald managing editor R. J. Rankin. He recalls the reply was one of his happiest moments.

"What took you so long?" Rankin demanded.

South Squeaks Past North

Missouri Beats Tech

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

A 77-yard touchdown run by Bill Tobin in the third quarter Saturday gave Missouri a 14-10 victory over favored Georgia Tech in the fourth annual Bluebonnet Bowl football game at Houston, Tex.

The Bluebonnet Bowl was one of three main post-season college football games played in the U.S. Saturday. At Miami, Fla., the South managed a 15-14 victory over the North in the North - South All - Star game while at Orlando, Fla., the University of Houston beat Miami of Ohio 49-21 in the 17th annual Tangerine Bowl.

Tobin took advantage of a key block by Andy Russell in breaking up a defensive deadlock between Missouri and Georgia Tech.

A crowd of 35,000 saw the game.

PACES SOUTH

Only 16,953 fans watched the North - South game as Willie Richardson led the South to victory by scoring on an 80-yard pass play with 37 seconds to go.

The pass was thrown by Randy Kerbow. Then Kerry Woolum whipped another to teammate Dave Gash for the two extra points that made the difference.

University of Houston was sparked by some sensational running by halfback Joe Lopasky in defeating Miami of Ohio before 7,500 fans.

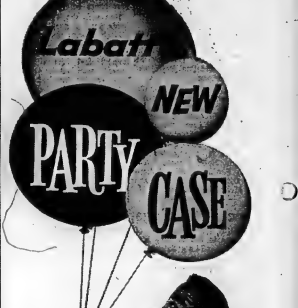
Lopasky scored four touchdowns, including a 70-yard punt return. The Texas team swapped touchdowns with the Ohio squad in the first, third and fourth quarters. But the Texans struck hard in the second for four tallies.



WINS GRAND PRIX

DURBAN, South Africa (AP) Trevor Taylor of Britain, leading throughout the final heat in a Lotus Climax V-8, won South Africa's second Grand Prix here Saturday. Second was Taylor's Lotus teammate, Jim Clark. Third was Richie Ginther of Granada Hills, Calif., driving a British BRM V-8, and fourth South African Neville Lederle in a Lotus Climax Four.

CBC Programs Will Reflect Yule Spirit

Music, joy, and the spirit of the season will be reflected throughout Christmas Day as the CBC radio network presents a full schedule of special programs.

Serving as a prelude to Christmas Day 1962, will be two Christmas Eve specials: the annual Sing With Bing, at 7.30 p.m., and Christmas Eve at St. James' Cathedral in Toronto, at 11.30 p.m., where the program of choral works will include a specially-composed motet by Harry Somers.

Among the highlights of the Christmas Day schedule itself will be the annual message, from Buckingham Palace, by Her Majesty the Queen, who will be addressing the people of the world. This address at 10 a.m., will follow the Commonwealth Broadcast, originating this year in New Zealand.

The Commonwealth Broadcast, at 9.30 a.m. will attempt to present the reactions of ordinary people to the world changes that have taken place since the war. Twelve Commonwealth countries will be participating in the program and among the people heard will be Mrs. Sirimavo Bandaranaike, Prime Ministeer of Ceylon.

P. M. TO SPEAK

Heard at 10.15 a.m. will be the Christmas address by Prime Minister John Diefenbaker followed by an address by President of the CBC Alphonse Ouimet.

As in past years, music will play an important part in the Christmas Day schedule. The Festival Singers of Toronto, directed by Elmer Iseler will be heard in the morning; songs and carols by choirs from across Canada will be featured throughout the afternoon; a program of English carols, by the Winnipeg Pops Concert and the Canadian String Quartet will be broadcast in the evening.

In the field of variety there will be the Wayne and Shuster Christmas show at 9.30 p.m. with a reunion of the old "radio gang": vocalist Terry Dale, announcer Herb May, and the musical direction of Sam Hersenhoren.

Earlier in the day, at 2.30 p.m., Hits and Misses, the annual Christmas show recorded at a performance before Canadian armed forces in Europe, will feature comedian Alec Read, the music of Phil Nimmons, vocalists Maurice Pearson and Andree Champagne, comedienne Pam Hyatt, and balladeer Stu Phillips.

Of a more serious nature are two programs in the talk and public affairs category; Christendom 1962, in which Catholic and Protestant clergymen talk of the possibility of greater Christian unity; and Assignment Christmas, in which, the words and voices of men such as Churchill, Gandhi and Einstein are used to illustrate the spirit and strength of wisdom through the ages.

The schedule will also include a Christmas edition of Countdown, a program for teenagers; a program of reminiscences by a shepherd, about solitude, life, God, men and sheep; and a 30-minute comedy drama by David Brock, entitled An Impromptu Christmas.

AT THE PARK — Classy Dog . . . Fred MacMurray, starring in Walt Disney's "The Absent-Minded Professor", showing 2-night Tuesday (Christmas Night) and Wednesday at the Park Theatre, finds he has an interested canine student, his dog Charlie in this scene from the rib-tickling new comedy. Co-starred with MacMurray in the Buena Vista release are Nancy Olson, Keenan Wynn and Tommy Kirk. On the same program the added fun hit "Once Upon a Horse", stars Dan Rowan, Dick Martin and Martha Hyer. Tonight and Christmas Eve one complete show starts at 7.30 p.m. Wednesday (Boxing Day) matinee at 1.30; evening complete shows at 7.00 and 8.55.

CHRISTMAS AT THE BELLE — Elvis Presley sings six new songs and does the twist in "Kid Galahad", opening in Color, Christmas night, for a five day engagement at the Belle Theatre in Belleville. Here he romances co-star Joan Blackman. Lola Albright, Gig Young and Charles Bronson also star in the fascinating screen musical.

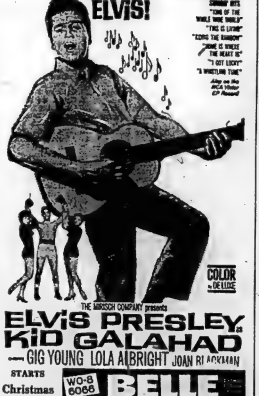
Commonwealth Show Produced By New Zealand

The 1962 Christmas Day Commonwealth program produced this year by the New Zealand Broadcasting Corporation will be broadcast throughout Canada on the CBC radio network.

The program, entitled The Challenge of Change, will set out to reflect on the vast changes and trends in modern living and the way in which ordinary people have been influenced by these changes.

The program will be heard in Canada at 9.30 a.m. EST on Christmas morning, Dec. 25.



More than one dozen countries will have contributed segments to the broadcast and these will be based on such widely diverse fields as science, education, rural and urban resettlement and changing racial attitudes.

Among the features heard in the program: A Canadian scientist describes his work in the field of computing systems; a young Nigerian writer describes the difficulties and challenges of widespread movements of independence; a father in South Africa describes the pain of the triumphant results attained by having his daughters fully educated.

The education of women and their emergence into public life is in itself a social revolution in many parts of the world, and what this has meant in the case of one women will be discussed by Mrs. Bandaranaike, Prime Minister of Ceylon.

The program is narrated by Selwyn Toogood, and has been written and produced for the NZBC by Kenneth Pursell.

Movie Column

Pat Boone, Robert Taylor At Work on Quick Movies

By BOB THOMAS

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — Pat Boone in an 11-day drama. Robert Taylor in a 35-day western. Is this the shape of Hollywood's future?

I took a tour to witness such interesting developments in the film production scene. (Most films take 60 to 90 days; Mutiny on the Bounty took 13 months.) First stop was the back lot of MGM, where Taylor was shooting Castle Keep.

Bob, looking like a range veteran in his blue denims, gazed down the long-standing western street and said: "I thought I had worn out this place long ago. This street and I go back a long way. I think the first one I did here was Stand Up and Fight with Wallace Beery in 1939."

How does he like doing a western in 15 days?

"Great," he said. "That's one of the reasons I like television: You move right along and don't get bored.

"Listen—we made some fine pictures on this lot in the same kind of schedule. The Thin Man took 14 days."

HE'D LIKE MORE

Would he like to do more fast-schedule films?

"Sure," he said. "I'd like to make 10 of these a year and spend the rest of the time loafing."

Then I drove over to 20th Century Fox. The long - idle studio was a burst of activity — four days of interior scenes for Zvil Come, Evil Go, starring Pat Boone.

The role casts him as a big-headed singing idol — "like a lot of young singers I've seen." (If television can turn out Emmy award shows in six or eight days, why can't we make good movies in 11 or 12?" he asked. "I'd like to do six of these a year and loaf the rest of the time.")

Which proves that actors think alike, at least some well-adjusted actors with a concern for Hollywood's tortured economics.

Astrological Forecast

BY SYDNEY OMARR

Aries (Mar. 21 to Apr. 19): Day to show appreciation — in spiritual as well as material sense. Also time to be cautious where dining habits are concerned. Emphasis on health, well-being; mania "go easy."

Taurus (Apr. 20 to May 20): You can hold forth, making others feel at ease. Fine for showing that you do care, that you appreciate past favors. Allow release from tension to occur. Be willing to be served, entertained!

Gemini (May 21 to June 21): Much thought given to spiritual lessons, examples. But there is also time today for pleasure. Give it and receive it. Surprise calls, visits feature much of day. Like Taurus, be willing to relax.

Cancer (June 22 to July 21): You could have fruitful experience in connection with others. Today you are able to show your true self. Means you grow spiritually by giving, sharing and receiving. Fine for visiting, exchanging ideas.

Leo (July 2 2to Aug. 21): Avoid overexertion. Pleasure indicated through children, loved ones. Excellent for self-expression, the display and sharing of hobby. Fine, too, for putting thoughts on paper.

Virgo (Aug. 22 to Sept. 22): Judge others as you would have others judge you. Means today your powers of discrimination are at peak. Use them on positive side. Perceive the best, not the worst.

Libra (Sept. 23 to Oct. 22): Your ability to share, to promote intellectual activity helps make this cheerful, meaningful day. Lead the way. Patch up differences. Avoid disputes. Permit Libra sense of fair play to completely dominate.

Scorpio (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21): Glow of pleasure possible if you "unwind." You feel well repaid for efforts of past few days. Many express appreciation. Better to relax today than to try being "shining light."

Sagittarius (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21): Use imagination, skill, intuitive in dealing with children, relatives, close friends; help make this happy day, for those close to you. Spirit of day makes you realize you have not been forgotten.

Capricorn (Dec. 22 to Jan. 20) Important that you keep spiritual significance of day in mind. Be outgoing. Give of yourself. Forgive past mistakes made by loved ones and others. Substitute warmth for coolness.

Aquarius (Jan. 21 to Feb. 19) Be friendly. Let this be your key. It will open new doors to achievement, greater fulfillment. Others are attracted to you. Some may ask questions you regard as "personal." Be frank, warm, attentive and willing to share.

Pisces (Feb. 20 to Mar. 20): Like Gemini, spotlight is on ability to relax, bask in warmth of friendship, love. You should take initiative in visiting, creating atmosphere of well-being. Express appreciation to one who has aided in past.

If today is your birthday . . . you are "attracted" to problems of others. You often lean over backwards to see opposing points of view.

General Tendencies: Spiritual leaders make statements which provide warmth, hope. Other leaders make promises, while still others issue warnings.

By STEPHEN SCOTT.

VANCOUVER (CP)—The inference you get from a conversation with Ed Meade is that the safest time for a hunter is when he is hunting.

Meade is secretary-manager of the Federation of Fish and Game Clubs of British Columbia and he says one of his main jobs is to preach hunter safety and counter the "hysteria" that sometimes follows reports of fatal hunting accidents.

His reply to inquiries about hunting accidents is that there is 10 times more chance of a man being injured in an automobile accident than in a hunting mishap, and that insurance companies rank hunting 17th on the list of dangerous sports—below football and swimming.

The B.C. Safety Council says two-thirds of all gun accidents happen in the home. The hunting accident rate is steadily decreasing so that it now is under three for every 10,000 hunters in B.C.

Statistics show that carelessness is the cause of the vast majority of hunting accidents, Meade says, adding they also show that the under-21 age group—the same that has the most vehicle accidents — accounts for 63 per cent of all hunting mishaps in B.C.

FAVORS ORANGE

He's an advocate of "defensive hunting' which he says basically is using your head in the bush.

Some suggestions: Don't put yourself in a position where you can be shot, such as between the game and a shooter; don't carry your kill in such a way that a hunter may think it is a live animal; wear bright clothing; be careful not to flash anything white, such as a handkerchief, that may be mistaken for the tail of a deer.

"You wouldn't drive fast in a pale grey car without headlights on a foggy night, so why hunt in a brown windbreaker in the fall woods? Better to be seen than to be remembered."

The federation recommends that all hunters wear a hat or sash, a color that contrasts with clothing of fluorescent blaze on everything in the woods. At its urging, the recommendation was inserted in the B.C. game regulations.

The federation is also conducting eye tests throughout the province, sometimes with surprising results. Tests at one club showed seven of 27 members with vision that would make them dangerous in the woods. Six others were border line cases.

MISTAKEN FOR GAME

The big part of its program, however, is directed at carelessness, and Meade offers statistics to show why.

In the last five years, of accidents resulting from intentional discharge of arms, seven per cent were caused by a poor son walking into the line of fire; five per cent by an excited shooter pulling the trigger; 15 per cent when the hunter didn't see the victim; 31 per cent by hunters who mistook the victim for game; 10 per cent by ricochet; 15 per cent when animals were standing between hunter and victim.

Through unintentional discharge—10 per cent caused by falls sever by triggers caught in bush; eight while moving guns from car or boat; eight while riding in or on moving car; 11 by falling guns; 10 while crawling under fences; 12 while loading guns; five while unloading guns. There are other causes in this category but Meade emphasizes that poor or careless handling account for 37 per cent of all accidents.

He says that in the five years no one was hurt by a gun blowing up and only four per cent by faulty guns. Twenty-nine per cent of all accidents were self-inflicted. Sixty-six per cent of all caused by intentional discharge killed or wounded persons not wearing bright clothing.

Referee Made It, In Uniform

QUEBEC (CP) — Referee Frnk Udvari plans to be home in Kingston for Christmas, come hell or high water.

The National Hockey League and American Hockey League arbiter had a close call Sunday, while trying to take advantage of his first chance in 11 years to be with his family for the Christmas holiday.

Baltimore Clipper's bus arrived 75 minutes late for their AHL game against Quebec Aces, scheduled to start at 2:45 p.m., and before the game was over Udvari had missed his 6 p.m. train to Montreal.

Sympathetic city police stepped in when the game ended at 6:25 and rushed the desperate referee across town to the bus terminal in time to catch the 6:30 Montreal bus.

Udvari, still in uniform, barely had time to remove his skates.

Wide Variety of Problems, Including Many Holdovers, In Foreign Policy Field

By JACK BEST

OTTAWA (CP) — Canada's role in world affairs in 1962 touched on such widely separated and diversified problem areas as the Caribbean, the Himalayan mountains and the jungle kingdom of Laos.

A wide assortment of problems, including many holdovers, will still be around to tax the ingenuity of foreign policy experts in 1963.

The European Common Market—not only as it affects the Commonwealth from the standpoint of Britain's possible entry but also as it affects a whole complex of trade and political relationships—will be of prime importance.

Canada, by reason of its continuing ties with Cuba, figures to go on getting involved in events surrounding that beleaguered island while continuing to cogitate on membership in the Organization of American States.

In the field of disarmament, it will pursue in company with other nations the search for an East-West agreement.

Gen. E. L. M. Burns, Canada's representative at the Geneva disarmament conferences, was prompted into a sharp response earlier this month by the Soviet delegate's remarks that Western proposals for robot detectors of nuclear tests were mere sidelines.

LOOKS TO SOUTH

Perhaps in spite of itself, Canada was becoming more closely associated with Latin American affairs. However, there was still no move to give expression to this closer relationship through membership in the OAS. If anything, the question of joining OAS receded during 1962.

This was attributed to the Cuban problem and to widespread instability in Latin America — circumstances which perhaps strengthened the hand of those who contend Canada would be asking for endless trouble by joining the 20-member organization.

There were other Canadians, however, who argued just as vehemently that Canada should be in the hemispheric family and doing its part to tide Latin America over a trying period of change.

Canada continued to trade with Cuba although the volume of commerce fell markedly from 1961. It also was one of the few countries in the Americas still speaking to Cuba diplomatically.

MOMENT OF DOUBT

At the same time, though after a few days of widespread doubt and uncertainty, Canada threw its full support behind President Kennedy when the U.S. Navy imposed a quarantine on Cuba in the campaign to force withdrawal of Soviet missiles from the island.

There were rumblings, however, over U.S. failure to consult its Atlantic allies in advance on the Cuba blockade. Prime Minister Diefenbaker was informed of U.S. intentions several hours before President Kennedy announced them but Ottawa authorities refused to consider this as consultation.

NATO, the Commonwealth and the United Nations remained the organizational cornerstone of Canada's foreign policy.

The Commonwealth picture was dominated by the prospect of Britain's entry into the Common Market and by the Chinese invasion of India.

Concern over the Common Market issue underwent a shift of emphasis. Originally it centred around the possible adverse effects on Canadian exports of British membership. Yet in a Commons statement Oct. 5—two weeks after the London conference of prime ministers — External Affairs Minister Green declared political implications were foremost.

Much would depend on the extent to which Europe becomes unified, with a common parliament and common foreign policy.

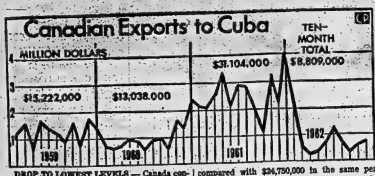
CUT COLOMBO AID

When Chinese troops invaded India through the Himalayas, Canada sent transport aircraft to India. On the diplomatic front, Canada urged India and Pakistan to settle their differences so India could concentrate on fighting the Chinese.

In the field of economic aid, Canada slashed its contribution to the Colombo Plan by $8,500,000, to $41,500,000.

Canadian peace-keeping units remained on station in different parts of the world—with the world— with the international control commission in Indochina; with the UN contingents in The Congo, Gaza Strip, Jordan and Kashmir. The country agreed to meet a request for one aircraft and accompanying personnel for the new UN operations in New Guinea.

Canada was one of 14 nations signing an East-West agreement at Geneva July 23 guaranteeing the security and neutrality of Laos.



The list of countries where Canada has diplomatic representation took a big jump, to 83 from 65. Of the 18 additions, 13 are former French colonies in Africa.

Canadian Exports to Cuba

DROP TO LOWEST LEVELS — Canada continued to trade with Cuba during 1962 but volume of exports fell sharply and is expected to continue downwards next year. Exports in the first 10 months this year totalled $8,809,000, compared with $24,750,000 in the same period of 1961. CABBIE TALKS MAN OUT OF ABDUCTION

Grim All-Time High Of 129 Tragic Deaths

Holiday Period Worst in History

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Two Canadian provinces remained free from accidental deaths over the five-day Christmas holiday but the other eight recorded a grim all-time high of 129.

The long weekend shattered all other weekend records, beating the previous mark of 123 deaths set on a three-day Dominion day holiday in 1960.

Traffic accidents alone accounted for 58 deaths, far above the 58 predicted by the Canadian Highway Safety Council.

The Canadian Press survey started at 6 p.m. local time Friday and ended at midnight Wednesday.

Fire deaths accounted for 23, 10 of them in a single tragic blaze in New Scotia that took the lives of a father and nine children. Miscellaneous causes claimed 13 deaths and drownings 10.

TOLL HIGH IN QUEBEC

Quebec led the grim list with 44 deaths, 18 in traffic mishaps. Ontario had 30 accidental deaths, 28, in traffic accidents, British Columbia and Nova Scotia both had 12, Manitoba and New Brunswick eight, Saskatchewan seven and Alberta six.

Remaining fatality - free were Newfoundland and Prince Edward Island.

The toll for the country averaged one for every 58 minutes.

Nova Scotia had three traffic deaths in addition to the 19 in the single fire. New Brunswick had seven traffic deaths and one drowning.

Quebec had 28 traffic fatalities, six drownings, including four boys presumed drowned, one asphyxiation death, three in fires, one of exposure, one

EXPORTS TO CONTINUE

TOKYO (AP) Foreign Minister Masayoshi Ohira said today the Japanese government cannot grant a NATO request that Japan restrict the export of goods to the Soviet Union. "The Japanese government," he said, "has no legal power to stop private enterprise from exporting pipes to the Soviet Union.

DOCKERS CANCEL PLAN TO UNLOAD CANADIAN GOODS

Seed Potatoes Are Badly Needed

NEW YORK (AP) Stevedores in Charleston, S.C., have cancelled plans to unload a cargo of Canadian-grown seed potatoes today as striking longshoremen shored up the single crack that developed in their paralyzing work stoppage on East and Gulf Coast ports.

The Charleston local of the International Longshoremen's Association (AFL-CIO) broke the strike over Wednesday to unload bananas, and continued unloading them Wednesday night in defiance of orders from the union's national leadership to stop.

But the Charleston stevedores said they were cancelling plans to unload the seed potatoes today—under pressure from top union officials, South Carolina farmers, hard-hit because of poor fall crops, had appealed to the union to unload the potatoes before they sprout.

The unloading of the bananas prompted Capt. William V. Bradley, ILA president, to assign a union vice-president in the southern city to investigate. He said the Charleston local could lose its charter by the action.

CROSS PICKET LINES

In Galveston, Tex., about 100 dockworkers who belong to an organization not connected with the striking longshoremen crossed picket lines under police supervision to unload a Swedish banana boat. There was no violence.

Outside of these isolated instances, however, the strike has effectively closed all East and Gulf Coast ports to all but military, dangerous or emergency cargoes, which the ILA itself has exempted from the strike

U. S. and Britain Were Upset By Disclosure by Diefenbaker

OTTAWA (CP)—Prime Minister Diefenbaker disclosed the amount of a Western military aid program for India before the United States and Britain could officially inform India and Pakistan, diplomatic sources reported today.

Mr. Diefenbaker disclosed at Nassau after a luncheon meeting with President Kennedy and Prime Minister Macmillan that the U.S., Britain and Canada and some other Commonwealth countries plan to supply India with $120,000,000 worth of military equipment to bolster it against Communist Chinese aggression.

Pakistan had already expressed alarm over Western military assistance to India, fearing it could be used against its long-standing dispute with Pakistan over Kashmir.

Pakistan has contended that large-scale military aid to India might make matters worse instead of better on the Asian sub-continent.

Diplomatic sources said Mr. Diefenbaker revealed the amount of the program before Britain and the U.S. could inform India or reassure Pakistan that the Western weapons would be used only by India in its conflict with China.

MORE

Consequently, the U.S. and Britain were reported upset by Mr. Diefenbaker's disclosure.

Mr. Diefenbaker a few weeks ago offered Canada's diplomatic aid to India and Pakistan to try to settle the Kashmir dispute.

The United Kingdom high commissioner's office and the U.S. embassy here had no comment on the matter. They said they are not directly concerned with military aid to India and thus would not be immediately informed of government attitudes in Washington and London toward Mr. Diefenbaker's disclosure.

British Train Collision Kills 18

LONDON (CP)— Two British trains smashed together in a blizzard Wednesday, killing at least 18 persons, and 12 other deaths were reported from Europe as bitter Arctic winds pushed winter southward across the continent.

A blizzard that dropped up to a foot of snow in England was blowing when the Glasgow to London Scot express smashed into the rear of a local train stopped at Coppenhall Junction four miles outside the Midlands industrial city of Crewe.

The dead—many of them still unidentified—all were in one car of the Liverpool-to-Birmingham local. Thirty-three persons were injured, many critically.

The local train's two end cars, one of them a baggage car, were smashed into a mass of twisted metal.

Mrs. Lucilla Dunlop, a passenger on the express, said:

"I saw a baby with its legs cut off lying dead in the snow and a man dead beside the track with most of his clothes ripped off and one leg missing."

It was Britain's worst train wreck since 1957, when 90 persons were killed in the collision of two rush-hour commuter trains between Londop and Lewisham.

Six children were among the dead.

The local was filled with travellers on the traditional Boxing Day holiday. Broken dolls and toys were scattered among the wreckage.

A blizzard was blowing.

"It was utter carnage," said Harold Shiff, a survivor, who told of trying to help a dying young woman whose mother had been tossed half way through a broken window.

Rescue squads summoned from the surrounding areas of Cheshire over icy roads, worked by headlamps laying the dead out at a nearby farm and carrying the injured to a field to await ambulances.

A fire department spokesman said it was likely the death toll would rise during the day.

"Some of the injured are so seriously hurt that it is doubtful whether they will survive," he said.

Victims included three boys aged about four, a two-year-old girl, two women and seven men, among them a serviceman believed to be an American.

A dozen doctors and 60 firemen worked frantically to rescue the trapped and injured but were severely hampered by fallen power lines brought down by the crash.

Every available fireman and doctor in the area was called and the grass near the wreck became a sea of bodies as the injured were laid beside the rail line to await transportation

Calmly Awaits New Operation To Connect Arm

BOSTON (AP) — Red-haired, freckle-faced Everett Knowles Jr., calmly awaits a new operation in which his right arm—and medical history — is at stake.

The 13-year-old boy has been told by Dr. Ronald Malt of Massachusetts General Hospital that surgeons undergo the surgeon's knife again, possibly early in January.

Everett says that he'll be ready whenever the doctor is.

Young Knowles already has undergone a series of history-making operations in which his completely severed right arm was reconnected to his body, although he can't use it yet.

"Doctors said the progress is very good," the boy's father said, adding: "He can move his fingers."

Everett may become the first person in medical history ever to have a completely severed arm reconnected, with life, feel and usefulness.

The daring attempt at a medical breakthrough began last year 23 when Knowles' right arm was cut off cleanly by a freight train as he was walking home from school.

Each of the several separate operations has been deemed successful. But, with the usual caution of medical men, Massachusetts General Hospital doctors refuse to say at this stage that the boy's arm will be restored to usefulness.

India and Pakistan Open Talks on Kashmir Issue

RAWALPINDI (Reuters)—India and Pakistani officials today began two days of talks in this Pakistan capital aimed at paving the way for a settlement of the two countries' 15-year dispute over Kashmir.

The talks, coming in the wake of a surprise Pakistani agreement on border issues with Communist China, originally three hours today. But they were adjourned after 70 minutes and the two delegation leaders together called on Pakistan President Mohammed Ayub Khan.

It was understood the leaders, India's Sardar Swaran Singh and Pakistan's Z. A. Bhutto, made opening statements to the conference before the adjournment.

Shortly after the Indian delegation's arrival here Wednesday, it was announced Pakistan had reached agreement in principle on the alignment of the Sino - Pakistani boundary in Kashmir, which is the main issue underlying the dispute between India and Pakistan.

A Pakistani spokesman said his country wished to implement a United Nations resolution calling for a self-determination vote in Kashmir but would listen to any alternative Indian proposal.

The Kashmir issue has been a sore point between the two countries throughout their separate existence after Britain granted independence to the sub-continent in 1947.

Much of the Sino-Indian border dispute centres of Ladakh, which is in the part of Kashmir controlled by India.

Find Chilly Brewery Room Stops Colds

ST. PAUL, Minn. (AP)—Maybe that long-sought cure for the common cold is lurking around a brewery.

Forty - two St. Paul men who work in the chilly cellars and filter room of the Jacob Schmidt Brewing Company, claim not to have had a cold or flu for as long as 31 years.

The cold - free periods range from nine to 31 years, as long as the men have gone to work daily in temperatures between 32 and 47 degrees.

Dr. Floyd A. Thompson, the company doctor, agrees it's "pretty amazing."

"But it is a fact," he said. "It's been checked."

922 RELATIVES OF INVADERS BACK IN FLORIDA

Ship's Last Trip Errand of Mercy

MIAMI, Fla. (AP) — The freighter African Pilot docked at Port Everglades today, bringing 922 relatives of the Bay of Pigs invaders to freedom and joyous reunion with husbands, sons and fathers.

Devoting her last voyage to this errand of mercy, the 20-year-old African Pilot entered the port near Fort Lauderdale, 25 miles northeast of Miami, at 8:30 a.m. EST. The rugged old workhorse of the sea, which had carried supplies to Castro in exchange for the invasion prisoners, now goes into inactive status.

SEASICKNESS, HAND

Only about 200 observers saw the freighter come in. The port was closed to all but reporters and authorized officials. A big sign said "welcome" in English. The American Red Cross reported nine cases of measles aboard. Three ambulances were on the dock to pick up 12 stretcher cases.

Joe McGowan, Associated Press writer representing American news agencies on the African Pilot, said many passengers disembarked from the ship the long night, too nervous and excited to sleep.

Several U.S. Coast Guard craft met the African Pilot at sea and escorted the 10,000-ton, Swedish-built cargo ship with men, women and children towards Port Everglades, Fla.

The African Pilot's crew, striving to make comfortable its passengers ranging from grandmother to baby, found out especially trying to turn away the would-be last man aboard.

A shabby - dressed Negro raced up the rising gangplank shrieking "ayudame. (help me)!" as the African Pilot made ready to cast off Wednesday night.

Guards on deck, strictly charged to let no more aboard the crowded craft, regretfully barred the man. Angry, they soldiers on the pier scrambled up and yanked their trembling countryman back to the dock.

A man in worker's clothes threw an armful of bread to shoulders and led him away. Two soldiers followed the pair around a corner of a warehouse, crammed with $11,000,000 in drugs and food which the African Pilot brought to Cuba Saturday as down payment on a $53,000,000 commodity payment for 1,113 men Castro's troops captured in the April 17, 1961, invasion of the Bay of Pigs.

Voluntary Ban On Tests Urged

MOSCOW (AP) — A leading Soviet commentator called on the nuclear powers today for a voluntary ban on atomic tests by Jan. 1.

Such a move, Alexei Popov of the Novosti press agency wrote in Pravda would "create a favorable climate" for the Geneva negotiations for a nuclear test ban.

The Soviet Union, in its current series of nuclear tests, has conducted at least four and possibly five tests in a three-day period this week.

The U.S. Atomic Energy Commission in Washington said these tests added to at least 39 the number conducted by the Soviet Union in its current series. The West powers have refused to join in any unpoliced ban on tests.

Trenton Hotel Robbery Suspect Arrested Here

Taxi Driver J. Sopha Avoids Toronto Trip

A fast-talking veteran Belleville cabbie Boxing Day emergency action in the abduction following an armed robbery alarm in Trenton.

As police cruisers prowled Belleville's streets seeking a suspect feared armed with a pistol, taxi-driver Jimmy Sopha told how he talked a suspect out of forcing him to drive to Toronto.

"If we'd had a tape machine in that cab, you'd have had a dandy recording," was the way Jimmy described the running verbal battle between himself and the suspect from Redneersville to downtown Belleville.

Police last night charged Gordon Badgerow, 19, of Trenton, with threats of violence, robbery of $100 from the Gilbert House, on Trenton's Dundas Street. Badgerow was picked up near the Belleville bus terminal after a two-hour manhunt by city police. Earlier, the search had centred in Trenton. After a man, swinging sun glasses, walked into the lobby of the Gilbert House with a pistol, and, hand in jacket pocket, demanded money of Ted Shepherd.

Two hours later squads of uniformed and plainclothes officers unobtrusively combed the city's business district through the Boxing Day twilight for what they feared was an armed bandit.

GOT OUT HERE

The Belleville search was triggered by Jimmy Sopha, who tells after he dropped his fare at the city's Four Corners intersection, less than a quarter-hour earlier he had answered a call to pick up the man at the Orchard Tearoom just west of Redneersville.

About 2.45 p.m., a man walked into the tearoom, operated by Mr. and Mrs. John H. Roper, and inquired about taxi rates.

"I imagined he must have been a visitor trying to hitchhike into Belleville," Mrs. Roper told the Ontario Intelligencer.

"He used the phone to call a taxi in Belleville. He ordered a taxi and sat and drank it until his cab arrived."

He paid for the tea with a quarter, then walked to the Central Taxi vehicle driven by Jimmy Sopha.

As they drove off Sopha said the man asked him:

"Did you hear they hold up the Gilbert in Trenton today?"

I said no and he said: "Well, I'm the guy that did it. Keep driving. We're going to Toronto."

"I told him he would never get away with it. As soon as we hit 401 they would know something was wrong."

He said he believed the man had kept a gun trained on him.

For Jimmy it was the second such incident in many years of cabbying. In 1942 he was held up at gunpoint after picking up a fare at Northport, and robbed of his taxi and money. The man was later arrested in Kingston.

This time, however, Jimmy got a chance to bluff his would-be abductor.

"I never stopped talking till I hit the Lower Bridge (in Belleville)," he said later.

As they neared downtown Belleville, he said he figured the ramming another vehicle as a last-ditch attempt to foil the stranger. However, he bluffed the man into believing that he would say nothing about the incident and promptly turned him at the intersection outside the Central Taxi office, where the man gave him a $5 bill and told him to keep the change.

"Then he just walked out on the street," Jimmy said.

Once he was out of sight, the cabby made a beeline for his office and hurriedly recounted what had happened to company owner Grant Devlin.

Police were rushed into the area to seek out the man.

Badgerow was arrested at Pinnacle and Dundas Streets by constable Donald Yearwood at 3.40 p.m. Late last night he was turned over to Trenton police.

Resignation of Kingston Member Of Legislature Asked by Union

KINGSTON (CP)—J. R. Simonett, provincial minister without portfolio, should immediately offer his resignation as chairman of the Ontario government's select committee on manpower training and "strive to equip himself more properly for such high office."

The demand was made today by Lloyd Fell, international representative of the United Steelworkers of America, (CIO) in criticizing the minister for Frontenac and Addington who recently blasted Ontario's international structure of Canadian unions.

Said Mr. Fell: "He has clearly demonstrated his complete inability to divorce his personal and narrow point of view from the very great responsibilities of a member of Parliament.

"His attack upon members of the labor movement, and the international unions in debate in the provincial legislature last week, should leave no doubt in the mind of Premier Robarts as to the wisdom of removing Mr. Simonett as chairman of Ontario's manpower training program."

Mr. Simonett said today Canadian union members have no control over where their dues go in international unions.

"I'd like to know how much Canadian money is going to the United States to support international unions," he said.

William Nickle, a former minister without portfolio, said the sooner Canadian labor leaders "go on the bridge and steer our own ship of state the better it will be for our local unions."

He supported the Liberal demand for Canadian-only unions.

Mr. Simonett said he has no intention of resigning. His unions can be set up but believes it is a matter for the federal government and inquiries into it.

He said he made the statements in the throes speech debate and in subsequent interviews "because someone had to say this thing."

Mr. Fell and Edwin Banks vice president of Local 938, international B of R and Steamfitters (Ind.) said that Mr. Simonett does not understand the union movement. Both are prepared to allow him to examine their union's financial statements.

"Not a penny of Canadian Steelworkers' dues cross the border into the United States," said Mr. Fell. "Instead, during the past 20 years we have received over $5,000,000 in subsidies from the US."

Order Inquest Into Death Of Marmora Man Hit by Car

An inquest has been ordered into the death of a 61-year-old Marmora man, victim of the only fatal accident in the Quinte district during the Christmas holiday.

Instantly killed when struck by a car on Highway 7, east of Marmora, Christmas Eve night was Fred Izzard, R.R. 3, Marmora.

Provincial police said he was drawing a small wagon with a container of stove oil along the side of the highway when hit by a car driven by George Rolston, Hamilton.

It was the only serious accident in the area over the holiday. However, Christmas Eve was a hectic introduction to that holiday for Belleville's traffic police as a rash of mishaps broke out across the city during and after the supper hour.

MANY ROADS ICY

"It was nothing but nonsense—that many accidents in one evening," said city police Inspector C. Sellers of the spate of bumps and grinding fenders that marked up nearly $3,000 total property damage.

In many cases the roads were icy and snow-covered. But that was a factor that should have been taken into consideration by all motorists, said the inspector. He blamed excessive speeds and tail-gating—following too closely a vehicle ahead—as the major cause of the accidents.

"This kind of driving is dangerous at this time of the year. There will be no let-up in the enforcement of the law, as far as we are concerned."

Underscoring the official warning was the fact that the spate of mishaps also brought a series of careless driving charges against many of the drivers involved.

Minor personal injuries also were caused in many of the accidents, and there was at least one narrow escape.

At the Moira Street East CNR level-crossing William Anderson escaped injury when his automobile crashed into the diesel locomotive of a freight train. Police say he didn't hear the train's warning blast as it approached the crossing. Total property damage was estimated at $200.

PARKED CARS HIT

Parked cars also took a heavy beating before Christmas in the following mishaps.

On East College a car driven by Franklin Duby, 376 Bleecker Avenue, skidded into a car owned by a Detroit, Mich., citizen, spending Christmas in the city. Duby told police he was blinded by car lights. Damage was $400.

On Centre Street, police say an automobile driven by Dwight Rathwell, 175 North Front Street, hit a mail box, then a parked car.

On West Moira, Norman Kitchener Keller, 13 Russell Street, had his car ram one parked vehicle — crashing it against a second. Damage in that one was $500 while a passenger — Norma Keller — suffered minor knee and head injuries.

At McDonald Avenue and Dundas West a car operated by Francis McVicker, 120 Goldfale Road struck a parked car and marked up $275 damage.

On Cannifton Road, James Tugnette, R.R. 4 Belleville, had his car hit the highway sign, mount the sidewalk and crash into a house, breaking a window. Damage was about $100.

Other mishaps included: A three-car crash involving drivers Helen Carter, Point Anne, Dave Seto, Sherbrooke, Que., and Francis McVicker, 120 Goldfale Road and causing $400 damage. A collision between a pick-up truck driven by Orville Clayton Boomhower, 22 West Street, and Frank Mayn, 660 Sidney Street, marking up $300 damage and sending Mrs. Dorothy Mays to hospital with concussion.

Thus, was the night before Christmas entered in city police traffic logs.

Grimson Home On Foster Ave. Gutted by Fire

Despite a fire in the fireplace, house of Mr. and Mrs. E. Grimson and family, at 324 Foster Avenue, a Merry Christmas was had by all.

On Christmas eve, a fire of unknown origin, started in the upstairs quarters of the Grimson home. The fire department rushed to the scene with one truck and remained for over an hour.

Mrs. Grimson said this morning she thought nearly all of the summer clothing for her children was lost in the blaze and the complete wardrobe of her two boys. The clothes were located in one of the bedrooms on the second floor.

A small amount of water damage was caused to the downstairs portion of the home.

Firemen covered the furniture as best they could to prevent as much damage as was possible.

The family returned to their home this morning to survey some of the presents which were under the Christmas tree were saved.

The Grimsons have 10 children: Larry, 16; Raymond, 14; Maryann, 13; Patricia, 11; Rodney, 9; Robert, 8; Cathy, 6; and Steven, 4; (Carmichael) Teddy, 2; and Terry 1 (Grimson). The first eight children were by a former marriage.

Mrs. Grimson said all of the clothing for Raymond and Patrick were lost in the fire.

Older Boys' Parliament Opens at Albert

That parliamentary assembly without politics — the Ontario Older Boy's Parliament — formally opened its annual sessions in Belleville last night.

Some 115 delegates to the assembly at Albert College were welcomed by a panel of local public figures, headed by mayor A. McLean Haig.

Today, the delegates opened the second session of this traditional assembly that has made Albert College a point of activity during its Christmas holidays.

The parliament is only one of eight held annually across Canada — but it is also the oldest. However, its name may be slightly misleading. The ins and outs of parliamentary proceedings — and all the political ramifications thereof. — is secondary to the function of the sessions.

Its prime purpose is one of Christian education, the organizers of the parliament stress.

This afternoon, with the opening formalities dispensed, the delegates were preparing to stride into the main business of the sessions.

The parliament will prorogue Monday, after electing a prime minister and opposition leader for the coming year.

Track Meet, Swim Contest Planned at Y

An indoor track and field meet and a swimming meet are included on the special holiday program at the Y.M.C.A. this Friday, being held in connection with the Christmas-New Year's holidays.

The indoor 'boys' track and field meet will get under way at 10:00 a.m. Friday with the boys taking part in such events as the 60-yard-dash, basketball throw, potato race, broad jump, rope climb and a softball throw for accuracy.

All events will be done to standard, with the boys thus competing against their own marks.

The boys' swim meet will commence at 1:30 in the afternoon. Five events will be held for beginners and four events for the more experienced swimmers.

Junior leaders will be in charge of both meets, assisted by members of Y's Men's Club.

Boys are also reminded that a special sleigh-riding and tobogganing party will be held at the Oak Lake Hills on Saturday morning.

Efforts Fail To Revive 3-Year-Old

PALO ALTO, Calif. (AP) — A second heart massage effort failed Wednesday and three-month-old Orian Merlier died, apparently of virus pneumonia.

Heart massage had restored breathing 20 hours earlier after a doctor used a steak knife to open the child's chest in the family kitchen.

The parents, Mr. and Mrs. Egio Merlier, said they had attended Christmas church services Tuesday, then put the infant to bed for a nap. Mrs. Merlier saw two minutes later that the child had stopped breathing.

Dr. Jack Remington performed the steak knife surgery and the boy was taken to Palo Alto-Stanford Hospital.

When his breathing became laboured, doctors again opened his chest, but heart massage failed this time to revive him.

Faith, Hope and Confiscation Boost Old Folks' Liquor Ration

WINDSOR, Ont. (CP)—Hundreds of bottles of illegally imported liquid refreshment have been accumulating at the United States customs office for the last six weeks.

The "loot" was taken by customs authorities from Americans returning to the United States from Canada. In each case the returning residents were well supplied with liquor but apparently poorly provided with rules and regulations concerning imported goods.

A U.S. customs official said confiscation of liquor, as well as other items, goes on 12 months of the year and the current supply has been building up since about mid-November. The flow reaches high tide just before Christmas and tapers off after the new year.

Customs regulations permit a United States resident to bring back five quarts of liquor duty free, provided he has been out of the country for at least 48 hours.

For anything less than 48 hours the returning resident may declare and import the liquor, but only after paying duty, revenue tax and the state of Michigan markup.

The added expenses would total approximately $2.25 for a $5 bottle, the officials added. All the seized liquor is donated to charitable institutions, including homes for the aged. The last cache distributed prior to Nov. 15, amounted to 350 bottles.

14 Successfully Escape From East Germany

BERLIN (AP) — Four young men escaped from East Germany to West Berlin during the night, bringing to 14 the number of successful escapes reported during the Christmas holidays. Refugees often do not report their presence in the West immediately.

A 25-year-old man climbed unobserved across the eight-foot-high wall on the border of the American sector borough of Neukoelln.

Three men, 19 to 22, forced their way through the barbed wire on the British sector border with East Germany. An East German border guard spotted them and set off a flare. But they had reached safety.

The biggest group to escape, consisted of four adults and four children in a bus that rammed through the barriers of the autobahn checkpoint at Babelsberg, just on the outskirts of West Berlin. The owner of the bus, 40-year-old Hans Weidner, a war cripple who walks painfully on crutches, planned the escape for six months.

The hatchery is owned by Mr. S. W. Bray.

Cause of the fire is presently under investigation.

Approximately $4,000 damage was caused.

Marilyn Monroe Estate Will Be $1,000,000

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Superior Court was asked Wednesday to probate part of the late Marilyn Monroe's estimated $1,000,000 estate.

The actress was found dead in bed at her Hollywood home Aug. 5 from an overdose of sleeping pills. Her death was listed as probably suicide.

A petition by executor Aaron R. Frosch of New York City estimated her property in Los Angeles at $65,400. Her will, dated last Jan. 14, was admitted to probate in New York surrogate's court.

Miss Monroe's mother gets $5,000 a year from a $100,000 trust fund. Mrs. Gladys Baker, the mother, is in a California nursing home. The will also makes other bequests.

Paper Strike In New York Now in 20th Day

NEW YORK (AP)—The strike that shut down seven major newspapers is in its 20th day today, making it the longest newspaper blackout in the city's history.

The longest previous shutdown was a 19-day deliverers union walkout four years ago. At that time the cost in wages was an estimated $3,000,000, plus $25,000,000 in newspaper revenue.

The wage loss in the current strike by the International Typographical Union is estimated at more than $8,000,000.

Publishers' and printers' representatives met with federal mediator Stephen I. Schlossberg for only 15 minutes Wednesday. They stressed with their positions unchanged.

Leaders of nine newspaper unions have reaffirmed their support of the printers and unanimously approved the right of the printers to negotiate a contract "that meets the needs of its members."

Bertram Powers, president of International Typographical Union local 6 and chairman of the committee for newspaper unity, said he was instructed by the nine unions to pass on their action to the publishers.

The employers have offered an $8 weekly wage raise over two years and a fourth week of vacation. The publishers estimate printers' demands would cost them a total of $38 per man weekly.

The printers went on strike Dec. 8 at four of the papers and the others closed down voluntarily under a "one - struck, all-struck" agreement. Affected are The Times, Herald Tribune, News, Mirror, Post, Journal American, World-Telegram and Sun, Long Island Star-Journal and Long Island Press. The Press continues to put out its Long Island edition, which is not circulated in the city.

Santa Claus Visits Hospital

TRENTON — One of the gayest places in Trenton on Christmas morning was Trenton Memorial Hospital. Santa Claus had visited the children's wing during the night and the nurses helped in unwrapping and distributing gifts. Crowns and when dinner time came around, specially decorated trays, each containing small gifts, were brought in.

Actually, it was Christmas for nearly a week at the hospital, with members of the Lions' Club and the Salvation Army Corps making their annual visits. Santa Claus put in a brief pre-Christmas appearance to the delight of the kiddies.

Christmas Day was fun for the staff too, with the nurses and maintenance staff sitting down to a turkey dinner.

Officers, NCOs Serve Airmen Yule Dinner

TRENTON — Trenton airmen at RCAF Station were served their Christmas dinner by officers and senior NCOs. This is a tradition at the local air station.

On Boxing Day, mess members exchanged visits and the planning now calls for a New Year's levee and open house at all messes for Jan. 1. Groups from all RCAF messes will also visit army and navy messes in this area on that day.

No. 6 Repair Depot mess members also exchanged visits and plan a New Year's levee.

Only Two Accidents

TRENTON — Police departments in the Trenton area report a quiet Christmas. Two accidents were recorded at the Trenton department. One, on Christmas Day, resulted in property damage estimated at $475 to the two cars involved. The drivers, Neil Hopkins of R.R. 2, Trenton and Herbert Fitzgibbon of 106 George St., Trenton, escaped with a shaking up. The accident occurred at the intersection of Princess and Byron Sts., around 4.30 p.m.

Provincial police at Brighton say that all accidents reported were of a minor nature.

Not all the 300 young players taking part in Trenton Minor Hockey Day competitions at the Community Gardens yesterday received pampering from ardent followers. However, Jim Shoniker, spark-plug for the Lions' Midget All-Stars offered no objections to be helped with his equipment by Judy Salter, Margaret McVicker and Jackie Smith. He was particularly happy after his team edged Peterborough 3-2. Some 1,200 attended the tourney.

Mrs. Douglas Nicholls of Trenton, admires her most precious Christmas present, a bouncing baby boy, born at the Trenton Memorial Hospital, December 25th. The handsome little fellow arrived at 1.30 a.m., weighed eight pounds three ounces. His father, employed at the Trenton Dyeing plant, was reported to be doing well.

The prize of the Minor Hockey Day lucky draw was carried away by Dr. W. A. L. McDonald, chief surgeon of the Trenton Memorial Hospital. He was all smiles at the presentation by Association president Don Kilgour. Ward patients at T. M. H. will receive the benefits of the doctor's good fortune since he announced later he was turning the set over to the hospital for their use.

A Modern Motto

"There is no sense in raising hell, and then not being successful"—President John F. Kennedy.

Some words are worth a million pictures. A four-hour movie about President Kennedy's life could not tell us more about the kind of man he is than can that short sentence, taken from the transcript of his television show Dec. 17.

Of course, like any sentence, it has to be taken in context. Otherwise it could be misunderstood. And misunderstood it could give a completely false picture, like one of those mirrors in a sideshow.

There could be some, for instance, who would twist it to mean that all that matters is success and that this can justify the use of any measures. We do not think the President meant that—all his record speaks out against such an interpretation.

There might be others, too, who will misread it to mean that no effort is worth making unless there is reasonable assurance of it being crowned with success. We do not think Kennedy meant that, either—It would be almost as out of character for him as it would be, for instance, for Sir Winston Churchill.

Reading that sentence, one's immediate response is likely to be to apply it to the recent Cuban crisis. That, however, was not what Kennedy was talking about when he used these words. He was answering a question regarding his intervention when U.S. firms raised the price of steel, after signing a contract with the United Steel Workers.

What he is saying, in effect, is that if one decides it is one's duty to take an action which is going to stir up a lot of controversy, one had better make sure that this action is vigorous enough to produce the desired effect. Sometimes, of course, one's conscience will demand that one speak out, even when one knows doing so will achieve no practical results. But if one possesses the power to achieve results, then any action which does not do so is useless. Nay, it is often worse than useless. By stirring up more trouble, without remedying the trouble which already existed, it can worsen the existing problem.

"There is no sense in raising hell, and then not being successful." If that is a good guide for a man who is president of the United States, it is also a good guide for all of us. If we would use it in the coming year, we would save ourselves much wasted effort and other people considerable worry, for in everybody's life, at home and at work and at play, most of us are continually raising hell without even frightening the devil. More than that, if we followed this rule, we should achieve much more than usual, for beside the impulse of admonition not to raise useless hell this sentence carries an implied exhortation to show greater vigor and determination when we do act.

Partially Peaceful

Transit 5A, the new navigation satellite, is not working according to plan. The device is the first of a four-satellite network which will broadcast a continuous radio beacon signal, on an easily received frequency. Ships anywhere in the world will be able to tune in to these signals, when the network is aloft, and establish their position accurately, and quickly, in any kind of weather.

The network has two planned uses. It will guide the merchant shipping of the world and it will enable Polaris-armed submarines to deliver their death with more precision. . .

Russia has spoken of the peaceful use of space, and the United States, through Telstar and the Transit network, is establishing it. However one cannot help thinking that a Russian ship using Transit signals to establish its position in a storm will do so with mixed feelings of gratitude.

"Some people," declared "Today's Chuckle" on the front page of Wednesday's Ontario Intelligencer, "use language to express thoughts, some to conceal thought, and others instead of thought." Obviously the three classes are represented by politicians, diplomats and children—but not necessarily or even generally in that order.

"Sooner or later experiments with atomic energy will burn up the entire earth," predicts a pseudo-scientist. Are you sure you are carrying enough fire insurance?—(Kitchener-Waterloo Record).

Senate Gets Common Touch As Railwayman Given Seat

By RICHARD JACKSON
(From The Ontario Intelligencer's Ottawa Bureau)

OTTAWA—That was certainly some Christmas present Prime Minister Diefenbaker gave John Alexander (Pete) Robertson when he named that formerly obscure, if not unknown, CPR freight conductor to the Senate.

But perhaps the Prime Minister did even better for the Senate itself than he did for Pete Robertson, which was handsome enough.

For he has given the often stuffy, and seemingly always remote Senate a touch of the common man, and to a lot of Canadians probably some sense of understanding and reality.

While Canadian railway men have made it to the Senate before now, they haven't been exactly working stiffs straight off the road.

By and large they have been builders, owners, organizers, promoters and the Very Top Brass of railroads.

Here, now, is the first "Railway Senator" to be taken out of a freight caboose rather than a head office boardroom.

That this, surprisingly, had been a real, genuine, "Ordinary Guy" appointment to the Senate was confirmed in a letter of shocked dismay that Mr. Ben J. Eyton, president of the Ailsa Craig Conservative Association, dispatched to Prime Minister Diefenbaker.

HOWLS OF PROTEST

Few letters have brought more storming to Parliament Hill than Mr. Eyton's, for none has so neatly pin-pointed just what many have been wrong with the Senate all these years.

Mind you, Mr. Eyton had nothing against Peter Robertson personally.

In fact, the freight conductor on the Kenora-Ignace run actually was "a good friend" of his and me, or the next man" . . . and "as a man he might be okay" . . . but "as a Senator, well, that's a horse of a different color."

So that gives you a smile?

You shouldn't listen to some of the other protests.

By far the biggest batch has come from the professional party buffs.

To them, the appointment was a little upsetting.

Wouldn't it have made more political sense to have named a faithful party organizer, a veteran MP, or somebody who loyally had contributed to the campaign war chest through the years, and defeat?

But to name a political nobody, a two-time losing candidate. Heavens to Betsy!

Then there were the Big Wheels of Organized Labor . . .

They were not a little miffed by the appointment, and it was phrased when the appointment was made, that Peter Robertson was "well qualified to speak from the viewpoint of Labor."

Ridiculous, scorfed the Wheels.

THE DISAPPOINTED

Yes, of course, they conceded, Pete was the president and standing of the Brotherhood of Railway Trainmen.

But what, really, did he know about organization?

And there were ever so many Big Wheels, far better qualified from the standpoint of Organized Labor, ready, willing and even anxious.

And there were the Snobs . . .

What, they wrote indignantly, would a freight conductor, a working man, ever do in the Senate?

Wasn't the Senate traditionally reserved for distinguished gentlemen of culture" and achievement?

A conductor! Off a caboose! Really!

But by far the most anguished wails of protest came from the disappointed.

And they are legion.

For to be named to the Senate is to be given a comfortable $10,000-a-year lifetime pension and membership in an exclusive political club that requires attendance not more than once (a moment or two any afternoon or evening) every 12 months.

The Legion of the Disappointed just knew they were able to understand the Prime Minister.

Collectively and individually they have been baffled by it.

How on earth did it ever happen, each one has written, expressing this same thought variously, that this freight train conductor, this unknown, this ordinary man was given the appointment, when I myself would have been more than willing to serve in the Senate?

How indeed.

Letter to The Editor

Salvation Army Man Comments on Indians

Editor,
Ontario Intelligencer:

I read with interest your editorial of Saturday, December 22nd, "More Information Needed."

First of all, thank you for the coverage given to a very important matter. I agree that more information is needed.

However, as Divisional Commander and Executive Officer for The Salvation Army in the Mid-Ontario region and as an officer with more than 32 years' experience, including five years overseas serving Canadians, two in World War 2 in Great Britain, Italy, and the Northwest Front, may I make a few things clear from our viewpoint at any rate:

Firstly, as Lt.-Colonel Arthur Moulton, my counterpart in Manitoba, put it, "Our motives were and still are purely in getting help to the Indians and Metis in Northern Manitoba." We have no axe to grind in this matter.

Secondly, The Salvation Army does not "falsify information." There would be no point.

Thirdly, we do not serve humanity anywhere for "publicity" purposes.

Our people serve as they do and as they are doing in Northern Manitoba — in 100 countries of the world because they are impelled by the principle of the Good Samaritan. Indeed they are trained in that conception. In that whether it is a fire in Trenton or Nanpanee, a flood in Winnipeg, a mine disaster in Nova Scotia, a family in need in the Arctic, a skidrow condition off Toronto, a man in a death cell or a war in Europe, the Salvationist will be there to do what he can to help, praise or blame. Being human, we may arrive too early or too late, with too much help or too little, but our long experience in human affairs dictates humanity is in trouble anywhere, that peoples are in trouble, come hell or high water. The Salvation Army will be on hand. This is our simple creed, and has been since 1865.

The Salvation Army is not political. We try to support governments which have been and I doubt whether any government in this country, or any country in which it has served, has any more sympathetic servant than The Salvation Army. Governments are for public, because they like ourselves, they are human. They need support.

And sir, may I make clear one other very important point. Whatever any of us, or any organization, or any government may think of able-bodied adults in a given situation—and that issue is arising in Northern Manitoba—The Salvation Army takes the stand very firmly that no risk what ever can or should be taken that would leave the children, the aged, or the sick in jeopardy. Thus our people are determined that the Indians and the Metis of Northern Manitoba must not be left in their own devices if there is a reasonable doubt that they need specific help in any crisis. The Salvation Army would rather be accused of doing too much than too little, and would do nothing at all.

What the government does, sir, about investigating after the crisis, will be the government's business. In the meantime, I am willing to trust the judgment of our Major Stanley Power, the officer our National executive head sent up from Brandon to investigate conditions among the Indians and Metis. This officer served with the British troops in North Africa, and elsewhere, in our Red Shield Welfare services during World War 2. Before hostilities had ceased he was among the many specially selected to serve with UNNRA in Europe after the war. He conspicuously did so serve in this field that less than five years ago he was called for service, and for two years since.' Colonel Arthur Moulton is an officer of more than 30 years' experience. He has seen a lot of human suffering. Commissioner W. Wycliffe Booth, LLD, our National Commander, was the man who was chosen by the General of The Salvation Army in early 1945 to take over the leadership of the people in France, to see that they did the utmost to help wherever they could in getting that great country back on its feet again. Commissioner Booth is a man of great compassion, yet great discernment, who has been close to the lot of humans on all the continents of the globe. He is the grandson of General William Booth, founder of The Salvation Army, who wrote the book that shook Great Britain and the world in 1890— "In Darkest England, and The Way Out."

With reference to your seventh paragraph, and in closing, may I say sir, as a Salvationist and as a Canadian citizen, that The Salvation Army joins all who abominate the continuing possibility that there are too many in wonderful Canada, let alone South America, India, Africa and other parts of the world, who fall below "a mere subsistence level" as you phrase it. When sir, are we citizens of what we call our Christian democratic way of life going to realize that the time has gone for politicking in the humanities. Surely we must get on with the world the moment of truth has come, and is upon us. That is to say sir, that all peoples everywhere, in our own land, and beyond, must have a decent standard of living and they must have it now, in all parts of the world, the exploited—not a philosophy, but one we are being forced to live with in the light of uncovered realities — and the forgotten are rising.

Millions upon millions of them are rising in all parts of the world. Indeed it is superfluous to say so. It is a fact that the world is at a conscious crossroads. The Salvation Army joins with all others in this Christmastide of 1962, in praying and working towards the kind of world in which the ugly phrase "the haves and the have-nots" will become a mere memory of a world that used to be. That before a new century dawns, the nations of the world will have outgrown what John Wesley called "that strange sight, a truly Christian world."

Thank you again sir, for your helpful editorial and for the privilege of this response.

Yours sincerely,
(Alfred J. Simester)
Lt. Colonel,
Divisional Commander, Mid Ontario Division, The Salvation Army.

To Your Good Health

'Food Acidity' Mistaken For Allergy, Frequently

By JOSEPH G. MOLNER, M.D.

Dear Dr. Molner: Why don't you write about acids in the system? You have only touched lightly on the subject.

I can't eat any fruit or juices, vegetables such as tomatoes, or spaghetti. My symptoms are a bad taste and burning in the mouth, so severe that at times it appears scalded, itching of the inside of the ear and eyes and red blotches on my skin. My stomach feels good and I love all kinds of food. I am not overweight. But what I'd give for a nice juicy McIntosh right now with no after effects! — A.P.

The reason I place such scant emphasis on "acids in the system" is that they rarely are the real trouble.

It is true that, in some cases, there may be too much acid. This usually results only in rather serious conditions — and when it does, the patient doesn't recognize it.

When it comes to food, the trouble that is often called too much acid in the digestive system instead of too much, and some patients, particularly older ones, have to be given carefully measured amounts of acid. Without it, their digestion is impaired.

With most of the so-called acid foods, citrus fruits, tomatoes and so on, the mild acidity is changed chemically by the digestive process, and what is left is alkaline, not acid at all.

There used to be quite a bit of loose talk about "acidity" years ago, and a lot of unfounded the idea that anything with an acidulous taste would give us "acid stomach." This proves to be physiological nonsense, but we all have a hard time abolishing the notions implanted in our heads when we were young. (Sometimes I wonder what advertising writers do, if we are innocently implanting in our children today, that will have to be unlearned as medical knowledge advances.)

Anyway, a lot of people who complain about "acid foods" have merely convinced themselves that they are allergic to these foods they do themselves some good. They don't.

Others (like yourself) have some real symptoms. But, and this is the big point, I would be highly skeptical that the acidity causes the trouble.

The sore mouth, the itching, the blotches all have the earmarks of an allergy different, and very common, trouble: Allergy.

Each person has his own allergies (if any). No two are precisely alike. One man's meat is another's allergen. Such bland items as milk, wheat, and even strained baby foods have bothered some people.

If I had your trouble, I would go to my doctor. If he decides it is a food allergy, then he can guide you through the painstaking but accordingly useful process of starting with a low allergy diet, then adding other foods, one at a time, until you find out precisely what you can and what you can't eat. The result can be surprising — for instance, some people can eat tomatoes but are sensitive to lemons.

Dear Dr. Molner: Will a woman who is cross-tempered and irritated during pregnancy have it when she has her baby? Is there any other mother's disposition, sweet or sour.

Note to J.S.G.: Endocarditis is an inflammation of the heart lining. Angina pectoris is heart pain (often radiating into arm and shoulder). Pain usually a sign that the heart is not getting ample oxygen and its capabilities are being overtaxed.

Troubled with varicose veins? To make sure you are doing all you can to relieve the problem, write to Dr. Molner in care of The Chicago Tribune Syndicate, P.O. Box 153, Dundee, Ill. for his booklet, "How To Deal With Varicose Veins," enclosing a long, self-addressed, stamped envelope and 25c in coin to cover the cost of handling.

THE PACKSACK

By GREGORY CLARK

It is not only possible, it is now probable that, in a very few years, problems far more important to mankind than nuclear physics and the exploration of space will be commanding the attention of science. The fanfare of the past twenty years has misled us all staring skywards. First, it was the fear in the sky that kept us craning our necks: the new rival, the totalitarian state, socialism in its many aspects. While in this star-gazing attitude, there appeared in the firmament more disturbing articles than pie: missiles, rockets, astronauts, and whatever that our attention has been distracted from the earth.

Rachel Carson's book, "Silent Spring", has given the world a rather shocking reminder of the fact that if we want to wage an argument with regard to the damage that is being done the planet earth and its fellow subsists on it by insecticides, weed killers and a score of other chemicals that have been pooh-poohed by many authorities, notable among them the multi-billion dollar chemical and petrochemical interests in America with their associated billion dollar interests in distribution and advertising by supermarkets. And they can afford some powerful pooh-poohing. But lately come some frightening statistics as to the incidence of cancer among the people of the continent, of which more is to be heard. It will soon be time for science to come down to earth.

Another survivor, Dennis Osborn, said: "The coach bounded, the lights went out and all the luggage shot on top of us. I thought it was the end."

Europe's piercing weather extended from the far north to the Mediterranean, where it was an unwelcome surprise and eastward to Siberia.

Two people were frozen to death in northern Portugal, it snowed in northern and central Spain, and Barcelona was almost isolated. Valencia oranges froze on the trees.

Italy was wrapped in snow from the Alps to Sicily. In Calabria, in the toe of Italy, four persons died when their car skidded and hit a tree in a snowstorm.

In the Italian Alpine town of Domodossola an avalanche swept two smugglers to their deaths.

TEMPERATURES DROP

In the Italian Alps, temperatures plunged to 31 degrees below zero at Trapelle, highest inhabited area in Europe. Italian newspapers reported the coldest Christmas for the century.

Snowplows churned in Copenhagen, Denmark, where temperatures hovered around freezing.

Paris, dusted with snow, awoke to freezing weather and there was a run on stores for ladies' boots.

Germany was mostly free of fresh snow, but it was cold—16 to 17 degrees.

The Dutch skated on their frozen canals, and in Oslo, Norway, the day was clear and freezing.

But Hammerfest, which is farther north than Nome, Alaska, was having "m11d" weather. It was 32 degrees above zero and most of the snow had been washed away by mild rain. Some residents thought it might be due to the Soviet nuclear tests some 900 miles to the east.

The snowline in Britain crept steadily south from Scotland, and London's spires and rooftops bore an icing of white. Hill roads in many parts of Britain were impassable. At London Airport ice formed on de-icing flaps as fast as it was melted. Many planes were grounded.

steamed past Morro Castle, ancient stone sentinel of Havana harbor, at 6:51 p.m.—about two hours later than scheduled.

Its human cargo travelled north with little or nothing more than the clothing each passenger wore. Other items had to be surrendered before embarking.

American Red Cross, immigration and health department personnel waited at Fort Everglades — south Florida's only deep-water port—to process the men, women and children quickly before putting them aboard buses for a 30-mile ride to Miami and reunion with their liberated sons, husbands and fathers who were freed before Christmas from Castro prisons.

Prime Minister Fidel Castro, in a "Christmas bonus," announced early this week that he would let 1,000 relatives join the prisoners in exile.

Many more who had stayed near the prisoners during their 20-month imprisonment want to come, too.

In Washington, U.S. officials were optimistic that more than 20 Americans held in Cuban jails might be released soon. James B. Donovan, the New York lawyer who arranged the prisoner swap, has reported that Castro is willing to discuss early release of the Americans.

French Regard Polaris Offer As U. S. Trap

PARIS (Reuters) — A leading French nuclear expert said today President de Gaulle regards the United States offer to France of a share in the Polaris missile system as a trap aimed at blocking the development of the French independent deterrent.

Writing in the weekly Candide, Gen. Pierre Gallois argued the Kennedy administration had abandoned the former U.S. military doctrine that "any attack against any territory of NATO would result in nuclear reprisals."

He said U.S. Defence Secretary Robert McNamara had said the Polaris was "solely an anti-city weapon."

Thus in the basing U.S. defence strategy on the Polaris submarines, the U.S. now is now committed to an "anti-city" form of reprisal, instead of attacks to destroy nuclear weapons bases, the general said.

Gallois was for some years an officer at Gen. Eisenhower's headquarters and now is an adviser to a leading French aviation firm. He is said to be close to de Gaulle.

from a fall and one from an accidental shooting.

In Ontario, there were the 26 traffic deaths, three deaths as a result of fires and one drowning.

FOUR DIE IN MANITOBA

Manitoba's celebrations were marred by four traffic deaths, two from exposure and two from fire. Saskatchewan recorded four in traffic accidents, two men frozen to death and one man hit by a train.

Alberta's total of six was all in traffic accidents. British Columbia had seven traffic deaths three in fires, two drownings and one person hit on the head by a tree.

The survey does not include natural or industrial deaths, known suicides or slayings.

Last year, the four-day Christmas weekend toll was 74, including 33 in traffic accidents. The previous Christmas record was set in a four-day holiday in 1952 with 96 deaths, 47 in traffic.

The previous record for traffic fatalities was the 72 set in the three-day labor Day holiday this year. The total fatalities for that weekend was 102.

When the previous weekend record of 122 was set on Dominion Day weekend, 1960, it included 62 traffic fatalities.

provisions.

Among the cargoes halted by the five-day strike of 60,000 longshoremen are two shiploads of wheat in New Orleans destined for East Pakistan. The Pakistan embassy in Washington says the grain is urgently needed.

No bargaining sessions were scheduled for today.

Key issue in the dispute is the size of dock work gangs, which the ship owners want cut from the present minimum of 20 to 17. The longshoremen refused, saying they will not negotiate their members out of jobs in the name of automation.

College Hill Ring Club Marks Yule

The Wedding Ring Club of College Hill United Church held its Christmas meeting in the Church Hall recently with a large attendance of couples present.

In charge of Boyd and June Moorcroft, in the absence of Ray and Ida Bates, a film entitled "Uncourse" was shown. This was a timely film covering 24 hours ago of stars to which people seem to turn at this season, and sun and moon and outer space, which at present causes a good deal of concern. It proved to be most interesting and intriguing, especially to amateur astrologists and those interested in space in general.

The devotional theme was "The Wise Men." Nellie Brecknell conducted this part with "O Come All Ye Faithful," at the piano. Scripture on the coming of the wise men was read by June Moorcroft, also a Christmas poem. Ida Bates and Boyd Moorcroft read of "The Other Wise Man" and led in prayer. The hymn, "O Little Town of Bethlehem" closed the devotions.

Monte Moorcroft conducted a short business meeting with all reports being good. The social convener, Millie Townsend, reported on the meeting to help plan the New Year's Eve activities by Coopers' Clubs at Albert College this year. Several couples plan to attend this and look on the midnight prayer service at the chapel of the college. Admission to the party is to be $2.50 per person.

Monte Moorcroft presented a church hymnary to Ralph and Vera Moyer who will be leaving Belleville to travel a long distance to a new home in the near future. Ralph and Vera have greatly added of their talents to help the community and they will be greatly missed. It is hoped wherever they re turn, they will make College Hill their home again. The prayers and best wishes of the club go with them.

Christmas gifts were exchanged in a friendship circle in game style similar to musical chairs each person opening the gift in hand when the music stopped. This provided much excitement and enjoyment for all.

After a delicious lunch of seasonal pies and coffee, the benediction by the Rev. Vessey and mispah, a year of good fellowship closed on the Wedding Ring Club.

The church has been beautifully decorated by members of the club under the directions of Don and Muriel Dafoe and Florence and Douglas Watson. This was two weeks in advance of Christmas to add to the enjoyment of the season by the congregation.

Africa Still Man's World, Women Slaves

By LYNN HEINZERLING

KAMPALA, Uganda (AP)—Africa is still a man's world. All the shouting about freedom leaves most women grubbing for food, carrying water and wood on their heads and being sold to their husbands like cattle.

But a gentle revolution is under way in Uganda, the latest colony to become independent. A small group of women is leading a campaign to bring women into the new world of freedom. British colonial officers, the churches and a few progressive Ugandans have made some progress in emancipating women in the cities. In the rural areas, where 90 per cent of the population live, tribal customs condemn women to a life of toil and bearing children.

Uganda fathers still extract a "bride price" for their daughters from prospective husbands. In some places this may amount only to a goat and a few small presents. In northern Uganda it may run to 19 or more head of cattle.

The bride, once paid for, becomes little more than a chattel. Her husband's responsibility in the family runs to growing whatever cash crop he may grow, be it millet or whatever money there is and sitting in the sun.

He may occasionally mash up green bananas, add water and sugar and wait for it to ferment into "African gin" or waragi. On ceremonial occasions he will dress up in leopard skins and monkey hides and get out his spear.

The bride is expected to take care of the sweet potatoes, beans, turnips and bananas outside the family's hut and to bring in the water whatever the spring or stream is available. She must also raise the family and provide daughters who will, in their turn, bring a fancy bride price to their fathers' purses.

The only women smashing these ancient tribal practices are those who get an education or marry more advanced Negro political leaders or businessmen. The number is growing in the towns and cities as Negroes move into positions formerly held by white men.

UNEXPECTED CHRISTMAS CHEQUES — AND HOW TO SPEND THEM

The wonderful surprise of receiving an unlooked-for cheque, at Christmas, cannot be duplicated. There are usually a few rich uncles around — bless them—who cannot cope with Christmas shopping, or are realistic enough to know that they haven't a clue as to what really be the perfect present, so they resort to sending cheques along with their greetings.

If you are on the receiving end of one of these bonanzas and the family budget is in a hopeless tangle — it happens to us all — then you have a ready-made place for it. But don't hope that the cheque is healthy (lucky you!). Then, depending on the size of the cheque, there are thousand-and ways you can spend it, to give you the feeling of pleasure and excitement, which a subconscious gift should impart.

Let's assume that the cheque is for under $25. You could decide that the "works" at a beauty salon is the ideal or perfect gift. When we say the "works" we mean a facial, hair shampoo, set, manicure and manicure. To fully enjoy this "queen for a day" feeling, it is best to choose an appointment for a time when you are not tired and when you can enjoy the pampering that without feeling rushed and guilty about jobs not completed or neglected. You'll emerge looking refreshed and feeling pampered. You may even have enough left over to buy some of your life a "little" present.

Or, still in the under $25 class, look at the new creations of cashmere or blends, perhaps in yellow, aqua or a warm cocoa brown. A skirt, meticulously tailored, will give you years of fashion. Or you could blow the whole bundle on a couple pairs of your favorite brand of nylons—what riches! A pair of long kid gloves, or a special piece of distinctive jewelry could consume most, or all, of your cheque. But either of these investments will give you a lovely feeling of fashion.

You might want to invest in a complete set of your favorite cosmetics, including all the little extras, such as a lovely lipstick case and matching powder compact.

If the cheque is larger than $25, consider a fine quality leather handbag, perhaps complete with matching set of purse accessories. You'll have no difficulty finding sweaters in this price range, but be sure to choose a color and style which will give you a feeling of good fashion for a long time.

Nothing beats that "money in the bank" feeling when you stash it away, in view of the new spring season coming up soon. If it is enough for something as lush as a little fur, or a three-quarter length suede coat, perhaps you can start skimping in the weeks ahead might help to stretch it to cover the cost of these extra luxuries.

However you send that Christmas cheque, we hope you have fun with it. Investing it in something that will give you a great deal of pleasure. For most people that "something" is fashion.

If you have a question on fashion, just write Pegg Rogers care of The Ontario Intelligencer, Front Street, Belleville.

Mr. and Mrs. J. F. Huff Happily Wed 50 Years

On November 28, wedding bells rang again for Mr. and Mrs. Joseph F. Huff, of 2nd Concession of Tyendinaga, but this time they were "golden bells" in commemoration of their wedding day, 50 years ago in the Shannonville Anglican rectory, by the late Rev. William Fleming, in 1913.

Following the ceremony, the happy couple came to the rectory by horse and buggy, and years later, enjoyed their postponed honeymoon.

Mrs. Huff is the former Mary Ann Artis, daughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. John R. Artis, of Thurlow township, and is the last surviving member of a family of five sisters and one brother. Mr. Huff, formerly of Wiltshire, England is the son of the late Mr. and Mrs. Robert F. Huff and has resided in Tyendinaga township for the past 52 years. Mr. Huff has lived at their present home for 38 years.

Mrs. Huff received her guests wearing a dark blue wool and rayon gown with corsage of yellow roses, assisted by Mr. Huff in a navy suit with yellow boutonniere.

The tea table was appointed with a white lace and cutwork linen cloth, (made by the bride's late father, Mrs. Anastasia Gleason, of Buffalo, New York, 22 years ago), and centred with a three-tier anniversary cake bearing a golden legend and adorned with white and gold candlesticks with gold colored candles completed the attractive setting.

Several neighbors assisted in serving during the afternoon and evening.

The honored couple were the recipients of numerous congratulatory cards and gifts, including a five-piece dinette suite and a basket in gold color of artificial flowers, from neighbors of the community. From Holy Trinity Anglican Church, Shannonville, they received a beautiful pot of yellow chrysanthemums; also the presentation of a framed scroll and a vase of cut yellow and bronze mums from Mr. Clarke Rollins, M.P.P. Other members of parliament sent telegrams and letters of congratulations.

There were about 100 guests present for this auspicious occasion.

The community extends to Mr. and Mrs. Huff best wishes for many more anniversaries and years of happiness.

Mr., Mrs. E. Sunderland Mark Golden Wedding Anniversary

Mr. and Mrs. Edward Sunderland, Cobourg, Ont., celebrated their fiftieth wedding anniversary on Sunday, December 23, 1962, with a family luncheon at the Chateau Hotel, Cobourg, Ontario. In the afternoon they were "at home" to their friends at the home of her son and daughter-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. William Sunderland, William St.

The pretty tea table was centred with the bottom layer of the anniversary cake, decorated with gold leaves and gold tapers in crystal holders.

Tea pourers were Mrs. Neil John and Mrs. Audrey Copeland.

Serving was Mrs. Glen Lokan.

Mr. and Mrs. Sunderland came to Canada from Bradford, England, in 1923, and the latter retired as turnkey at the County jail in Belleville in 1954.

Mr. and Mrs. Sunderland have three sons, William of Cobourg, Frank and Russell in Belleville, two grandchildren, Ted and Ardel, son and daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Frank Sunderland, who were all at the occasion.

Many cards and messages were received by the couple, one from the Right Honorable John Diefenbaker, Prime Minister of Canada.

The couple also received a suitable memento from the family.

Canadian Brides in 1963 To Have Choice of Gowns

MONTREAL (CP) Canadian brides in 1963 will be able to dress as romantic characters from the fairy tales or be sleek, sophisticated and practical.

Montreal gown manufacturers report bridal styles for winter and spring will range from the delicate, flimsy, dirndl - waisted gowns inspired by the stories of Hans Christian Anderson and the Brothers Grimm to more simple multi-purpose gowns.

The princess-tale look is young. Short, puffed sleeves are gathered with lace. Skirts are full with only an illusion of a train. Wedding veils flow from circles of pale flowers and from clusters of frosted hothouse fruit.

Bridesmaids gowns, designed to carry out the romantic theme, are ballerina-length with full, ribbon-bound puffed sleeves and come in equally-romantic colors — rose, cornflower blue, jonquil yellow and embroidery on white. Hats are halos of flowers or frosted fruit.

DETACHABLE TRAIN

The 1963 brides will also find a range of the traditional floor-length or ballerina-length gowns of muted satin, silk alpaca, Italian silk, satapeau or organza. While styled with the new fashion silhouette, the controlled skirt, the slim overtunic, the sleeves and the cathedral-length train become full-circle evening cloaks for formal wear.

Lace sleeves and bodices slip off, leaving a sleeveless ball gown. Tunic-styled gowns become going-away dresses while others, etched in lace, convert to elegant dinner gowns.

For the rural women, the uplifting will be slow and painful. Most of them are illiterate and are their husbands. The husbands do not take kindly to wives working outside the vegetable patch and the hut.

YAK AIR FOR SANTA

Santa Klaus beards often are made from shaggy yak fur imported from the Himalayan kingdoms of Nepal and Bhutan.

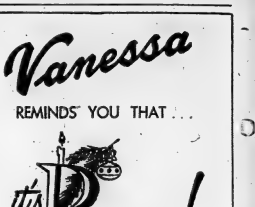
Alpha Lambda Enjoys Holiday Smorgasbord

Recently, members of Alpha Lambda Chapter, Beta Sigma Phi, and their husbands, enjoyed a delightful Christmas party at the gaily decorated home of Mr. and Mrs. Earl Brett.



Social sponsor, Mrs. Ralph Ketcheson, and director, Mrs. William Graham, along with their husbands, were present.

While some enjoyed cheerful conversation around the fireplace, others enjoyed dancing.

The social committee, under Mrs. T. Shaw's direction, had prepared a delicious smorgasbord.

Mr. Earl Brett, as an impromptu Santa Claus, distributed gifts — bringing to a close a truly festive occasion.

Roslin Y.P. Hold Carol Singing Tour

On December 21, the young people's club toured the 8th of Tyendinaga singing carols and extended thanks to the kind people who gave money.

After the singing, the young people gathered at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Ed Sherwin with 17 members present.

Opening prayer, led by Sarah was followed by Scripture taken from St. Luke 1: 26-35 read by Jo-Ann Sherwin.

Five dollars was collected from carol singing.

A vote was taken to give the Sunday School $5. for their funds.

Next meeting will be at Eleanor Hart's on January 4. Lunch was served.

A vote of thanks was extended to Mrs. Sherwin for opening her home.

Want to Give up Smoking

DORIS CLARK

DEAR DORIS—I must try and help the young man who wishes to give up smoking. He has the habit half broken by wishing to stop. I used to smoke 30 and over cigarets a day; developed a harsh cough. I tried hard to break the habit by smoking less; no use.

Then I had a plan. I set a time limit, about two weeks, and smoked and smoked till I got disgusted with myself. The last day I sat and smoked my last cigaret, I hoped. I took a long time with it and then carried a packet around with me in case I defaulted, but I never did. This is over five years ago.

Sure I'd still like to smoke, but the craving has gone. Good luck, son. I'm a grandmother. I'd like to know if my plan works on you.—NANA.

DEAR NANA—Thanks. Working up to it, then making a clean break, seems to be better than any piece-meal tapering off. After you have managed the first few days, it becomes a game to find out how many more you can hold out. Soon you start feeling good and this clinches it—we hope.

CONFIDENTIAL TO WIL S.—Thank you for your note. However, I feel that "Dottie" was justified in her enquiry and that it is only right for parents to allow their teen-age working daughters to handle their own money.

* * *

CONFIDENTIAL TO IN NEED OF HELP—Yes, every single word you say will be kept confidential. If you want me to send you a private reply, be sure to enclose a stamped, self-addressed envelope.

* * *

CONFIDENTIAL TO CLUB GIRL—A book on practical jokes just isn't in my line. If there is anything which is definitely classified under "Ways to Make Enemies and Antagonize People," it's the Practical Joke.

New Year's Eve And Dinner Talk

by Mary Moore

An eggnog party covers a multitude of purposes and obligations.

A charming widow that I know and admire and who has a host of friends, sends out invitations for an eggnog party and serves gallons of it on New Years Eve.

Those who are planning a party but who do not add spirits to their eggnog will be delighted with the following recipe for an

THURSDAY

Dinner Menu

Turkey Soup (see Wednesday); Homemade Rolls; Generous Tossed Salad with Anchovy Salad Dressing; Hot Mince Pie; Cheddar Cheese; Coffee.

AMBER EGGNOG (24 4-oz. servings):

8 cups whole milk, 8 tea bags, 2 teaspoons grated orange rind, 8 eggs, 2 cups sifted icing sugar, ½ teaspoon salt, ½ teaspoon ground cinnamon, ½ pint (1¼ cups) whipping cream, grated nutmeg.

Scald milk in top of double boiler; add tea bags and grated orange rind. Turn off heat and steep for five minutes, stirring once or twice; strain. Chill. Beat eggs (yolks and whites together) until thick and light; gradually beat in icing sugar; beat in salt and cinnamon. Stir in chilled tea mixture.

Beat whipping cream until stiff; add to egg mixture and fold together lightly. Turn into punch bowl or pitcher and sprinkle with grated nutmeg. Ladle or pour into punch cups or glasses.

I have a nagging urge to tell you about the roast of beef I roasted for the thirty-five people who attended the Press Club Christmas party earlier this month. We chose beef because at previous Christmas parties we have had roast turkey, roast suckling pig and roast goose. We wanted a change. I offered to order and roast the joint.

I managed to convince the butcher that I wanted a 23-lb. roast of red brand beef and I wanted it to be hung 24 days and to my delight I got what I asked for. This gigantic roast fitted into my own comfortably although it was nearly two feet long. I roasted it 10 hours at 175 deg. Fahr. and everyone raved about it and came back for seconds until nothing but bare ribs were left.

If you feature roast beef for your New Years dinner roast a smaller one — let us say 8 lbs. —at 175 deg. Fahr. for 8 hours.

Question: I'm having a small, informal wedding, and will be attended by a maid of honor and two bridesmaids, all of whom are my closest friends. I've selected fitted evening bags to give them as gifts. Since there is so much to do before the wedding, I'm afraid I won't have time to give a special lunch or dinner for my attendants, and wonder if it would be appropriate to give them their gifts just before the wedding rehearsal. — C.H., Oradell, N.J.

Answer: A special luncheon, dinner or tea party is usually given for the bride's attendants before a large wedding, but even then it's not obligatory. Presents may be handed out at any time when the group happens to be together. The night of the wedding rehearsal would seem to be a good time to do it.

Question: We live in an apartment house, but know none of the people in the building. I have a nodding acquaintance with a woman I see regularly in the elevator, and would like to invite her and her husband to a small party my husband and I are giving shortly. We've never been introduced or exchanged conversation, so I was wondering if it would be proper to invite them on such a flimsy acquaintance. — Mrs. C. K., Brooklyn, N.Y.

Answer: A nodding acquaintance is a little too brief for a party invitation. The other people might be a bit dubious about attending and, if they should accept, they would be in the uncomfortable position of breaking the ice not only with other guests but with the host and hostess, as well. Before issuing any invitation, it would be wise to let the relationship develop gradually, and see if you have anything in common. If you find, through conversation, that there's a basis for friendship, an invitation could be extended and accepted less self-consciously.

Small Talk

By Zena Cherry

If your IQ is 135 or better, you're in the top two per cent of the population, brainwise. It is the sole requirement for joining Mensa (latin for table) and nothing else matters - they care not about your age, sex, color, family ties or even if you have a good character.

Mensa was founded in England in 1945 and has a roster of 2,000 members over there. Now there's a fledgling American chapter with just 200 members and John J. Cobella, American Selection Officer tells me there are a few Canadian members.

Mensa never takes a position on political questions. Their members cover and express a wide variety of political, religious, moral and any other kind of belief you can name, but for some reason, it is virtually Communist-free and Fascist-free. Maybe there's something to be learned just from that.

So what happens when good IQ's get together, and what does Mensa do? Apart from circulating questionnaires and thus making available for research a cross-section of high I.Q. opinion - - nothing. It is merely a round table society whose members have no mission except to meet and talk, eat and drink. They have nothing much in common, other than I.Q.-wise.

Mensas are 85% male. Non-mensa husbands and wives are welcome to meetings but it is the rare pair where the wife is Mensa and the husband is not. Most female Mensas are unmarried.

Applicants take a do-it yourself Wechsler-Bellevue Intelligence Test, mailed to their homes from headquarters in Britain. Yes, you can cheat, but later there'll be a supervised test to check.

They're looking for new members so if you'd like to take a crack at it, write to Mensa, P.O. Box 86, Gravesend, Brooklyn 23, N.Y.

THE FAMILY COUNCIL

Wife Preservers

Keep old buttons handily by running them on a large safety pin.

Mrs. I.B. — She won't give me a chance.

Tina B. — No one can ever take my mother's place.

Mrs. I.B. — I married a widower with a 15-year-old daughter. Since I've raised my own daughter to college age, you'd think Tina had some confidence in me. But in the third year we've been living together, she never turns to me for advice. When it comes to what to wear to a party, for example, she'll call up her aunts or ask the neighbors, never me.

I want Tina to love me. She'll probably never call me Mother, but I wish she'd stop referring to me as "my father's wife." Since I love her father, I try to love Tina, too. But she keeps me at a distance and makes things hard.

Tina B. — I had one mother and only one. She died when I was 10. I got along fine without my father's new wife. His and my aunts were all I needed. I don't need this Mrs. B. We'll get along best if she just takes care of my dad and doesn't insist on being my mother.

If she feels like mothering someone, there's her own daughter. Although she's 19 and away at college, she comes to the house about once a month. She's the one who should call her mother, not I.

As far as I'm concerned, Mrs. B. is still a stranger. She's an eager beaver to take over the house and family, but she'd better give up on me.

The Council: The trouble with Tina is that she's read too many fairy tales. Mr. Grimm and the others needed villains to create conflict, and when they ran out of ogres they called in wicked stepmothers. Those two last words are inseparable in most childhood stories. How unfair to conscientious stepmothers who are suffused with love, warmth, and the best intentions!

For Tina we must urge a open mind and a trusting heart. No one can have too many friends. Why shut out a kindly lady just because she has cast her lot as "best friend" to Tina's father, and in natural consequence, to his daughter, too?

Mrs. B.'s mistake may be over-eagerness. She is trying to do too much too soon? Is she aiming to get "there" overnight?

It will certainly take longer than a half-year for Mrs. B. to create a place for herself in Tina's life which has gone along for 15 years without her — and quite nicely, thank you, Tina would add! The trick is for the older woman to meet the mixed-up miss where she is now, accept her, decide on a few non-personal approaches. In other words, if Mrs. B. can hold to the concept of being a fellow-guest, along with Tina, in Mr. B.'s home for the first year at least, she'll be more likely to win Tina's cooperation and, in time, collaboration towards a united household!

As for mothering, that's a merely "best-friending" carried to the highest degree. And it certainly takes two, to achieve. Mrs. B.'s good intentions may be easily overlooked by a rejecting, resentful Tina. The latter may see only interference, nagging and persecution. But here's where Mister B. can turn the tide. He's the "back-up pilot." He must harp on the theme that we're both on your side always, daughter dear.

No Epidemics and Polio Continued at Low Level During the Past Year

TORONTO (CP)—The incidence of communicable diseases during 1962 held to about the same level as the previous year, Health Minister Matthew Dymond says in a review of the provincial health department's activities.

There were no epidemics and polio continued at "a very low level," Dr. Dymond said.

However, "in some ways we are lucky we are so healthy," the health minister added.

"With all the immunization services available throughout the province to keep communicable disease under control, a very high percentage of our adult population does not take advantage of them.

"The case of smallpox which developed in Toronto last summer points this out," he said.

"The case itself was fairly mild and the child recovered. But in a panic, hundreds of people raced to their physician or the nearest vaccination clinic for protection against possible danger to themselves."

The health minister said many people didn.not realize that immunization clinics are open year round and "even when the service is readily available and at no charge to themselves, many adults do not use these facilities."

"The unfortunate tragedy of the drug thalidomide", blamed for the birth of 23 deformed babies in the province, "points up the fact that people should be careful of the drugs they take," Dr. Dymond said.

"Each drug has a specific area of usefulness and is prescribed, accordingly," he said. "Self - medication and taking pills from well-meaning friends and relatives is something in which no one should indulge."

In the field of mental health, the health minister said there has been a trend from the large institution to smaller hospitals located in more accessible communities.

"This facilitates the rehabilitation of the mental patient and allows him to keep contact with the community in which he lives through visits to and from his family and from volunteers."

A 300-bed mental hospital had been completed at Goderich, and another 300-bed hospital at Owen Sound was almost completed, he said. Also, a 600-bed hospital school at Palmerston.

"More community psychiatric hospitals are planned. Psychiatric services in public general hospitals is also increasing."

Crowded Living Causing Urbophrenia, City Jitters

By ALTON BLAKESLEE

PHILADELPHIA (AP)—Looking at modern living, a physician says many of us may be falling victim to urbophrenia.

That means city jitters.

Human crowding into big cities and suburbs has changed the climate in which we live into an artificial climate which is too much indoors, Dr. Igbo Kurt Kardshiner of the University of Pennsylvania said today.

This fosters "a peculiar greenhouse existence" bringing on new and poorly - understood health problems, Dr. Kornbluh said a symposium on biometeorology of the American Association for the Advancement of Science. Biometeorology studies effect of weather and climate on life.

AFFECTS CREATIVITY

"The wearisome monotony of an immured existence within the confines of the residence and the place of employment" leaves its mark on the physical health, the mental capacity and productivity and creativity of humans, he said. Dr. Kornbluh is medical director of the department of physical medicine at the university's graduate hospital.

People fail to seek the relaxations and physical activity to be found in outdoor recreation, or don't have a chance to do so, he said.

Such a "lifelong, sheltered vegetation punctuated only by short periods of vacation may lead to urbiophrenia" and result in physical, psychological and social disorders, he said.

At the same session, Dr. Joseph Lee Hollander of the University of Pennsylvania reported scientific evidence backing up arthritis victims who say they can accurately predict weather because their pains grow worse before a storm.

A combined change of falling barometric or air pressure and rising humidity does tend to make arthritic joints more stiff and swollen, he said.

Yemen Claims Royal Palaces In Rocket Range

DAMASCUS, Syria (AP)—Yemen's republican regime boasted today that its army possesses in its rockets a force threatened to use them against the royal palaces in Saudi Arabia and Jordan.

The claim and the threat were made in a broadcast from Sana'a the Yemeni capital, describing an hour's military parade celebrating the three - month anniversary of Field Marshal Abdullah Sallal's overthrow of the monarchy last September.

The announcer did not give the type, make or number of the rockets that were shown off, but said they were among the "latest modern rockets in the world." There was speculation that they came from the United Arab Republic and actually are controlled by U.A.R. troops which are bolstering the Yemeni regime.

The announcer said the rockets were "capable of reaching King Saud's Al Nasairiah palace" in the Saudi Arabian capital of Riyadh some 500 miles north of Sana'a.

Sallal said in a broadcast speech at the parade that his regime is "building an army strong enough to liberate the entire Arabian peninsula."

Khrushchev Tells Adenauer Policy Risky

MOSCOW (Reuters) — Premier Khrushchev told West German Chancellor Adenauer in a letter published today "in your policy—a policy of intensifying tension and prodding the world to new conflicts—you are endangering the lives of millions of people," the Soviet news agency Tass reported.

Khrushchev's letter was in reply to one from Adenauer about East-West Berlin border incidents.

Khrushchev in his reply said the federal German government "has absolutely no rights in West Berlin."

Khrushchev said he was "very much concerned" over the situation in West Berlin and that very regrettable incidents are taking place on the borders of the city" with East Germany.

He said visitors from West Germany carried out in West Berlin "vicious and dangerous provocations against the cause of peace and security of the neighboring socialist countries."

Train Crew Unaware Of Fatal Accident

RIDGEWAY, Ont. (CP)—Gerald Stiers, 43, a Ridgeway milkman, was killed today when the truck in which he was making his early-morning rounds hit the side of a westbound CNR freight train in the centre of this community 14 miles southeast of Welland.

The crew were unaware of the accident and the train was stopped at Cayuga 40 miles west.

DETECT HIGH WINDS

BUFFALO, N.Y. (AP) — Jet winds of 161 miles an hour swept over New York state in the direction of New England Wednesday at an altitude of 22,000 feet. The weather bureau here said pilots would avoid the altitude until the winds subsided.

CASTRO GREETS RED CROSS MEN — Cuban Premier Fidel Castro, centre, greets representatives of the American Red Cross on their arrival aboard the freighter African Pilot in Havana harbor. The freighter carried the first installment of $53 million worth of food and medicines for Castro's swap of the 1,113 Bay of Pigs invasion captives.

Castro in Gay Mood, May Release American Prisoners

By HAROLD MORRISON
Canadian Press Staff Writer

Fidel Castro is in a gay mood. He not only made the United States eat dirt in the futile Cuban invasion attempt 20 months ago but now he has collected a handsome price for release of 1,113 prisoners.

Under White House persuasion, U.S. manufacturers contributed some $53,000,000 worth of food and medicine to pay the prisoners' fines" and Castro also demanded and got $2,900,000 in cash before the prisoner release could be completed.

Apparently convinced he struck a good bargain, Castro has allowed 1,000 relatives of these prisoners to leave Cuba and is considering the release of 22 or 23 Americans now behind Cuban jail bars.

This would seem on the surface to make for friendlier relations between the U.S. and Cuba. But in contrast to the Havana station, the Washington mood is one of well-concealed anger.

TOOK RESPONSIBILITY

Having approved the invasion attempt while denying the invaders the protection of American air cover, President Kennedy took responsibility for the prisoners' fate.

It now is disclosed that the president's brother, Attorney General Robert Kennedy, took a leading role in the collection of food and medicine which Castro demanded, secretly pushing the whole project to the point where many manufacturers complained they were being bullied by Washington. The secrecy of the project probably was an indication that the president feared public opinion clearly. Castro has been a great plague for the Kennedys.

Kennedy, therefore, hasn't given up the drive to bring the downfall of the bearded leader. A new order to bar the use of American ports on return trips for ships which deliver goods to Cuba is in the works. It likely will be issued just as soon as the U.S. gets all the prisoners it can out of Cuban jails.

This likely will be followed by other American moves in later months to tighten the economic noose around the Caribbean island. The Washington plan is to coax other Latin American countries to join in anti-Castro programs to prevent the world from reaching the conclusion that the U.S. merely is attempting to clobber Cuba into submission.

COMPLAINED TO OAS

Thus, the U.S. lost no time in complaining to the Organization of American States that the Cuban regime is still preaching revolution in other Latin American countries"a clear indication of the continuing interventionist purposes of the Castro regime."

It was a Kennedy point in his negotiations with Soviet Premier Khrushchev that providing other conditions are met, the U.S. would not invade Cuba as long as Castro does not try to export his revolution to neighboring states.

This does not mean that Kennedy is planning an invasion of Cuba immediately. What it probably means is that the U.S. will gradually step up harassment.

The release of the Cuban prisoners may help, since Bremen harbor deep hatred of Castro. No matter did Manuel Artime, leader of the unsuccessful 1961 invasion, step on American soil than he called for new steps to overthrow Castro. Artime said the freed prisoners owe it to the dead to liberate their homeland.

With such men as these and the deadly resentment of Cuban communism, trouble may be just building up for Castro and his regime.

COMPLETE LINE

MOSCOW (AP)—The government announced today the completion of electrification of the main north-south railroad line in the Soviet Union. The line extends 1,500 miles from Leningrad in the north to Leninakan on the Turkish border.

Says Firemen Looted Rooms During Blaze

CHICAGO (AP) — Two investigations are under way into a charge by an apartment tenant that firemen looted his quarters while fighting a blaze in the building.

Fire Commissioner Robert Quinn Wednesday called in for questioning all 60 firemen who answered the alarm.

An investigation also was started by Mayor Richard J. Daley, to whom the complainant, John Naisbitt, 33, made his charges in a telegram.

The mayor assigned his commissioner of investigation, Thomas McInerney, to look into the charges by Naisbitt, publicity director for the National Safety Council.

"We want to get to the bottom of this quickly as possible," Daley said.

A predawn fire Christmas morning routed Naisbitt, his wife, Nina, and their four children from their south side apartment. Firemen responding to the alarm, extinguished the blaze.

Naisbitt estimated the value of articles taken from his apartment and that of another tenant at $615. Damage from the fire, which started on another floor, was estimated at $6,000.

Lawyers to Aid Father Suing Drug Company

LONDON (Reuters) — The father of an armless baby will get financial support through Britain's law society in his high court action against the makers of the sedative thalidomide, it was disclosed today.

Librarian Edward Satherley, who lives on the Isle of Wight, off Britain's south coast, claims Distillers Company (Biochemicals) Company, which made the drug, is responsible for cause deformities in unborn babies.

He alleges that his 12-months-old son Richard was born without arms because his wife Betty was supplied with thalidomide under Britain's national health service during her pregnancy.

After a full-scale "private" investigation, the law society's legal aid committee decided to support Satherley in his case for more than 300 thalidomide babies in Britain.

Michael Carr - Jones, chairman of the society for the aid of thalidomide children, told reporters 12 other parents have applied for legal aid so they can take court action.

Only 106 Miles Of Highway 401 To Be Completed

TORONTO (CP)—The Ontario highways department awarded contracts this year totaling more than $20,000,000, an increase of more than $10,000,000 over the total tender value of contracts issued in 1961.

Included in new highway mileage opened this year were 27 miles of trans-provincial highway 401, bringing the total mileage in use to 404. The highways department at year-end reported construction of the remaining 106 miles was well advanced.

By the end of 1963, the highways department said, the entire 510 miles traversing the province from southeast to southwest will be opened to traffic.

About 50 miles of 401 west of London, which were to have been open for traffic before the end of 1962, remained uncompleted because of unusually heavy rainfall and prolonged frost weather during the late summer and fall.

Service stations are being constructed at eight points along Highway 401 from Belleville to London and are to be in use by early 1963.

Included in Trans - Canada Highway work this year was a bypass at Parry Sound and 22 miles of Highway 17 between Fort William and Kenora, of which 27 miles had been paved by year-end and grading on the remainder "was well advanced preparatory to paving next year."

By the end of 1962, all contracts had been awarded for construction of the $20,000,000 Homer Skyway at Sarnia-Lambton, which is expected to be opened next year.

Volunteers From Armed Forces Taking Physiological Tests in 'Climatic Suite'

OTTAWA (CP)—The Defence Research Board has built a three-room "climatic suite" at its medical laboratories at Downsview, Ont., for physiological tests on volunteers drawn from the armed forces.

The board says in a statement summarizing some of its major activities in 1962 that the program is designed to determine human mental and physical changes under a variety of climatic environments.

The "climatic suite" comprises a treated room where hot, humid conditions are simulated; one where wet, cold environments are created; and a third room for investigating physiological responses of men and for testing equipment and clothing under dry conditions at temperatures down to 70 below zero.

Among records obtained by the scientists are the volunteers' energy expenditures, oxygen intake and carbon dioxide output, metabolic and blood pressure, weight variations and other related medical data.

HELP WEAPON DESIGN

Object of the experiments is to obtain medical information which will aid in the planning and design of weapons used by the armed forces to ensure the most effective use of personnel under all conditions.

The board said this data should also make it possible to compensate, in the design stage, for human physical and mental shortcomings. It didn't say how.

The board said the Fort Churchill, Man., rocket range is back in business after a big fire which severely damaged it and that during 1963 some 18 Black Brant rockets will be launched from the site.

These launchings will carry out a number of upper atmospheric experiments, including cosmic ray measurements and auroral studies. Similar launchings will be for joint experiments by the National Research Council and Canadian universities.

IMPROVED BATTERY

In another field, the board said the power sources section of the chemical laboratories has saved the department thousands of dollars with studies and recommendations leading to commercial batteries.

The recommendations resulted in an RCAF decision to employ nickel cadmium batteries which give high current in cold weather and rapid recharge. Four new types of RCAF aircraft — the CF - 104 low-level jet fighter, Tutor jet trainer and two helicopters — now use this type of battery.

A Canadian - made battery powered U.S. astronaut Scott Carpenter's homing beacon successfully when he landed after his earth orbits.

The board's main achievement during 1962 was the construction of the satellite Alouette which the U.S. National Aeronautics and Space Administration put into orbit Sept. 28. The satellite is transmitting from its 630 - mile high orbit information on the top layers of the ionosphere.

Switch Sultans In Fadhli

ADEN (AP)—A communique announced today that the state council of Fadhli state deposed Sultan Abdulla Bin Othman and installed Ahmed Bin Abdulla Fadhli in his place.

The new sultan has been minister for national guidance and information in the government of the South Arabian Federation, made up of British protected sultanates and tribal areas of the South Arabian peninsula.

The communique said the council had received a "great number" of petitions from citizens complaining against the former sultan's actions. The announcement gave no details.

FIND WOMAN DEAD

NEW YORK (AP) — Mary Sherwood Kiam, 39, daughter of the late Pulitzer prize-winning playwright Robert E. Sherwood, was found dead Wednesday in her Manhattan apartment. Police said her wrists had been slashed by a razor. Authorities termed the death an apparent suicide.

Three Children Drop to Deaths Off Steep Cliff

OGDEN, Utah (AP) — Two girls and a boy slipped off an ice-slick cliff near the top of Waterfall Canyon and fell 500 feet to their deaths.

The victims were Shauna Southwick, 9, Mark Way, 9, and Bonnie Ross, 8, all of Ogden.

Sheriff's deputy James Evans said Shauna's father, Dr. Paul Southwick, told him the youngsters got permission to go on a hike Wednesday.

Dr. Southwick said the parents told them not to be gone long. The children didn't mention they intended to walk to the top of the canyon, he said.

At dusk, the parents began a search—then called the sheriff's office. Officers found the bodies at the base of the cliff.

The boy and girls whose ages were dead. Shauna Southwick was alive but died en route to hospital.

Officers estimated the youngsters hiked about 3½ miles from their homes to the top of the canyon.

There is little water at the canyon summit this time of year but there is enough seepage to put a glaze of ice on the cliff.

Plan to Move War-Ruined London Church

FULTON, Mo. (AP) — Moscow's Pravda took a poke Wednesday at plans to move a war-ruined London church to Westminster College at Fulton, where Sir Winston Churchill delivered his famous "iron curtain" speech 16 years ago.

But Westminster, which wants to reconstruct the church here as a memorial to Churchill, took the Communist party newspaper's jibes in stride and so did the townspeople in this mid-Missouri city of 9,000.

"It must be a good idea if they don't like it," commented Dr. Robert L. D. Davidson, the college president, adding: "We couldn't be more complimented."

One of the sponsors of the project, banker John C. Harris said: "We did not think it necessary to consult Mr. Khrushchev on the matter."

Last month plans were announced to acquire St. Mary Aldermanbury Church, move it here and rebuild it. British church authorities are seeking governmental approval. The project is contingent also upon raising $200,000, the estimated cost of moving the old church and Christopher Wren completed about 1677.

DENIES REPORT

In London, Reuters news agency quoted a Church of England spokesman as denying Pravda's jibe that the church is being sold.

(The spokesman said the remains are being given to Westminster College for rebuilding into an interdenominational chapel. He said that Second World War bombing left little of the church intact.)

Pravda ridiculed the church-moving idea in a satirical article Wednesday. It termed Churchill's speech as the one in which the cold war was declared, and which legalized the "sad role of the junior partner" of the United States." It added: "That was the beginning of the sale of Great Britain."

Westminster, a four-year college for men supported by the Presbyterian Church, was founded in 1851 and prides itself in encouraging discussion on public affairs among its 600 students.

Barometer of Want, Waste, Unemployment Rate Will Rise and Fall Next Year

By ROBERT RICE

OTTAWA (CP) — That bleak barometer of want and waste—the unemployment rate — will rise and fall in 1963. The big question is whether the range will continue the upward drift evident throughout the post-war cycles of recession and recovery.

Over the long term employment has been increasing. From one economic cycle to another, the peaks in the unemployment graph—as well as the troughs—have been successively higher.

In contrast, the short - term picture, comparing 1962 with 1961, was brighter. Each month in 1962 showed a lower unemployment rate than the corresponding month a year earlier.

By mid-November, as the labor force headed into another winter, there were 342,000 unemployed in Canada compared with 349,000 at the same point in 1961. The national rate of unemployment was 5.2 per cent of the labor force compared with 5.4 per cent a year earlier.

While unemployment was running slightly lower on a year-to-year basis in 1962, employment was well ahead—up 1.9 per cent.

CLC PESSIMISTIC

In mid-December, the Canadian Labor Congress told the government that this winter may well see a new peak of unemployment for the post-war period—a forecast rejected by Labor Minister Starr who insisted that present economic signs continue to indicate lower unemployment.

The debate over unemployment changed during 1962 to a broader discussion of over - all economic policies.

This was evident during the election campaign last spring, with all parties promising new economic policies aimed at improving job opportunities.

Just before election day, Prime Minister Diefenbaker forecast virtual full employment by early fall. By September, the unemployment rate had fallen to 3.9 per cent—lowest in three years—and economists took this to mean virtual full employment as defined by Mr. Diefenbaker.

But opposition parties insisted that full employment meant a much lower rate.

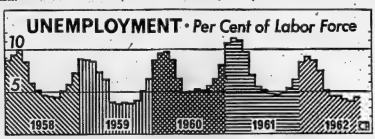
NEW JOBS PROMISED

In the throne speech at the opening of the 25th Parliament, the minority Progressive Conservative government promised policies that would create 1,000,000 new jobs over the next five years.

The government introduced legislation to establish a new National Economic Development Board to recommend specific economic policies to meet specific Canadian problems.

It also presented pioneering legislation aimed at meeting the human challenges and consequences of automation, a measure designed to bring labor, management and government together to assess and resolve the manpower problems of a changing technology.

The long-term impact on unemployment of these and other economic measures remained to be tested in practice.



A budget is awaited, with its potential for prodding the economy and thus improving the job situation. The austerity measures to bolster the exchange reserves are being slowly reduced but will probably still have a bearing on jobs in the immediate future.

DRAIN ON FUND

Winter, with its usual seasonal increase in unemployment, posed the threat of another serious drain on the unemployment insurance fund which this year came precariously close to bankruptcy.

The fund, a record $625,776,000 at Dec. 31, 1956, shrunk to its low point of $19,251,000 at May 31 but had climbed back to $89,923,000 at the end of October. Its reserve, the government held a further 25,000,000 voted by Parliament last session in case it was needed by the fund.

Meanwhile, the government was expected to act early in the new year on recommendations of the special Gill committee appointed 17 months ago to examine the unemployment insurance system and propose ways of making the fund sound. The report of the committee, headed by Toronto insurance executive Ernest C. Gill, was to be in MPs' hands by the end of this month.

JOBLESS LOWER IN 1962 — The unemployment picture was brighter during 1962 compared with 1961. In each month of this year, jobless total as a percentage of labor force was smaller than in corresponding month in 1961. Graph shows monthly changes in annual cycle of unemployment rate since January, 1958. Post-war record peak was 11.3 per cent February, 1961. In November this year rate was 5.2 per cent compared with 5.4 a year earlier. (CP Newsmap).

RARE, MEDIUM, WELL-DONE

By Geo. H. Carver, Sports Editor

Well, that's that. Ole King Gobbler is shorn of his golden-brown glory and faces a bleak but brief future of cold plates, sandwiches and a more or less ignominious finish in the soup pot.

The hopes and wishes of millions were brought to plentiful and colorful fruition with the coming of the glorious morn. King Boy and Queen Girl were royalty for a day while parent courtiers gazed happily from the sidelines.

It was a glad good Christmas even if the dagger of tragedy slashed a blood-red streamer across the multi-colored holiday scene. The Grim Reaper rode the gory trail of the highways taking his inevitable toll and leaving an indelible mark of sorrow for many on the Christmases to come.

World-wide there seemed to be a little more to "Peace on Earth, Good Will Toward Men" than in recent years." The world will never forget the momentous incidents of a short time ago when millions stood breathless awaiting the outcome of crisis.

Yet this week the nations representing the free world and those who bow to their gods of communism exchanged greetings. The Russian people remembered those of the United States in holiday exchanges.

The Firebrand of the Carribean, for a price, it is true, exchanged prisoners of an abortive invasion for medicine and food. He was moved, it is reported, to add a large number of relatives of those who would have fought him, and given them permission to leave their country.

The old custom of hanging up the stocking on Christmas Eve still prevails in many places. The children awoke to find theirs filled with candies, nuts, fruit and presents. The oldsters, perhaps, fill a figurative "sock" with their hopes and dreams of another year.

I, in my mind's eye, hung up a great big pair of stockings, with the wish, that some of the things I would like, or would like to see would be packed in it by the Santa Claus of sport.

I hoped for a quick return to health for Harry Jerome, so he can take his rightful place at the top of Canada's trackmen.

It wasn't hard to wish for Canada to send her top amateur players to Stockholm in March so we can regain our lost prestige as the world's best hockey nation.

Nor was it difficult to hope for extended ice facilities for the skating and hockey-minded youngsters of the city.

I put in an extra wish for all the underdogs; that they might find the strength and material to bring at least the competitive ability to aid their pride—and box offices.

And a special whisper for the amateurs of sport in a country where professionalism is rapidly becoming king. For them at least the strength and finances to carry on a great job.

I murmured a special word of thanks to sponsors of amateur sports in the city with the hope that fandom would see it's way clear for more tangible support. Softball, baseball and hockey kept alive by the work and devotion of a few are deserving of the support of the many.

I put in a word of thanks for a truly great 1962 year of sport with its thrills, surprises and upsets, its champions and near champions, and a wish for a bigger, brighter and better 1963.

And I put in a wish for a better, bigger and more truthful crystal ball. The worn-out 1962 relic in its dying moments foresaw the New York Giants beating the Packers when my pool ticket calls the Green Bay gang to win.

Up Lead Three Points

Baby Habs Whip Hawks

Montreal's junior Canadiens clinched a playoff berth as they moved three points ahead of the Hawks in the Ontario Hockey Association provincial junior A group Wednesday with a lop-sided 7-1 win over St. Catharines Blar' Hawks at Montreal.

The second-place Peterborough Petes have a chance to narrow the margin tonight when they meet Niagara Falls Flyers at Peterborough. In the other game tonight Guelph Royals are at Hamilton to play the Wings.

Bob Charlesbois led the Canadiens with a pair of goals. Leo Thiffault, Jacques Madore, Yvon Cournoyer, Bill Inglis and German Gagnon scored the other Canadien goals.

John Brenneman scored for St. Catharines midway in the first period to tie the score 1-1. After that, it was all Montreal.

The game broke into a fight in the third period. Ken Hodge and Paul Popiel of St. Catharines and Norm Dennis and Thiffault of Montreal were given major penalties.

Aussies Sweep Aside Mexican Bid

Easily Win Davis Cup

By WILL GRIMSLEY

BRISBANE, Australia (AP)—Rod Laver, on the threshold of a lucrative professional contract, and sore-ribbed Roy Emerson ground out an effortless 7-5, 6-2, 6-4 victory over Mexico's Rafael Osuna and Antonio Palafox today to give Australia its fourth straight Davis Cup challenge round tennis victory.

The doubles triumph gave the powerful Aussies a clinching 3-0 lead over Mexico in the best-of-five series.

Laver defeated Osuna and Neale Fraser whipped Palafox in the first two singles Wednesday.

So the seemingly never-ending Aussie dynasty continues for at least another year. Not only was this the Aussies fourth straight triumph but it was their 11th in 3 years. The United States beat them in 1956 and 1958 to interrupt the march.

The Aussies were favored so their victory came as no surprise. But it was not expected to be quite so emphatic. Osuna, a student at Southern California who learned most of his tennis in the United States, was the big hope to make things tough for the Aussies.

But the Aussies never really had any problem. The final stroke analysis showed they did not lose a single service. Surprisingly, it was Osuna who dropped three of his services. Palafox, regarded as somewhat erratic, lost only one.

Fraser, because he had not fully recovered from a rib injury suffered in practice two weeks ago, was replaced in the opening singles by Frazer. The first set followed service until the 11th game when 23 Aussies broke Osuna, then held their own delivery for the set. The Aussies, playing with all-first game and Osuna in the third. They smashed Osuna at love.

Then Emerson won his service in the confidence in the world, rushed to a 5-0 lead in the second set, breaking Palafox in the ice at love for a 4-0 lead. Palafox and Osuna each won his next service but couldn't break the Aussies, so the set ran out.

LAVER WINS IN DAVIS CUP PLAY — Rod Laver of Australia's defending Davis Cup team, moves in to hit the ball during his match with Mexico's Rafael Osuna in the Davis Cup challenge round at Brisbane, Australia, yesterday. Laver won, 6-2, 6-1, 7-5. (AP Wirephoto)

Thought Hull Or Jackson Would Win

Kidd Didn't Expect Top Athlete Award

TORONTO (CP) —Distance runner Bruce Kidd, named Canada's athlete of the year, says he expected figure skater Don Jackson or hockey star Bobby Hull would win the award.

Commenting on his selection as the outstanding male and the outstanding athlete, male or female, in a year-end poll conducted by The Canadian Press, the 19-year-old track star said he felt his poor showing in the British Empire Games marathon could discredit him.

"And you can't argue with 50 goals a year," he said, referring to Hull's record with the Black Hawks last winter.

"Of course a track runner has a bit of an advantage having a 12-month season. We appear more often than in any sport."

HULL PLACED SECOND

Hull and world champion skater Jackson of Oshawa, were second and third in the poll for the best individual male performers.

Kidd picked the closing ceremonies of the BEG in Perth, Australia, this year as the most inspiring event for him this year, placing it ahead of his gold medal in the six-mile event. He won a bronze medal in the three-mile run but pulled out of the 26-mile marathon after 23½ miles.

Kidd plans one more meet this year, the Sugar Bowl track and field meet in New Orleans Dec. 31.

"We'll continue with the indoor track season for the first three months of the year. Then we'll go outdoors, hoping to hit the American outdoor season and then perhaps move to Europe for a couple of meets.

"Beyond that it's pretty hard to say. We're still heading toward the 1964 Olympics."

Nip Wings Behind Big M ★★★★★

Leafs Share Top Slot With Chicago

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Frank Mahovlich continues his amazing ways.

The big Toronto winger scored his 22nd goal of the season and added three assists Wednesday night to spark the Leafs to a 5-4 win over Detroit Red Wings. It was the only NHL game of the night.

The win enabled Toronto to move into a tie for first place with Chicago Black Hawks, two points ahead of the third-place Wings.

For Mahovlich, it was his 18th goal in the last 15 games. He has now scored in five consecutive games.

The 195-pound left winger also roared into first place in the league scoring race with 36 points, a four-point edge over Andy Bathgate of New York rangers.

in avenging a 3-1 loss in Detroit Christmas Night, the Leafs used tactics that are becoming their trademark: A scoring blitz, followed by reliance on defensive strength.

The Leafs were trailing 2-0 going into the second period, but powered home four goals in 13 minutes to take a lead they maintained for the rest of the game despite a Detroit onslaught.

Johnny Bower in the Toronto nets made several key saves in the last few minutes of play. He came up with 38 stops in the game, compared with 32 for Detroit goalie Terry Sawchuk.

Detroit took a 1-0 lead in the first period on a high drive from close in by Billy McNeill. Parker MacDonald, the league's second-highest goal-scorer, got his 17th of the season shortly before the period ended by breaking through the Toronto defence and drawing nearly out of position.

Mahovlich set up the Leafs' first goal by rookie defenceman Kent Douglas with a crisp pass-out with two minutes gone in the second period.

Toronto centre Dave Keon tied it up 2-2 a minute and a half later when he tipped in a shot by veteran Red Kelly. Both goals were scored on power plays.

FAULKNER ASSISTS

Detroit took the lead for the last time a minute later when Bruce MacGregor converted passes by linemates Alex Faulkner and Larry Jeffrey on the kid line into his fifth goal of the season.

The Big M tied the score 3-3 with his specialty—a blazing slap-shot from his left-wing slot—at 9:03 of the second period. Al Arbour, Leafs substitute defenceman, scored less than six minutes later.

In the third period, Mahovlich again made a key play. The muscular 24-year-old made a spectacular rush the length of the ice but the close checking of Detroit defenceman Pete Goegan held him to a weak shot.

Linemate Eddie Shack alertly napped in the rebound giving Leafs a 5-3 lead with 15 minutes left to play.

Detroit centre Alex Delvecchio of Detroit narrowed the margin to 5-4 at 11:32 with an angle shot.

LOSE FONTEYNE

The Wings lost the services of penalty-killer Val Fonteyne for an undetermined time, when the winger was checked into the boards in the first period by Toronto's Dick Duff.

He received a 13-inch stitch cut to his head and was taken to hospital, where he will remain for observation.

Montreal Canadiens received word Wednesday that Phil Goyette will be out for the season with a fracture to his right leg received Christmas night.

Goyette had scored two assists in Montreal's 6-0 victory over Chicago before colliding with Eric Nesterenko of the Hawks late in the third period.

In tonight's only NHL game, the fifth-place Rangers play host to the last-place Boston Bruins.

Minor Hockey

The Belleville "Rangers" defeated the Trenton "Red Wings" 8-5 in a exhibition minor hockey game played at the 6 R.D. rink on Boxing Day.

Bowls Games Clubs Ready

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Penn State's football team finally arrived in St. Augustine, Fla., Wednesday night and went into final preparations for the Gator Bowl game against Florida in Jacksonville Saturday.

A chartered bus and equipment truck pulled into St. Augustine, ending a 30-hour trip for the football players and coaches—many times as long as expected because of bad weather.

Coach Rip Engle hustled the squad to St. Augustine High School's practice field and its first workout since breaking temporary bowl in Annapolis, Md., last Saturday.

With Penn State's strong line in mind, the Florida football squad concentrated on passing in a practice session Wednesday.

"Practice is going very satisfactory, although several injuries have come up," coach Graves said. "The passing is looking all right. It has looked sharp all week."

Most of the injuries are minor, although halfback Bob Hoover definitely is out of the game.

LAMONICA IS KEY

Notre Dame's quarterback Daryle Lamonica holds the key to the East offence for Saturday's East-West football game at Kezar Stadium in San Francisco. Workouts indicate Lamonica will unlock a potent passing attack.

The six-foot-two signal caller hit 15 straight passes in the East's drill at the Santa Clara practice field.

Coach Dane Devine of Missouri, head coach for the West, already has designated Sonny Gibbs of Texas Christian as his starting quarterback with Hogh Campbell, the pass catching record-setter from Washington State as one of the ends, teaming with Gerome Hanz of Rice.

Devine, whose Missouri team beat Georgia Tech 14-10 in the Bluebonnet Bowl, is installing more pass plays than Missouri used in its bowl battle.

Perhaps with that in mind, East head coach Jack Mollenkopf has switched emphasis to defence the last two days.

Saturday's only other collegiate football game will be the Blue-Gray game at Montgomery, Ala., matching the North college all-stars with the South.

The offence - minded Gray squad spent its time on "a real good defensive workout," coach Tom Nugent of Maryland, although they also reviewed the passing and running attack.

Blue coach Robert Devaney of Nebraska, preparing for the forecasted offensive duel, sent his forces through pass defence drills during most of the session.

"I'm real pleased with the spirit of this bunch," Devaney said.

CBS Network Has Eight Of Top 10 in the Ratings

By CYNTHIA LOWRY

NEW YORK (AP)—A television viewer, aware that various campaigns are currently under way to "save" programs cancelled by networks, suggests another kind of effort:

"I wonder if you and some of your colleagues would undertake a crusade to stop the cleaning of teeth in the living rooms of the nation?" she writes.

I'd like to start the campaign on a slightly larger base. I'd welcome a surcease from toothbrushers—particularly that fellow who continues to scrub away at a restaurant table. But I would also like to abolish the shavers, the perspiration offenders, the respiratory sufferers, the draining sinuses, the churning stomachs, the germ-laden mouths and throats, showering and bathing men and women.

In fact, any commercial which deals with functions normally performed in the privacy of one's bathroom or bedroom—and this also includes combing of hair—is likely to be offensive to a large and perhaps old-fashioned segment of the viewing audience.

However, if television were to ban the advertising of all of these articles, stations would probably wind up/each year in the red.

TRIUMPH FOR CBS

The new Nielsen ratings confirm the continuing popularity of CBS shows—the network has eight of the top 10, with Beverly Hillbillies still far out in front. The Wizard of Oz, the Judy Garland classic, slipped into the No. 2 spot, followed by Candid Camera, Bonanza, Red Skelton, Gunsmoke, Danny Thomas, Lucille Ball, Dick Van Dyke and Ben Casey.

Meanwhile ABC, which has had a tough season as far as bit shows are concerned, is planning a major overhaul of its programs next season.

Recommended tonight:

"McHale's Navy," ABC, 9:30-10 EST—the Ernest Borgnine comedy with a delayed Christmas story; Andy Williams show, NBC, 10-11 — Tennessee Ernie Ford in his first guest appearance this season.

Took Two Years For Lawrence Of Arabia Film

By BOB THOMAS

HOLLYWOOD (AP)—It was the end of a long campaign for Peter O'Toole.

"Campaign is a good word for it," says the actor who is starring as Lawrence of Arabia.

"When I agreed to do this picture, they told me it would take five months," he said. "That was two years ago last October."

He had reckoned without the wiles of his employer, producer Samuel Spiegel, a man bent on perfectionism (On the Waterfront, Bridge on the River Kwai).

Theirs was not an immediate attachment.

"We met first in 1958, and Sam was unimpressed," he recalls. "When David Lean suggested me for Lawrence, Sam didn't think much of the idea. But David won him over.

"I didn't care much for Sam at first, either. But I must say I have grown to like him. Sam is a burglar, of course. But he has the face of a burglar, and that's his charm. Other producers can be burglars but they don't look like it."

It should be added that "burglar" is a show biz term of semi-endearment for a sharp operator who generally gets the best of a deal.

O'Toole is an outspoken type. He is a rangy fellow with taffy-colored hair and casual dress. He is also one of England's best young (29) actors.

This was his first trip to Hollywood.

Would he be willing to work here?

"Yes. I have worked in other deserts. I have even worked in Stratford-on-Avon."

He made it plain that he considered the Bard's birthplace a cultural desert.

"A terrible place," he says. "I spent nine of the worst months of my life there. It is devoted to commercialising the name of a pretty good script writer. Have you tried a Shakespeare-burger? You can get one there.

"The plays are well done at Stratford, but the theatre is a monstrosity. It looks like a large toilet. George Bernard Shaw, who hated Shakespeare, kept the designer a one-word message: 'Congratulations.'"

King of the Hill

Another new king has been crowned at the Bowl-O-Drome. Leo St. Louis averaged 287 a game for 5 games in the challenge roll-off and then came up with 807 for three to Labelle's 803 to de-throne King Labelle.

St. Louis also cracked the 8-in-a-row to win the Pot-of-Gold ($25.00). Wes Andrews had the second highest string of strikes, 6 in a row, to win a 27-pound turkey.

In the game that Leo St. Louis had the eight in a row, he finished with a 403.

There were seven 300 games rolled: Bill Lott 328, Cec Hardwick 327, Wes Andrews 308, Leo LaBelle 320 and 300, Ron Saylor 301 and Leo St. Louis 308.

May Run Against Packers

Giants Cautious But Confident

By JACK HAND

NEW YORK (AP) — When coach Allie Sherman says he hopes to have a balanced attack in Sunday's National Football League title game here against Green Bay, that means New York Giants hope to give passer Y. A. Tittle an assist by running against the tough Packers.

Impossible to run against the Packers, you say?

Los Angeles Rams ran against them for 207 yards in the last game of the season. Detroit Lions moved 153 yards on the ground against the Packers Thanksgiving Day but managed only 91 yards against the Giants earlier.

Sherman is the cautious type. He wouldn't admit his club still bears the mental bruises of its 1961 title game with the Packers if their 37-0 score wasn't hanging up for all to read.

"We know what we want to do Sunday," he said Wednesday. "We'll find out in the game what we can do."

FIFTH GAME CAUTIOUS

The Giants are walking on eggs, trying to avoid any quote that would give ammunition to coach Vince Lombardi to fire up his Packers.

"We assume they will be tougher," said Sherman.

Alex Webster of the Giants, a former Montreal Alouette fullback, echoed the same thoughts when he said: "They still are the same ball club. They should be better, playing together another year."

Lombardi, who is also being cautious in his predictions at the Packers camp at Green Bay, Wis., says: "It looks as though we'll be ready—but so will they."

The Packers romped through Wednesday's workout muffled in ski masks, protection against the coldest weather in Green Bay's history. It was 14 below when they took the field.

But one warm spot was the effort of halfback Paul Hornung. Hampered most of the season with a twisted knee, he was running as well as he has at any time this year.

For the first time in more than two months, Hornung was booming long placement kicks.

GIANTS CHANGED

The Giants are not the same club that met the Packers last year. For instance, two of the four backs are different. A year ago it was Joel Wells, another former Alouette now retired, teamed up with Webster at running back and Kyle Rote, now backfield coach, as flanker.

Phil King, hobbled by injuries since he was drafted by the Giants in 1956, has taken over the left half or running back slot next to Webster. It has been a slow, painful struggle for King but he has made it. King showed Paul Dudley and Johnny Counts out of the way to take over the job when Sherman decided to go with his "big back" attack.

King has carried the ball 106 times for 460 yards, second among the Giants to Webster's 743 yards on 207 carries and better than any Packer except Jim Taylor.

"I got my chance this year and now I've got to make good in the big game," says King.

But passing remains the key of the Giants' attack. Tittle broke the league record with 36 touchdown passes and connected with 200 of 375 for 3,224 yards.

GETS BASEBALL POST

FORT LAUDERDALE, Fla. (AP)—Leo E. Cloutier, sports editor of the New Hampshire Sunday News of Manchester, has been appointed general manager and executive vice-president of the Richmond, Va., Class AAA farm club of New York Yankees, it was announced Wednesday. Cloutier succeeds Gerry Waring of Columbus, Ohio, who will remain with the club as assistant general manager.

Racetrack Barn Burns

Man, 18 Horses Die In Fire

BUFFALO, N.Y. (AP) — A spectacular fire in the main barn at Buffalo Raceway in nearby Hamburg killed a man and claimed 18 standardbreds Wednesday night.

The dead man was Robert Wimberley, 55, of Philadelphia, who inhaled smoke while leading some of the trotters and pacers to safety.

The cause of the fire was not determined immediately.

Firemen said the fire broke out in the main section of the three-part barn where upwards of 110 horses are stabled during the harness season. A track spokesman said about 80 horses were stabled for the winter at the time of the blaze.

Fire walls were credited with preventing the fire from spreading. The barn is located in the backstretch of the half-mile track at the county fairgrounds.

The spokesman said the damage to the barn was estimated at $60,000. The loss in horses could not immediately be determined.

HORSES STAMPEDE

Several horses broke loose from the barn in panic and raced around the fairgrounds. Some were reported to have left the grounds.

Six horses trained by Mike Metcalfe were lost in the fire. They were Yankee Ace, Bonny Jan, Singing Frisco, Frisco White, Baron Seifi and Meadow Wood.

William Kingsland, Buffalo owner and trainer, lost five horses—Terry Noon, Barb Darrow, Happy Hec, Oyster and Mary's Chance. Another owner-trainer, Jack Schenck of Buffalo, lost Hig Wheel and Sinful Hee.

It was the second fire at the track in less than a year. Last New Year's Day, 18 horses died in another barn, causing an estimated loss of $100,000 in standardbreds and $40,000 to the stable.

Twenty-eight horses and a groom died in a fire at Batavia Downs, another New York State harness track last Oct. 14.

Big Seven

The National Hockey League's top goal-getter, Toronto's Frank Mahovlich, led Maple Leafs to a 5-4 victory over Detroit Wednesday Night with a goal and three assists, to take over sole possession of first place in the individual points race.

The left winger's performance boosted his points total to 36—a four-point lead over runner-up Andy Bathgate of New York, idle Wednesday.

The Toronto-Detroit game was the only NHL action Wednesday and did not affect the positions of the remainder of the big seven.

Boston's Johnny Bucyk, Chicago's Stank Mikita and Detroit's Gordie Howe remain tied for third place with 31 points apiece.

Murray Oliver of Boston is sixth with 30 and Chicago's Ab McDonald seventh with 29.

Gordon (Red) Berenson scored intent on proving Montreal Canadiens were wrong in shipping him to the minors.

The National Hockey League Canadiens shipped their prize rookie to Hull-Ottawa Canadiens in the Eastern Professional Hockey League 11 games ago but he didn't waste any time sulking.

The fleet redhead, a graduate of U.S. college hockey, has been one of the driving forces in Hull's climb past Kingston Frontenacs in the EPHL race.

Berenson scored three goals Wednesday night to give Hull-Ottawa a 5-3 win over Frontenacs at Kingston to move Canadiens four points ahead of Frontenacs in first place.

In his 11 games Berenson has scored nine goals and 10 assists.

While the Habs have received a lift, the Frontenacs have been in a horrible slump. In the early part of the season the Kingston crew had things pretty much its own way but now has lost six in a row.

The Frontenacs led 1-0 mid way through the first period but fell behind rapidly.

Norm Beaudin and Bob Elliott scored the other Canadien goals. Red Ouellette, Dick Cherry and rookie Jeannot Gilbert were the Kingston marksmen.

Goyette Suffers Broken Leg

CHICAGO (AP) — Forward Phil Goyette of Montreal Canadiens suffered a fracture of the right leg against Chicago Black Hawks Tuesday night and probably will miss the rest of the National Hockey League season.

A cast was placed on Goyette's injured leg in hospital Wednesday after his collision with Chicago's Eric Nesterenko as Montreal trimmed the first-place Hawks 6-0.

Also in hospital was the Black Hawks' Elmer Vasko, receiving further treatment for an ankle injured two weeks ago. Vasko will remain in the hospital for several days.

Goyette was injured on a third-period scramble along the boards and was carried from the Chicago rink on a stretcher.

Win Second Game At Brno

Quakers Defeat Czechs 5-2

PRAGUE — The touring Saskatoon Quakers defeated the ZKL team of Brno 5-3 in an exhibition hockey game Wednesday night before 11,000 fans who filled the Brno arena to capacity.

Herb Jeffrey scored two for the Canadians with other tallies going to Jackie McLeod, Charlie Goodwin and George Konick. Vasey and Winkler scored for the Czech team.

Jeffrey scored his first in the 12th minute, giving Quakers a lead that lasted through the first period. He scored again in the second period but Vanek's tally came eight minutes later and the second period ended 2-1.

Winkler tied the score in the third but tallies by McLeod, Goodwin and Konick put the Canadians with a comfortable lead.

The Quakers were given 19 penalties compared to six for the Czechs, who scored one of their goals while the Quakers were two men short.

A broadcast by Radio Prague, monitored in Vienna, said "the Czech players played carefully in order not to risk injuries."

The victory was the second in five games for the Canadians against the Czechs. The defeat was the first of the season for the ZKL team, six of whose players are on the national team.

ZKL is the seven-time champion of the Czech No. 1 league. Next to Czechoslovakia's national hockey team, it is considered the country's best.

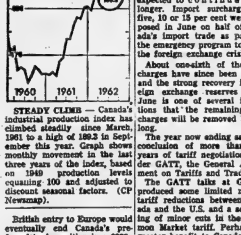
Canada Closer to What May Be Critical Turning Point as a Trading Nation

By ALAN DONNELLY

OTTAWA (CP) — Canada moved closer in 1962 to what may be a critical turning point in its history as a trading nation.



Britain's continued negotiations to join the European Common Market and the adoption by the United States of a bold freer trade policy were highlights of international trade developments during the year.

But their impact on Canada won't be known until 1964—perhaps even later.

British membership in the six-nation Common Market—a probability but still not a certainty — now appears delayed until the start of 1964, assuming Britain can surmount formidable problems remaining in its Brussels negotiations with the Common Market.

VITAL TALKS

That year will also see the anticipated start of vital international negotiations on the reduction of tariffs and other barriers to trade. Sparking this move is President Kennedy's new trade legislation with its promise of big reductions in the tariff wall around the rich American market.

STEADY CLIMB — Canada's industrial production index has climbed steadily since March, 1961 to a high of 186.2 in September this year. Graph shows monthly movement in the last three years of the index, based on 1949 production levels equaling 100 and adjusted to discount seasonal factors. (CP Newsmap).

British entry to Europe would eventually end Canada's preferred trade position in a $920,000,000-a-year export market. The so-called "Kennedy round" of trade negotiations would almost certainly require Canada to reduce its own tariffs in order to benefit from the international move to freer trade.

With these momentous changes in prospect, 1963 for Canada will be a year of preparation.

A senior government official described it as "a year of intensive study of the whole Canadian economy to prepare Canada's position for the changes ahead."

The year now ending was also one of preparation.

EFFORTS IN 1962

There were continued efforts to improve the competitive strength of Canadian producers, centred by the devaluation of the Canadian dollar.

The federal government's export promotion campaign continued, bolstered by provincial government efforts, and plans were laid for Ottawa's biggest-yet export sales drive next spring.

Both exports and imports registered strong increases this year. Though final reports will not be in for some months, one well-informed source estimated Canada's merchandise trade will be roughly in balance this year compared with, last year's $124,700,000 surplus — first surplus in nine years.

For the first 10 months of 1962 there was a trade deficit of $36,700,000. Reflecting the effects of dollar devaluation, exports were up 8.6 per cent to $5,239,800,000 and imports, at $5,276,500,000, were 11.5 per cent above year-earlier levels.

MOSTLY TO U.S.

The export gain was wholly accounted for by larger sales to the U.S., with overseas shipments weakening. The import rise occurred despite the distorrent created by the exchange rate difference.

Officials said they expect 1963 to show further progress in the reduction of Canada's balance-of-payments deficit. This deficit reflects not only merchandise trade but also international payments for such things as interest and dividends, tourist spending and freight.

For years Canada's total foreign earnings in all these fields have fallen far short of payments made abroad. This deficit was the underlying cause of last spring's foreign exchange crisis, touched off when the capital inflows that customarily offset the deficits turned into a substantial outflow instead.

Last year's balance - of - payments deficit was $982,000,000, well below the deficits of $1,243,000,000 in 1960 and $1,504,000,000 in 1959.

One expert said the deficit for 1962 might be reduced again to around $900,000,000, and he predicted a substantial further improvement next year.

DELAYED IMPACT

Main basis for this optimism is the reduced exchange rate on the Canadian dollar. As seen here, devaluation has not yet had its full impact in boosting export earnings and in helping to make Canadian - made goods more competitive with imports.

However, one factor which gave Canadian producers an additional edge this year is not expected to continue much longer. Import surcharges of five, 10 or 15 per cent were imposed in June on half of Canada's import trade as part of the emergency program to meet the foreign exchange crisis.

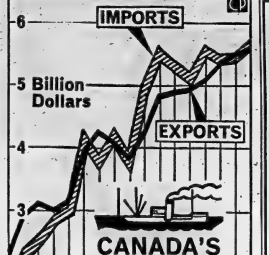
About one-sixth of the surcharges have since been lifted, and the strong recovery in foreign exchange reserves since June is one of several indications that the remaining surcharges will be removed before long.

The year now ending saw the conclusion of more than two years of tariff negotiations under GATT, the General Agreement on Tariffs and Trade.

The GATT talks at Geneva produced some limited mutual tariff reductions between Canada and the U.S. and a scattering of minor cuts in the Common Market tariff. Perhaps of greater benefit to Canada were the reductions negotiated between the U.S. and other countries which, under GATT rules, apply to exports of all member countries including Canada.

BRUSSELS SNAG

Britain's negotiations at Brussels to enter the Common Market held Canada's attention throughout the year. At one point it had been thought they would reach a conclusion by mid-summer, and a Commonwealth prime ministers' conference was scheduled for September to consider the result.



But the Brussels talks hit a snag. As result the London prime ministers' meeting had to suspend final judgment on whether Britain had been able to obtain adequate safeguards for the vital trade interests of its Commonwealth partners in the British market.

The London conference did bear a call from Prime Minister Diefenbaker for a free-world conference to prepare the way for a fresh round of international trade negotiations. Mr. Diefenbaker later got support for the idea from President Kennedy, and GATT trade ministers will meet in Geneva early next year to lay the groundwork for the major "Kennedy round" negotiations of 1964.

BIDS FOR TRADE

The trade department's export-boosting efforts this year included dispatch of some 20 trade missions abroad. U.S. department store buyers were flown in in chartered planes to four "sample shows" of Canadian-made consumer goods at Toronto, Quebec City, Winnipeg and Vancouver. At three industrial conferences, government and industry plugged the Buy Canada theme for industry now importing parts and supplies for their plants.

Ottawa's main promotion ef-

IMPORTS, EXPORTS RISE — Canada's trade is likely to end up roughly in balance this year compared with a surplus of exports over imports of $124,700,000 in 1961. Both exports and imports increased this year. In the first 10 months of 1962 exports were up 8.6 per cent and imports 11.6 per cent. Graph details trend in both for the post-war years. (CP Newsmap) fort in 1963 will be a six-week program early next spring costing more than $500,000.

More than 700 foreign buyers are to be flown to Canada, some to see Canadian machinery manufacturing plants but most to attend a three-day national samples show in Toronto of consumer goods. Finally, Canada's 130 overseas trade commissioners will be flown to Ottawa to discuss export prospects with any Canadian businessman trying to sell abroad. It's expected to be nearly twice as large as the first such export promotion conference of December, 1960.

United States Will Wind Up Year With a Big Trade Deficit Blamed on Canada

By HAROLD MORRISON

WASHINGTON (CP) The United States will wind up 1962 with another big international trade deficit, this time blaming part of its troubles on Canada.

A commerce department official estimates the trade deficit, in goods and services, will be about $2,000,000,000 this year, down from last year's $2,500,000,000, but still enough to keep American gold flowing into foreign coffers.

In fact, though the deficit has eased, the 1963 net exp orts of gold may be higher than lats year's $857,00,000 and may edge toward $1,000,000,000. Gold remaining in the U.S. treasury now totals about $16,000,000,000—a 23-year low.

The drop in the American gold stockpile might have been greater but for the sale by Canada of some $190,000,000 worth to the U.S. treasury at the height of the Canadian dollar crisis last summer.

CANADA POSED PROBLEM

Looking over the crisis period, commerce department economist Walter Lederer says the Canadian dollar problem deepened the American trade deficit when capital in the form of loans and credits was rushed into Canada as Canada imposed import curbs to conserve her supply of American dollars.

Usually, Canadian tourists tend to spend more in the U.S. than Americans in Canada. But in 1962, after the dollar exchange rate was reduced, the flow was reversed: Instead of a surplus in tourist trade with Canada, Lederer estimated the U.S. will have a deficit.

Along with more tourist dollars, American capital was attracted to Canada by the Canadian government interest rates. At the same time American exporters found some Canadian markets restricted by the import curbs in the latter part of the year.

Lederer made clear the American payments problem was by no means confined to Canada. American dividends from Europe also declined while flow of American military and economic aid abroad continued.

President Faces Opposition Within Democratic Ranks With Regard to Tax Cuts

By HAROLD MORRISON

WASHINGTON (CP)—A major tax battle is in prospect for the U.S. Congress in 1963 as President Kennedy faces opposition within his own Democratic party's ranks to a proposed cut in income taxes.

Kennedy had promised to push for substantial income tax cuts for individuals and corporations effective Jan. 1. But though his party has hefty margins in both the Senate and House of Representatives, it is divided on the president's proposals.

Two of his toughest opponents, in fact, are members of his own party who hold key positions in Congress. And Kennedy's biggest problem in 1963 might be how to overcome the conservative element in the Democratic party, an element that has destroyed some of his major proposals in past.

The Democratic split is of such dimensions that not long after the off-year congressional elections last fall some Republicans were talking of the possibility they might be able to unseat Kennedy in the 1964 presidential voting.

Democratic forces preserved their strength in Congress in the Nov. 6 elections—a feat that has been accomplished only once before in a non-presidential election year, during the Roosevelt regime in 1934. Normally the president's party loses a substantial number of Senate and House seats in off-year ballot ing.

LABELS MEAN LITTLE

Party labels tend to hold less meaning in the U.S. than in Canada. Democrats now control the Senate 68 seats to 32 and the House of Representatives 259 to 176. But some of these Democrats are staunch southern conservatives holding key congressional positions because of their seniority.

Two of them are Congressman Wilbur Mills of Arkansas, chairman of the ways and means committee, and Senator Harry Byrd of Virginia, chairman of the Senate finance committee. Both are opposed to snap tax cuts.

Though Kennedy increased his own political stature in forcing Soviet nuclear weapons out of Cuba, his party influence appears unchanged. And in the face of another alliance between southern Democrats and right-wing Republicans, he gradually is moving his target for tax cuts into the more distant future —from a definite Jan. 1 to an undefined period in 1963—and may finally knuckle down to a 1964 date.

While Kennedy has his troubles, so have the Republicans. Encouraged by historical trends and national grumblings about the tax load, unemployment, the lack of government action on Cuba, Republicans predicted gains on Nov. 6. Results fell short of forecasts. The party picked up some strength in key states but gained only two seats in the House and lost four in the Senate.

NIXON'S WATERLOO

The party's star performer, Richard M. Nixon, met his Waterloo in California. The man who had lost the presidency by a whisker in 1960 stormed off the political stage, rejected by his home state. He had hoped to make a political comeback by trouncing Edmund G. Brown, the Democratic governor. Brown came back victorious. Nixon claimed he was beaten by a biased press.

This left the Republican presidential stage to a new line of aspirants. Who would be chosen to attempt to unseat Kennedy in 1964? Would it be Nelson Rockefeller who retained the New York governorship? Would it be such an arch-conservative as Senator Barry Goldwater of Arizona? Or would it be such newcomers as former automaker George Romney who took the Michigan governorship on his first try or millionaire William Scranton who did the same thing in Pennsylvania?

Rockefeller, who flirted for the 1960 Republican nomination and was rejected, immediately indicated he was available and that he thought he could lick Kennedy.

NIXON STORMS OUT OF POLITICS — Richard M. Nixon, a front-running Republican for years, angrily left the American political scene in 1962. He narrowly lost the U.S. presidency in 1960 and this year was defeated in a comeback for governor of California. He tells reporters at this Los Angeles gathering in November: "This is my last press conference." (CP from AP)

Six Are Killed In Collision Near Cochrane

Car and Taxi Collide Head-on in Snowstorm

COCHRANE, Ont. (CP) — A head-on collision between a car and a taxi during a snowstorm took six lives and left three persons in hospital today in critical condition.

Scene of the Thursday crash was Highway 11 near this northern Ontario town 90 miles north of Cochrane. Provincial police described the road as extremely slippery at the time. All the dead and injured were from Ontario.

The dead included the four occupants of the car, Jean Rocha LaPointe, 43, his two sons, Joseph, 16, and Marc, 14, all of Fauquiere, and Michael Sidney, 26, of Brunesville. Driver Joseph Burton, 50, of Val Albert and Allan Chiechoo, 32, of Moose Factory, died in the cab.

In hospital were three other occupants of the taxi—Abel Butterfly, 27, of Moose Factory, David Roderique, 20, of Kapuskasing and Madeleine Spence, 17, of Fort Albany.

CARS DEMOLISHED

Police said both cars were demolished as they met near the centre of the road. There were no witnesses.

One policeman said visibility at best would be only "fair" and the road was snow-covered.

An ambulance driver who made two trips to the scene said he believed the car, driven by Joseph Lapointe, was travelling behind a transport truck and blowing snow obscured visibility.

A spokesman for the taxi company, owned by Burton's brother, said Burton was driving to Cochrane so the Moose River Basin trappers could sell furs there. Police said at least two of his passengers were trappers.

Explosion Rips 3-Foot Hole in Berlin Wall

BERLIN (AP) — The biggest explosive assault ever against the wall dividing Berlin was carried out before dawn today.

The explosion ripped a three-foot-square hole in the wall and smashed out windows in neighboring buildings, including 156 in a fire brigade headquarters. There were no injuries.

West Berlin police said it was the biggest explosive charge laid against the wall in its 16 months of existence, although previous smaller explosions have caused more damage to the wall itself.

They believed the people responsible were interrupted at their work. The charge was not embedded in the wall before it went off, which accounted for the comparatively slight damage to the wall itself and the considerable destruction away from it.

West Berlin police estimated that explosives equal to about 22 pounds of TNT were used for the blast.

"We cannot establish exactly what kind of explosive was used because the wall is on East Berlin territory and our criminal police officers were threatened by the armed East German guards when they tried to get close," a police spokesman said.

Constable At Cornwall Is Improving

CORNWALL (CP) — Albert Decelle, 31, charged with attempted murder in the Christmas Day shooting of Const. Ford McGillis, today was remanded without plea to Jan. 4.

Magistrate C. C. Lapierre adjourned the case at the request of the Crown. Decoubie is represented by Cornwall lawyer M. J. Fitzpatrick.

Meanwhile, Const. McGillis, 27, was reported still showing improvement, though his condition remains serious. The officer underwent a six-hour operation Tuesday after his left lung was torn apart by a blast from a 12-gauge shotgun.

Treasury Bill Interest Rate Down to 3.94

OTTAWA (CP)—The treasury bill interest rate declined to 3.94 last week with the sale of $100,000,000 in 91-day bills, the Bank of Canada reported Thursday.

The decrease in the rate—an offshoot of conditions in the short-term money market—followed three successive weekly increases.

Longer Drinking Hours in Some Parts of Country New Year's Eve

BY THE CANADIAN PRESS

For those who prefer to spend $4 to $40 for a New Year's Eve out on the town, there will be added impetus to revelry — longer drinking hours in some parts of Canada.

A cross-Canada survey by The Canadian Press shows that four provinces have extended the normal closing time for public drinking and that the reservation system indicates most major nightclubs and hotels will be sold out.

But there's a strong preference for house parties in most parts of the country and for every couple that expects an organized entertainment of night spots dozens of others will provide their own food, drink and entertainment.

Biggest break is for some nightclubs in Halifax where the Nova Scotia government has agreed to allow spirits to flow until 2:30 a.m. compared with the normal 11:30 p.m. cutoff.

Alberta clubs, which ordinarily stop serving liquor at 11:30 p.m. may carry on to 2 a.m.

Ontario remains unchanged and permits sale to 1 a.m.

TALK OF THRUST AGAINST CASTRO AGAIN HEARD

We Shall Return Says Exiles' Leader

MIAMI, Fla. (AP) — Talk of another possible thrust against Fidel Castro surged through the Cuban exile colony today even as fresh prisoners of the last attempt were reunited with newly arrived relatives.

The relatives, numbering more than 900, came aboard the African Pilot, the vessel that took food and medicine supplies to Castro for release of 1,113 captives taken in the April 1961, Bay of Pigs invasion.

"We shall return," proclaimed Manuel Artime, civilian leader of the attack expedition, who along with other invasion chiefs was received by President Kennedy in Palm Beach Thursday.

Papa Kennedy, as ex-prisoners call the man in the White House, announced that he will attend a ceremony in the Orange Bowl Saturday honoring the brigade. Exiles looking toward future anti-Castro action interpreted this as a hopeful sign.

WANTS RETURN

The Cuban Revolutionary Council, which dispatched the brigade to the Bay of Pigs, declared:

"An irrevocable resolution units all of them (the returned prisoners) to return to Cuba with arms in hand to liberate the country from degrading and brutal vassalage to Soviet Russia."

Several hundred of the 463 women, children and 242 children permitted to board the African Pilot in Havana—at the request of Artime—left their belongings—were quartered in a spacious Miami building provided by the Cuban Refugee Centre. The centre, operated by the U.S. department of health education and welfare, also provided meals for returnees until they could eat. Others went to homes of friends or relatives.

The Cuban Families Committee, headed by New York lawyer James B. Donovan and with U.S. government help, sponsored the return of the prisoners, reported another boatload of exiles will come.

"The next boat that takes supplies of medicines and foodstuffs to Havana should carry 2,000 more Cubans," said a families committee official.

There was no immediate confirmation of this.

Kennedy told the Cuban detainees in Palm Beach that his "prime goes may to visit a free Cuba."

The council urged all exiles of military age to enlist in the U.S. armed forces. Some 2,000 already have done so.

58 Young Persons Dangle On Chairlift for Hours

VANCOUVER (CP)— Fifty-eight young persons returning from a dance dangled on a broken chairlift for about three hours, shouting to keep each other awake in falling snow as temperatures plunged below freezing.

While rescuers trudged icy trails up the side of Hollyburn Mountain Wednesday night those trapped swung their legs to keep warm in their seats, sometimes 200 feet above the snow-covered ground.

Police and firemen in neighboring West Vancouver used ladders and ropes to get the riders off the lift.

One hundred and five others stranded at the top of the lift on the popular resort mountain were led down mountain trails.

Four youths, three of them juveniles, were arrested and later remanded without plea on public nuisance charges.

Chairlift operator Mike Gazda told police he had seen some people swinging chairs as they went around a pulley on the turning mechanism at the bottom of the lift.

Officers said the swaying motion flipped the chairlift cable from the pulley. The sagging cable dragged a chair on to a steel crossbeam, felling the heavy steel structure.

Most of the group had been attending a tobogganing at a lodge on the mountain sponsored by the Western Young Judaea Group of the Zionist Organization of Canada.

Ray Carlaw, 22, a passenger in the first sled he saw the empty chair hook on to the tower.

As the cable kept travelling the chair pulled the tower off its base.

"The tower toppled over on to the ground to the left of me — if it had gone sideways I would have been pinned under it."

Thrown 20 feet to the ground, Carlaw escaped with cuts and bruises.

Barbara Rose, 15, of Victoria and Wayne Shur, 16, of Edmonton, were trapped in chairs

Montreal Police Shoot Man, Foil Attempted Holdup

Kingston Member Will Be Subject of Union Meeting

KINGSTON (CP)—J. R. Simonett, provincial minister without portfolio who criticized international unions in the Ontario legislature last week, will be the subject of a special Kingston Labor Council meeting Saturday.

The member for Frontenac-Addington refused to pay payment of dues to United States-based unions saying: "I feel that we in Canada can run our own Canadian unions and that the money (union dues) be kept within our borders . . .

Mr. Simonett, also chairman of the legislature's select committee on highway safety, told unions in Ontario are more interested in gaining members than they are in training members.

Lloyd Fell, international representative of the United Steelworkers of America (CLC), demanded the minister's resignation from the committee.

Mr. Fell's demand drew support today from Frank Quaile, Eastern Ontario representative of the Canadian Labor Congress, who also attacked William Temple, MPP for Kingston, supporting Mr. Simonett's demand for "Canadian only" unions.

"On behalf of the workers of this area," said Mr. Quaile, "I would like to suggest that Mr. Nickle" (on a bridge, any bridge, so long as it is high and has water under it).

Mr. Quaile said cheques for international union dues go to United States officers and they are returned for deposit in Ca-

NASSAU PACT WILL CHANGE NUCLEAR FORCE

More Countries To Have Control

OTTAWA (CP)—The Anglo-American "pool of Nassau" is seen in some quarters here as a move away from the concept of a multilateral NATO nuclear force instead of the announced step toward it.

Some competent sources here go so far as to describe as a "hoax" and "a phoney" the agreement reached by President Kennedy and Prime Minister Macmillan at Nassau last week.

The U.S. agreed to supply Britain with Polaris missiles for British-built nuclear submarines which would be placed at the disposal of NATO. But, in the terms of the Kennedy-Macmillan communique, Britain could use the force independently when "supreme national interests are at stake."

Some authorities here regard this as a potentially dangerous loophole. Other NATO members, including West Germany, might obtain nuclear weapons with the proviso that they could be used independently in "supreme national interests."

Consequently, the pact of Nassau is not going to result in decreasing the number of national independent nuclear forces located or producing them under NATO control, They will go down, especially in the Cuba crisis, that it was a responsible nuclear power—not a satellite—that ons were safe in American hands.

2. A multilateral NATO nuclear force with the U.S. a member and retaining veto control. Canada could contribute to such an undersea missile force by helping to man submarines and providing cash.

3. A multilateral NATO nuclear force with the U.S. not a member. This would, in effect, be the present British nuclear powers, NATO and the U.S.

Competent sources added that Canada can be said to be already a member of a NATO nuclear force:

The RCAF air division in Europe was being supplied with low-level jet bombers and the U.S. held nuclear warheads for them at nearby bases. Canada long ago had placed the air division under NATO control that is, under the command of the supreme allied commander Europe, who is an American.

Duke's Reply to Documents Slanted

PARIS (AP) — The Duke of Windsor said today captured German diplomatic documents gave a generally false impression in suggesting he favored a British alliance with Nazi Germany while he was king.

The captured documents quote the duke — when he replied in the following words:

"Who is king here? Baldwin or I myself who have to talk to Hitler and will do so here or in Germany. Tell him that, please."

British Papers Defend and Attack Duke

Charge Edward Sought Pact With Nazis

LONDON (AP) — British papers divided today in their reaction to a revival of the charge that the Duke of Windsor—while Britain's king for less than a year—sought to make a personal deal with Hitler.

The Daily Express, published by Winston's old friend Lord Beaverbrook, again defended the former King Edward VIII.

The Manchester Guardian said in new report only showed how stupid the Nazis were.

But the Establishment was revived by publication by the British, American and French governments of captured Nazi documents kept secret since the war.

The documents showed that the Duke of Coburg, German emissary to England, reported to Berlin in conference with Edward VIII:

"Germany-British alliance is for him an urgent necessity and a guiding principle for British foreign policy.

"To my question whether a discussion between Baldwin (Stanley Baldwin, then British prime minister) and Hitler would be desirable for future German - British relations, he

Duke of Windsor Dangle Hitler Pact

The Duke of Windsor was in Europe and could not be reached immediately for comment on the documents. But in the past, documents were raised in published Nazi documents, he denied there was anything improper in his connections.

Says Lord Beaverbrook's Daily Express in the duke's defence:

"The account given by the Duke of Coburg . . . is of little value as evidence. All that can be said is that the Duke of Coburg was a Nazi spreading a story which he knew would be welcomed in Berlin.

"And that the Duke of Windsor has been, throughout his life, a most unswervingly faithful to Britain, a servant of her interests, a partisan of her honour."

But from Cassandra—columnist William Connor of The Daily Mirror—comes a stalling attack on the former king.

"His close and cordial relationships with the Nazi regime make one think that Prime Minister Stanley Baldwin with all his sly faults, may, after all, must be remembered that the Duke, with the majority of the people who had the interests of Great Britain at heart, was striving for some understanding with Germany, despite the fact that Hitler was a potential enemy, in order to prevent the calamity of a Second World War."

Cassandra said the duke had read excerpts from the documents at German foreign policy and had this comment:

"It is obvious that these reports were slanted in order to curry favor with Hitler, and thereby they give a generally false impression. As an example, the Duke of Coburg, who was the Duke of Windsor's secret of Hitler."

UN, Katangan Troops Clash; Truce Ignored

Water and Electricity Are Cut off in Capital

SALISBURY, Southern Rhodesia (Reuters)—Fighting between United Nations troops and Katangan forces broke out Thursday in the outskirts of Elisabethville and sporadic firing continued today.

A well-authenticated report of the conflict reached Salisbury today and was confirmed by reports received in London, Leopoldville and Brussels.

The foreign office said in London its council in Elisabethville, Derek Dodson, reported that the capital of the secessionist Congo province was without water and electricity and telex communications were not operating.

Dodson's report said a ceasefire apparently had been arranged for 8 a.m. Elisabethville time today but was not observed and sporadic fighting continued.

Meanwhile, reports from the central Congo capital of Leopoldville said cease - fire talks opened between Gen. Prem Chand, the Indian UN commander, and Katangan officials.

The reports said there had been casualties on both sides in the fighting, but no figures were available.

President Moise Tshombe of Katanga was said to have appealed to the Katangan gendarmerie to stop shooting.

Eliend Mathu, UN head in Elisabethville, was said to have made contact with Tshombe at the first outbreak of firing and later toured roadblocks in the area with him.

Heavy firing was reported around the golf club area and the road tunnel in the town, which was the centre of heavy fighting in previous Katangan flareups.

Toothless Sax-Tooter Needs Tutor

DETROIT (AP) — An abandoned saxophone found in Detroit takes note of a musician who couldn't toot because of lack of teeth.

John Blout, 42, found the gold - colored sax in the driveway of his home. Inside the brown leather case was this note:

"I'm disgusted. Since I have false teeth I can't play good. So sell this and your finds this sax can have her."

Signed by "a friend," the note also said the sax "is not stolen. When I bought it I had my own teeth."

Police are keeping the sax in case the owner buys new teeth.

Kingston Man Gets Jail Term for Theft

KINGSTON (CP) — Ronald Gerald Hall, 20, of Kingston was sentenced to 18 months in penitentiary Thursday after he pleaded guilty to theft of $1,000 from the Kingston Post Office.

Hall was arrested Dec. 19 after the money was found in a suitcase in a locker at the Kingston bus depot.

Member Blames Police for Not Checking Rooms

KINGSTON (CP)—Mayor W. T. Mills said Thursday William M. Nickle, Progressive Conservative member of the Ontario legislature for Kingston, should take any complaints he has about city law enforcement to the newly formed Ontario Police Commission.

"Sensationalism accomplishes nothing," Mr. Mills commented after Mr. Nickle said the city council has failed to make use of thousands of dollars received from the Ontario government for the prosecution of liquor cases.

He said Mr. Nickle, rather than make disparaging remarks about the city law enforcement agencies, should approach the commission for action.

Mr. Nickle blamed the recent death of a Queen's University student on what he termed the city's growing delinquency problem on the availability of liquor to minors.

He said the Ontario government paid the city $47,000 in the three-year period ended March 31, 1962 for expenses incidental to the prosecution of liquor cases.

The fiscal year's figure at March 31, 1963 would be about $14,000 but "still we are not seeing any" he continued.

BLAMES POLICE

He also blamed police for not checking beverage rooms for minors.

"It's not only their privilege, but their duty to go inside and check," he said in an interview Wednesday. "They're not supposed to wait outside for kids to come out blotto."

Student William George Ahlas, 22, died when he plunged over the stairway during inquest evidence indicated the death was preceded by consumption of alcohol.

Resorts Offer New Year Gimmicks To Keep Celebrators off Roads

NEW YORK (AP)—A number of establishments catering to New Year's eve celebrants are emphasizing programs to keep their patrons off the highways.

Setting the pace are big clubs and hotels in Los Angeles. A newspaper cafe columnist says police warnings on drunken driving, police roadblocks, and a crackdown on traffic violations have made it harder to lure people out of the big suburban areas for an evening of celebrating in the city.

Several Los Angeles hotels are offering a free room with their package deals for New Year's eve at prices to suit.

One Hotel's plan includes a party at the Coconut Grove, a night club featuring the stars of the next morning to the rose parade in Pasadena.

A hotel in Beverly Hills, Calif., has changed its package deal to exclude drinks, making the price cheaper, and, eliminating the obligation of celebrators to drink up their money's worth before heading home.

The most exclusive celebration in the Los Angeles area will be the black-tie affair closing the Romanoff's Beverly Hills restaurant. Many Hollywood celebrities are expected to attend the party, featuring three orchestras and an abundance of fine foods for which the restaurant is noted.

Six of 14 Outdoor Rinks Planned Here Now in Use

Favored by something like seven to seven and a half inches of ice is just now being reached.

For the safety of skaters and also to assure that the snow plowing equipment will not break through the above minimum of ice is required.

At the moment there are three outdoor rinks operating on both the West and East Hill sections of the city and this week it is expected that three rinks will be started on the Belleville Harbor.

If all goes well it is hoped that all 14 of the open air rinks will be in operation by January 10th.

Parks Superintendent Gordon Nicolson noted today that he finds his department is lacking both manpower and equipment for flooding and maintenance of outdoor rinks.

If another man and set of hose equipment were available the flooding of the rinks would progress much more rapidly, he said.

The opening of the outdoor rinks on the East Hill and harbor is conditional on ice with a minimum thickness of

Notes on Oddfellowship

The regular bi-monthly meeting of the Belleville Independent Order of Odd Fellows Lodge No. 81 was held at the IOOF Hall, Front Street, Thursday evening December 20th, with a good attendance.

The next regular meeting will be held on January 3, at the Lodge room on Front St.

Witnesses Say Brakes Failed On Occasions

A 17-year-old youth today pleaded not guilty to criminal negligence in an accident five weeks ago in Belleville in which two five-year-old playmates, the children of Mrs. Gladys Alexander Green were before magistrate T. Y. Willis this morning and had his trial adjourned to January 3 for further evidence.

Testimony was taken from two five-year-old companions in the car allegedly driven by Green.

Both witnesses claimed the brakes had been defective on the automobile November 17 when they started out from Trenton.

One of the witnesses, Gary Ellis, said the brakes failed at times on the automobile.

To Trenton, "we almost side-swiped because the brakes failed again," he told the court.

"In spite of that you continued on driving," commented Crown attorney John Pringle.

The court was told they drove back road from Belleville to Cannifton Road and College Street East, said Ellis, the brakes didn't function as they approached a car at the intersection. To avoid collision Green swerved the automobile onto a service station lot, said Ellis.

Then he jumped out and tried to hold the car to a stop. Summing up the evidence submitted magistrate Willis said Green "knew they (the brakes) were not only not in good condition they were dangerous."

Defence counsel, Tom Lally, submitted that Green's actions at the scene of the accident did not constitute the offence of criminal negligence.

"The secretary was of his own creation," said the magistrate.

He adjourned the case after Mr. Lally said he wished to call Green to testify.

Chinese Dish Is Sweet For Pakistan, Sour for India

By JOSEPH MacSWEEN
Canadian Press Staff Writer

China has served up a dish of sweet and sour for the new India - Pakistan conference on Kashmir—sweet for Pakistan, sour for India.

The conference-eve announcement that communist China and Pakistan had reached a border agreement on the 300-mile stretch of Kashmir controlled by Pakistan was greeted with dismay, as expected, in New Delhi.

And Chinese Premier Chou En-lai pointedly recalled in Peking that Chinese and Indians also reached border agreements with Burma, Nepal and, just the other day, Mongolia.

Peking, by launching its border war with India, can be thanked for pushing India and Pakistan together for another attempt—however half-hearted —to settle the issue of Kashmir that has plagued their relations since the subcontinent won independence 15 years ago.

PROSPECTS DIM

But even before the China-Pakistan pact was announced the prospects of the conference were decidedly slim.

There was little indication that Hindu India and Moslem Pakistan were ready to recognize that common danger from China overrode their differences over Kashmir.

Diplomats say the chances for success are not likely to be improved by Pakistan's evident satisfaction at the pat on the head it has received from China while India is still smarting from the cuff on the ear it received from the same source.

They say that news of the Sino-Pakistani agreement so far appears unlikely to put more than a line on a map. Surveys would still be necessary and Peking at best time could raise new difficulties.

ISSUE DEADLOCKED

The issue of Kashmir, an area of 82,000 square miles with a population of 4,500,000 has been at a standstill since Jan. 1, 1949, when United Nations established a cease-fire following fierce fighting and charges and counter-charges of aggression by India and Pakistan.

The prospects of the current conference were played down by both India and Pakistani political capital and scene of the talks, repeatedly was sceptical of India's intentions.

Observers formed the impression that the two governments were entering the conference simply to fulfill promises made to the United States and Britain during the height of the Chinese crisis a month ago.

Pakistani President and Prime Minister Macmillan repeated the promptings in the communique at the end of their Nassau meeting last week.

Land O'Lakes Tourist Region Holds Meeting

A meeting of the Hastings and Land O' Lakes Tourist Region No. 11 was held at Tweed last Sunday afternoon at the Tweedsmuir Hotel. Mr. Grant McKittrick, president, was in charge of the meeting. Mrs. R. J. McLuskie was appointed to the executive as secretary.

A discussion was held re changing the fiscal year to Mar. 1st. The boundaries of the region and the placing of Area Signs on Highway No. 2 were also discussed, the feeling of the meeting being that through the lack of area signs on this highway, Tourist Region 11 would be placed in the position of having to compete for this business under a considerable handicap. However the matter was left for further study and discussion.

The next meeting of the Hastings and Land O' Lakes Tourist Region 11 will be held on Tuesday, January 8th, 1963, at 8 p.m. at Grant Brett's Office, Madoc.

New Way To Set Type Is Introduced

LOS ANGELES (AP)—A high speed system of setting newspaper type automatically, starting at the reporter's typewriter, is announced by the Los Angeles Times and the Radio Corporation of America.

It is built around a computer which produces punched tape at 3,000 words a minute and feeds it into conventional typesetting machines.

Spokesmen for the Times, which tested the method Dec. 1, predicted Thursday great savings in money, manpower and time. They said any newspaper using 20 or more linecasting machines could profit by it.

This is the sequence:

Reporters write their stories on electric typewriters equipped with tape-punch units;

After the story is edited, expert typists punch tape on the corrections and changes;

COMPUTER JUSTIFIES

The computer then produces a finished tape which incorporates the editing, justifies the lines to newspaper column width and employs a logic system to hyphenate words as needed all the while.

The tape is then fed into linecasting machines that set it in type.

The "computer composition" concept was developed by Otis Booth, general manager of the Times. He called it the first successful high-speed use of a computer in setting newspaper type.

The RCA computer will accept either typewritten news or advertising copy and corrections and produce tape rapidly enough to fill a 21-inch newspaper column in 17 seconds.

As the new system comes into general use, Booth said, a time saving of at least 40 per cent in setting news copy into type should result.

WRITER IS SOURCE

Newspapers have for several years used tape to operate typesetting machines but a skilled operator has been required to punch the tape. This system makes the writer the source of the tape.

The unique feature of the system, Booth said, is its ability to hyphenate words properly. "It took a great deal of research and we feel this is a rather remarkable achievement."

The Times ultimately will require fewer than half the approximately 100 typesetters it now employs, Booth estimated. There will be layoffs, with operators being transferred to other duties in the composing room, he said.

Times composing room employees are not represented by a union.

TO ISSUE NEW STAMP

PALM BEACH, Fla. (AP)—Eleanor Roosevelt will be honored by a U.S. commemorative stamp, the White House announced Thursday. Mrs. Roosevelt, the widow of President Franklin D. Roosevelt, died last month at the age of 78. The stamp will be issued on Oct. 11, 1963—the 79th anniversary of Mrs. Roosevelt's birth.

More Violence Is Forecast In South Africa

JOHANNESBURG (AP) — A warning that South Africa must expect increasing racial violence and sabotage in 1963 is published in the Johannesburg Post. This weekly for non-whites has good contacts with sources of information among the African majority.

The Post's article remarks that the last two months of 1962 witnessed serious clashes between armed Negroes and white police.

"Political activities in this country have taken an alarming turn," says The Post. "Violence is the force to be met by force and the vicious cycle spins faster and faster . . . South Africa will have to live . . . with a look over its shoulder in dark streets, with almost unexpected noise, with fear."

South Africa's top policeman, Lt.-Gen. J. M. Keevy, pledged after the three outbreaks that his forces "will move heavens and earth to wipe out the Poqo terrorists". Raids have been and earth to wipe out the Poqo terrorists". Raids have been and earth to wipe out the Poqo terrorists". Raids have been

What Prompted Castro?

Fidel Castro's release of the prisoners captured in the abortive invasion attempt at the Bay of Pigs was a welcome Christmas present for them and for their relatives. It is rather difficult, though, to picture Castro in the role of Santa. Whatever moved him to release the prisoners at this time, it certainly was not the spirit of Christmas.

Of course, Castro received ransom for the prisoners, food and medicine to the value of $53,000,000. Almost certainly, though, he could have made a deal of this nature much earlier, had he felt inclined to do so. It may be argued, of course, that his country's need for these supplies has increased, but it is difficult to guess why this should be so.

Perhaps we suppose that Castro thought the prisoners had been sufficiently punished for their attempt to overthrow him. Imprisonment does not seem to have made the prisoners timid about any further attempts to oust Castro by force. Several of them have made belligerent statements. Perhaps, though, their very attempt is Castro's key to the reason for their release. It may be that Castro, for all his tirades against the U.S., takes President Kennedy at his word when he promises not to invade Cuba. This pledge, given to Khrushchev as part of the price for removal of Soviet rockets, may have convinced Castro that the prisoners could do him no real harm if released.

Some may retort that Castro is not the kind of person to free an enemy just because his enemy would be powerless even if at liberty. One must not, however, overlook the fact that feeding and guarding these prisoners would be a drain on the government's coffers. Their release benefits Castro in two ways, giving him needed supplies and at the same time relieving him of a continued expense. Similarly, there are benefits to be derived from the permission given the captives' relatives to leave Cuba. Not the least of these benefits would be the departure of people who had to be watched as enemies of the regime.

There have been suggestions that Castro hoped to reap prestige by setting the captives free. This seems doubtful. If it is true, he is doomed to disappointment. It is interesting to speculate, though, what the effect on world public opinion would have been had Castro released his foes immediately after the invasion without either demanding or accepting any ransom.

Not A Bad Fellow

Senator Jean-Francois Pouliot, erst-while stormy petrel of the House of Commons, can still turn a striking phrase. The other day he said that Donald Gordon, president of the CNR, "is not a bad fellow, but he thinks he is God."

Even Gordon's best friends will have to admit that the Senator's sally was not without at least some shadow of justification. Mr. Gordon likes to get his own way. It is a characteristic which has enabled him to serve his country well.

Back in the early days of the war, when Prime Minister Mackenzie King was ready to announce the establishment of the Wartime Prices and Trade Board, he called a press conference at Ottawa. This was designed to give the editors of the country's newspapers some insight into the government's reasons for establishing the board and to provide them with information on how it would work, before the establishment of the board was made public. At this meeting Mr. King introduced Donald Gordon as the chairman of the new board and left him to answer a flood of questions. The editors on the smaller papers were more interested in the way in which it was proposed that the board would operate. But, early in the question period, it was evident that representatives from some financial papers, and financial editors from some of the bigger daily newspapers, were extremely sceptical that the board could, in fact, accomplish what it was designed to do. Finally one question couched in particularly hostile language aroused Mr. Gordon.

"I know it won't work," he told his questioner. Then he added, raising his voice and nodding his head with vigor, "but it is going to."

It did.

The Years! Oh the Years!

Montreal Gazette

Time works strange changes, and no one can count on what it may do to old memories. Those who are met again after many years are the same people though strangely different. It may be a baffling experience.

Now the years changed Lord Northcliffe has been described by Sir John Kirwan, President of the Legislative Council of the Parliament of Western Australia. He first met Lord Northcliffe in London at the Imperial Press Conference in 1906. The picture was that of a quiet, shy, kindly man.

The more we saw of him," Sir John Kirwan found, "the more we were charmed. Somewhat careless in his dress, at times almost shabby, but boyish in appearance and unassuming in manner, he talked little and was a good listener, always anxious to hear the views of others."

Sir John passed through London eleven years later on his way to the Imperial Conference in Canada. He could hardly believe that the Lord Northcliffe he met then was the same man.

"The Lord Northcliffe of 1920 was quiet and seemingly shy and retiring, but the Lord Northcliffe of 1920 appeared to us to be a different man altogether. He invited a number of overseas journalists who were in their way to Canada to visit The Times office, where they were shown round the literary, mechanical and other departments, and, indeed, in his appearance he had grown coarse and bulky, whilst in manner he was talkative, self-assertive, impatient and almost aggressive. He did not want to listen to others, but to talk himself."

Such experiences set the mind to wondering what has happened to the persons one knows, and even whether the two persons, so very different, can really be the one and same. Why is it that the years make recollection a chaos and present reality a distortion?

William George has described the separation that widened between himself and his brother, David Lloyd George. From time to time David Lloyd George would come to visit his old home in Wales. But the man who came back was not the man who had left; he came home as a stranger.

"For all his apparent 'joie-de-vivre' on these visits," says William George, "he appeared like a man playing a part and in conversation with me he seemed to be endeavoring to direct attention away from any reference of current interest to the respective daily lives, including his entertainments, by dwelling exclusively on old times or on topics of public interest then featured in the press."

"The old intimacy and frankness had for some reason or another gone. The gulf that had drawn over the life of the real man as I had always known him." They still could meet and talk, but William George could not feel that he was speaking to his old brother.

At such distressing meetings it is hard not to feel somewhat like resentment, or to prevent this unpleasantness from starting. Nor does such bitterness seem disloyalty to the person once known, for that person is gone. Time may offer only an absurd replacement for what it has taken away.

In 1855 Charles Dickens met Maria Beadnell, the girl he might have married, after she had been seen her for 22 years. No word had passed between them in all that time.

His memories were of a little dark beauty, aware of her own attractions no doubt, but still wonderfully attractive. It had all ended when Maria's family became 20 and was sent to school in Paris, the city of politeness.

He had by no means forgotten her. In those days he had been a shameless reporter of the debates of Parliament, with no great prospects before him. But Maria had been there.

At last, in 1855, they met again in circumstances which the experience that he could not help making use of it for a scene in "Little Dorrit" (where Maria becomes Flora).

"Flora, always tall, had grown to be very broad too, and short of breath, but that was not much. Flora, when I knew her a lily, had become a peony; but that was not much. Flora, who had seemed enchanting in all she did or thought, was diffuse and silly. That was more. Flora who had been spoiled and artless years ago, was determined to be spoiled and artless now. That was a fatal blow."

Dickens had no wish to see her again. He only wished that Flora had been true to his memories. For the memories they must have been really false. Perhaps something back in those faraway years the true Flora may have lived; for the changes that time makes may be more cruel than just.

As Thomas Hardy, with such thoughts in mind, exclaimed: "The years! Oh, the years!"

Yonge Street, the road cut from York, now Toronto, to Lake Simcoe, a distance of 50 miles, was begun 167 years ago today—in 1795. The road was built by Governor Simcoe was completed by April of the following year. Simcoe named it for Sir George Yonge, then secretary of state for war in the British government. One of the earliest highways in Canada, it is still one of the most important roads in Ontario.

Four families are homeless and four places of business damaged, one entirely burned out, as the result of a fire which broke out in the centre of a business block on King Street in Trenton, directly opposite the fire hall, at 11.30 Sunday morning. Three people had a miraculous escape, from death when the brick wall of the Funnel building partly collapsed. If it had not been for the prompt action of the Trenton Fire Brigade under Fire Chief Filion, undoubtedly the damage would have been much greater. Damage to the three buildings including contents is estimated at $20,000.

Before December 9th, the retail of any housing accommodation being rented for the first time is required to be fixed by the local Rentals Committee, under an order of the Wartime Prices and Trade Board. Application to have a rate set in such cases may be made by a landlord at any time before making a lease, but in any event not later than 30 days after the making of the lease.

Butter has joined tea, coffee, and sugar as a rationed food commodity with each Canadian restricted to one-half pound per week. Mr. Donald Gordon, chairman of the Wartime Prices and Trade Board announced the new rationing measure. The rationing order, which follows weeks of record-ing butter shortages in Eastern centres, "has been forged upon the people generally because of the thoughtlessness and selfish action of a relatively small section of the community," Mr. Gordon said.

Electricity Beats Manure

Guelph Mercury

A Sussex nurseryman has persuaded scientists that he can double growth by using an electric current through a plant. The nurseryman now has the biggest tomatoes farm in Europe and some 600 people are employed there. An article in a London paper gave Mr. Gordon Linfield the idea. It told of growing wheat in Finland and also monster cabbages by artificial influences. Metal plates were set in the soil at top and bottom of pots and connected with an induction coil running through a transformer reduced to four volts. The plants thrived on it. The leaves took on a richer colour and the root systems were much more vigorous.

Mr. Linfield said an amateur gardener could put one greenhouse could obtain two hundred per cent more tomatoes by the end of July he would be wouldn't advise anyone to put electrical current into a given-house without expert advice and inspection. He foresaw the principle applied commercially in specially constructed insulated beds. He experimented on lettuce and on tomatoes — and the plants heated up 10 days earlier than other plants from the same sowing. Greenflies never attacked the plants. He then applied the method to seeds. He connected the wires to a metal tray spread out a packet of tomato seeds on it, turning on the current for a couple of days. He then planted treated seeds, and untreated seeds at the same time, getting 90 per cent from the treated seeds, against only seventy per cent for the others.

As a result, the Electrical Research Association experimental station at Reading now includes a series of experiments carried out by scientists on shocking tomato plants into giving heavier crops. Under the influence of electricity giant tomato plants last August carried 34 lbs. a plant. The seedlings were subjected to seventeen hours of light daily from Mercury-vapor lamps to make them crop earlier—and also produce more fruit. Mr. Linfield said electrified plants far exceeded manured plants both in production and quality. He is all for electricity.

To Your Good Health

Several Common Causes Of Stomach Bloat

By JOSEPH G. MOLNER, M.D.

Dear Dr. Molner: What is wrong when my stomach looks and feels bloated, like full of gas? It makes me very uncomfortable after eating a normal meal. I have had this trouble for years. — E.H.

A frequent question — and I can give you many answers, the problem being to know which may apply to you.

First: A very common cause is air swallowing, done quite unconsciously. This is more likely after eating a meal, or rapid eaters. Such sufferers often can belch at will, or even without realizing they are doing it.

Second: There may be real gas formation (rather than air) due to some stomach disorder. This sometimes is chronic stomach inflammation. Or there may be delay in the emptying of food from the stomach into the small intestine, so the normal fermentation occurs too high. The same result can be due to nervous problems.

Third: Allergy to certain foods can give the sensation of bloating and "gassiness." If you have the trouble irregularly, keeping a "food diary" every day may help you pick out such foods afterward.

Fourth: Gall bladder disease (stone, infection, or just sluggish action) is a common possibility in older people.

Fifth: The trouble may be in the lower intestinal tract, possibly a lack of enough digestive juices, especially those required for digesting fats and starches.

Sixth: Constipation can be an important factor.

Seventh: Some types of heart trouble can produce similar symptoms. You'll note that, in such a case, weak fluid formation signs, too.

From these clues you can see that some are things for which you can help yourself, while others require medical aid.

Here are a few tips on foods that some people have found to be upsetting. You'll note that they are all perfectly good for most of us, but some individuals find them disturbing. These include onions, cucumbers (including pickles), the radish family of vegetables, and even lettuce. Coffee upsets some people. And others have found that cooked fruits or vegetables are more easily tolerated than raw ones. So if you're observing your own eating habits you find one or several foods that cause trouble when eaten raw, test them in cooked form.

Dear Dr. Molner: What is meant by "hypertensive cardiovascular disease"? — Mrs. F.O.

It's another way of saying that high blood pressure is doing some damage. "Hypertension" means high blood pressure. "Cardiovascular" relates to the heart (cardio) and blood vessels (vascular). A detailed but plain language discussion of this is included in my booklet, "How To Take Care of Your Heart." Send 25 cents in coin and a long, envelope for a copy, and it will take a lot of the mystery and confusion out of this problem. (Address your request to Dr. Molner, in care of The Chicago Sun-Times Syndicate, P.O. Box 158, Dundee, Ill.

Dear Dr. Molner: Why is it that every time I eat anything from the melon family I get a little in my throat. Tomatoes sometimes bother me, too. I have to take a pill for thyroid every morning. — M.W.

The most likely assumption is a mild allergy. I see no reason why your thyroid medication should be involved in any way.

Note to Mrs. A.H.M.: Cancer doesn't come and go, like the spots that are worrying you. I can't from the description guess what your trouble is, but it isn't cancer.

Sand Renews Lewis Land

News From Scotland

The island of Lewis in the Outer Hebrides has found a new use for the rich silver shell sand on her beaches.

Within the last few years crofters have been taking the sand indoors, spreading it over the sour peat and heather of the barren hillsides. On top of the sand they scatter grass seed and fertilizers.

The lime in the shell sand neutralizes the acid peat and after several years of patient care the moorlands are producing rich grass pasture for sheep and cattle grazing.

In just a few years, crofters in Barvas, Bargor, Shawbost and other small communities in this, the most northerly island in the Hebrides, have won over 5,000 acres of new pasture.

Robert Urquart, chairman of the Crofters' Commission, believes this new development is the most important thing that has happened in the Highland for centuries.

The experiments on the island of Lewis, he says, provide an example of what can be done . . .

THE PACKSACK

—By GREGORY CLARK

One of those research men who do polls and surveys for big industries has lately been working on a job that took him into the countryside interviewing farmers.

"I was a thunderstruck," he tells me, "on visiting the farms to find that there was hardly any vestige of what I had been led to expect of rural life. The farm today isn't rural at all. It is as urban as your home or office and inspection. He foresaw the principle applied commercially in specially constructed insulated beds. He experimented on lettuce and on tomatoes — and the plants heated up 10 days earlier than other plants from the same sowing. Greenflies never attacked the plants. 'Lines on Life'

By Dr. Stuart E. Rosenberg

Conscience doth make cowards of us all.

Yet we do possess a conscience. Above the din of the crowd, its still, silent urgings come to us, saying "It's more than you are!"

And to tell, however, we shall hear the same words, from other sources, but words which include other meanings. Our fellow status-seekers also tell us to "be more than we are."

They mean to say something else. If you act as if you had more than you have, you will seem to be more than you are. And so conscience will be left behind as we make haste to acquire more, in order to appear to "be more."

In the race for status a man moves out ahead by what he has.

But conscience, if given a chance to speak, suggests that a man is measured by what he is.

Both antagonists speak to us through symbols: the status-seeker turning his bid, but conscience, too, has its own.

The symbols of conscience tell you still a man stands for.

STATUS SEEKER

The symbols of status report what a man lacks. They may even go further; they can tell you what a man won't stand for.

The status-seeker longs to add new symbols of success to his ever-growing collection case: He is out to get symbols.

Conscience suggests a different approach. It reminds us that instead of amassing symbols, we ought to become symbols.

Again, the patient difference: It is better to be and to become than to have and to get.

Here's a test we can apply to ourselves to determine which speaks louder — the voice of conscience or the mob's cry:

1. Are we more concerned with what others think of us or than what we think of ourselves?

2. Are we more concerned with what our actions say about us or more concerned in what others might say about us.

3. Are we only play-acting, reading lines, playing a part, lines written by others? Or do our words flow out of the depths of our own longings, so much of what we are, that no one else can speak them the way we do?

4. What do we do about what we say, and what do we say about what we do — when no one is around to hear or to see? Is the real "me" you?

Someone has aptly suggested that Religion may be defined as being the equivalent of what man does when nobody is watching.

Each man is a witness to his own real status. If he knows who he is — that's all that really matters. Then he will seek, even needs the love and acceptance of others. But they can't give him something he does not have; they can't make him something he is not.

Conscience, if given a chance, can make heroes of us all.

Governor Wants Question Put To the People

JACKSON, Miss. (AP)—Governor Ross Barnett called Thursday night for citizens to be allowed to determine at the polls "whether or not they want their schools under the control of the federal government and the federal courts."

Barnett issued the statement in an answer to contempt of court proceedings now being directed against him by the justice department for his attempts to keep James H. Meredith, a Negro, from registering at the University of Mississippi.

The statement was distributed by Barnett's office.

"I urge the Congress to submit this question to the people of this nation at the first order of business when the Congress convenes in January," Barnett said.

"If a majority of the voters of this nation want federal officials to control our schools then let us know the sad truth."

Barnett defended his action in the university crisis and said the "federal government has tried to justify its illegal actions by contending it was enforcing the 'law of the land.'"

WHAT'S LAW?

"I ask all federal officials this one question: 'What law?'

"Only Congress can make laws for the entire country. Congress has never passed a law giving the federal government the police powers or powers or rights in connection with the operation of the schools, colleges and universities of our states.

"Congress has never passed a law giving the federal government the right to determine who should or should not attend the educational facilities maintained by the several states."

Barnett said the justice department intends to uphold the laws and constitutions of both Mississippi and the United States.

Chinese Said Building Army In Tibet

NEW DELHI (AP)—A massive build-up of Chinese Communist armies in Tibet is now taking place during the cease-fire in the Himalayan war with India, according to unconfirmed reports Friday.

One report published by the Statesman newspaper said the Chinese have raised two paratroop brigades of Tibetan youths and are giving them intensive training to add bodied Tibetans. The report went from Tezpur, India the army corps headquarters town in the northeast.

"Tibet is being rapidly militarized and is being turned into an arsenal," the report said. It added roads and airfields are being built.

Other sources have reported similar activities in the Chumbi Valley of southern Tibet. The valley points like a dagger between the little Himalayan states of Sikkim and Bhutan at the nearest point of India linking the northeast with the rest of the country.

The Chinese are also reported to be massing more troops around Dudok at the western end of Tibet. Dudok is the main Chinese military centre facing the Indian positions in Ladakh. In Ladakh but are withdrawing from invasion salients in the northeast.

Parliamentary Notebook

By JAMES NELSON.

OTTAWA (CP) — Canada's 25th Parliament started out last September with a ready-made reputation for the high levels of ability among its new members.

When it went into its Christmas New Year's recess after 60 working days, however, some observers were wondering why the bloom went off its good name.

An analysis of the Commons' accomplishments in the government shows that less than half of the time earmarked for debate was spent on passing legislation.

Parliamentary rules set some time limits—eight days for general debate on the government's legislative program outlined in the speech from the throne, six two-day debates on supply motions, and six days for general debate on the annual budget.

In the pre-Christmas 60 days of the current session, there was no budget and only one of the six supply debates was held. Finance Minister Nowlan has promised to bring down the new budget early in the new year, and five other supply debates are to be scheduled by the government.

But in addition to the eight-day throne speech debate in September and early October, the Commons spent nine days discussing last spring's budget in detail, eight days in rambling and inconclusive debate on interim supply bills, and three days making a stab at last spring's spending estimates.

The budget resolutions had already taken the effect of law, nine of the hundreds of Indirtual 1962-63 estimate items has yet been passed, and the government will have to ask the Commons for another interim supply bill when Parliament reassembles Jan. 21.

Interim supply is the device by which governments obtain interim approval of the Commons for its monthly bills such as the civil service payroll, pending final approval by the Commons of the individual spending estimates.

When Parliament does get around to studying the budget proposals it will find that more than 80 per cent of the money has already been spent.

Bridge Closed At Campbello After Dark

CAMPOBELLO, N.B. (CP)—Residents of this movie-famous island at the mouth of the Bay of Fundy began to feel more isolation again today only months after a $300,000 bridge provided the security of an open link with the mainland.

A formal official here confirmed today that instructions had been received from Ottawa to close the Roosevelt International Bridge between Island and Lubec, Me., for certain periods each night beginning Jan. 1.

However an official of the revenue department in Ottawa said there would be no problem in getting emergency traffic across during the hours the bridge is to be closed.

Asked for the reason behind the closing he said lack of traffic would be "the prime reason."

Woman Choked Daughter, 2, With Pepper

WHITE PLAINS, N.Y. (AP) Judge John Galloway remarked Thursday that Mrs. Ruth Ryan's life had been a "long litany of sadness, privation and frustration." He then suspended sentence for the woman who has pleaded guilty to killing her own daughter.

Mrs. Ryan, 35, had stuffed a lethal dose of black pepper into the mouth of her daughter, Cecelia Rose Ryan, 2, last June 5. She said she had wanted to "end the child crying and from sucking her thumb."

Her lawyer said Mrs. Ryan was under strain, without enough food or money. Her husband, William Ryan, 33, is disabled and receive an army pension.

Judge Galloway put the woman on probation with two conditions: That she obtain psychiatric care and that she share in her husband's pension. He advised her to take legal steps if necessary for a share of the pension.

Story of Quints Joke on Day of Innocent Saints

BUENOS AIRES (AP) — Reports that quintuplets had been born in the Argentine interior Wednesday today have left the All Fools Day joke. Calls to hospitals and newspapers in the area brought no confirmation of the reported births.

Stories of the birth of quintuplets in remote Simbolar were splashed on the front pages of Buenos Aires newspapers this morning. The stories said a woman named Manuela Quintana Olmedo had given birth to four girls and a boy 400 miles northwest of here.

The newspaper stories said ambulances were being dispatched to Simbolar to transport the mother and babies to hospital in Cordoba.

At the Mayo Clinic in Cordoba, a spokesman said by telephone:

The newspaper Ultimas Noticias in Cordoba said: "Reports of the birth of quintuplets have been circulating here but without confirmation.

In Lalla Maria, this is the Day of Innocent Saints — the equivalent of April Fools Day.

Larry Wood Ordered to Stand Trial for Attempted Robbery

A Belleville man has been ordered to stand trial on a charge of attempted robbery of the city's CNR station ticket office, December 8.

Larry Joseph Wood was committed for trial by Magistrate T. Y. Wills at the end of a preliminary hearing this morning.

Key witness at the hearing was railroad ticket clerk, 22-year-old William (Joe) Enright.

Mr. Enright, who works the overnight shift at the office, said he was typing waybills when he heard a knocking at the office wicket. When he went to the wicket a man, hooded with a nylon stocking and holding what he believed was a gun showed a note across the counter.

"I could see the barrel. There was cardboard over it. The barrel was silver-plated," said Mr. Enright.

"He had a woman's nylon stocking over his head."

"Did you recognize him?" asked crown attorney John Pringle.

"Yes-I did."

"Who did you recognize?"

"Larry Wood."

Mr. Enright said Wood, whom he had known for two years, the week before had slept "all night in the waiting room."

PHONED DESPATCHER

When confronted with the hooded man, Mr. Enright said he "backed up and got under the table" in the office, phoned the station despatcher, then city police, who arrested him within minutes. The meantime, had fled.

"Was the gun loaded?" queried defence counsel Tom Lally.

"I didn't ask him!" replied the witness.

"You cannot swear it was the barrel of a gun!" asked counsel Lally.

"I saw a lot of guns in my day and I know," replied Mr. Enright.

Mr. Lally suggested that the clerk's sense of recognition might not have been "too keen" during the incident.

"I recognized him right off the bat," the witness insisted.

"I am suggesting that when you saw that man with the silk stocking over his face you thought back when Wood was in the CNR ticket place and came thrown out and you said this fellow must be Wood," said Mr. Lally.

"No, sir."

OPP corporal Harold Howling told of following footprints in the snow from the station to behind Docter's Hotel, across the street.

"Thirty feet east of Albion Street, beside the CNR track, I found a stocking," he said.

FINGERPRINTS

The note, allegedly used in the attempt, revealed no fingerprints, said the corporal.

It read: "All the money, and I mean all the money or-?"

In his submission to the magistrate, Mr. Lally said there was insufficient evidence to send the accused on trial. Mr. Enright had only seen she man's face, covered by a nylon mask, and at most the observation had lasted about 45 seconds before the man fled.

The magistrate ordered the trial before the county judge at a date to be set later.

NOT ON TARGET

WASHINGTON (AP) — The one successful shot of a Skybolt missile would be within 1,000 feet of its target by 100 miles and did not land in the target area as first reports indicated, new computations Thursday are reported to show. Following Saturday's test — which came after five failures and the Skybolt project's death knell apparently had been sounded—officials at Cape Canaveral, Fla., described it as a near miss.

Corbyville Couple Happily Married for Fifty Years

On the evening of December 3rd, 1962, many friends and neighbors joined with the family and relatives of Mr. and Mrs. William McPherson, at their home in Corbyville to offer congratulations and best wishes on the occasion of their golden wedding anniversary.

Mr. Harry McPherson and Mrs. Earl Gray received the guests and invited them to sign the guest book.

Among those present was Mr. Clarke Rollins, M.P.P. who presented a scroll of congratulations from the Provincial Secretary, J. Yaremko. Also present from Toronto was Mrs. Lottie Saunders, a cousin of the bridegroom.

The family presented a beautiful walnut dining table to their parents also a lace tablecloth and 4-flowers. The grandchildren's gift was a tangerine colored leather chair and stool.

Friends in Florida sent a gift case of "Florida Gold" oranges and grapefruit.

Many beautiful cards and gifts were received and several baskets of flowers and plants including a bouquet of cut mums and roses from Mr. Clarke Rollins.

Messages and telegrams were from Prime Minister John Diefenbaker of Ontario and Lee Grills, M.P.

The gifts, cards and messages were shown to guests by Mrs. Jan McConnell.

Pouring tea were Mrs. Percy Rollins, Mrs. Ira Vesterfelt, Mrs. Harry Tweedy, and Mrs. Percy Soland.

Serving the guests were four granddaughters: Miss Wilma McPherson, Miss Joyce McPherson, Mrs. Earl Goodman, and Mrs. Lorne Cronkright.

Fifty years ago on December 3rd, 1912, Mr. and Mrs. William McPherson were married in Madoc, by the Rev. E. Saunderson. Mrs. McPherson was the former Phoebe Ellis, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Walker Ellis of Huntingdon. They moved to their farm on the 3rd Concession of Thurlow, where they farmed until they moved to their present home in Corbyville in 1944.

Mr. McPherson states, "there was always plenty of hard work on the farm, but we were fortunate to be there during depression years and hard times." When he left the farm he worked at the Corby Distillery until he was retired five years ago.

Mr. and Mrs. McPherson were blessed with nine children, four sons and five daughters and they recall numerous happy family days when all the have been gathered around the piano for family singing and music.

The highlight of their year is when the fishing season opens, for both thoroughly enjoy fishing and can boast "many a good catch." They spend all of the summer months at their cottage near Frankford.

Both are looking forward to many more years of happily married life together and good health.

WEDDING

HILL — ELLIOTT

Tall, lighted Christmas trees and garlands of greenery, with baskets of white 'mum and red carnations made a pretty setting for the solemnization of the marriage of Marion Eileen Elliott, of Ottawa, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Lincoln Elliott, R.R. 1, Tweed, and Mr. Gordon Alexander Hill, of Cornwall, son of the late Mr. and Mrs. Norman J. Hill. The Rev. James A. Payton officiated at the ceremony in St. John's United Church, Tweed, on Saturday, December 22nd.

Mr. Fred Porter presided at the organ and Mr. Chris Mills, Tweed, sang "The Lord's Prayer," before the ceremony, and "The Wedding Prayer" at the close.

The bride given in marriage by her father, chose a ballet-length gown of off-white peau de sole, and lace with long sleeves and a back drape held in place with a rose and trailing buds of the peau de sole. Her shoulder length cascade veil of illusion tulle was attached to a coronet of crystals and pearls and she carried a bouquet of stephanotis and roses.

The bridesmaid, Miss Marion Winters of Ottawa, was gowned in cherry red peau de sole with a matching crown and veil headdress and matching shoes. She carried a sheaf of white 'mums and red roses. Her dress was similar to the bride's and it has back bow and rose of the peal de sole.

The bridegroom was attended by Mr. Duncan McDonald of Cornwall and the ushers were: Dr. David Blakely of Belleville, and Mr. Frank Elliott, Tweed, brother of the bride.

A buffet luncheon was served in St. John's hall which was decorated with a Christmas tree and branches of holly on the small tables.

The bride's table was centred with the wedding cake minted with tulle and ribbon and topped with roses and lily-of-the-valley. Other candlelights were on each side of the cake.

Mr. Henry Harvey of Ottawa, was master of ceremonies for the toasts.

The bride's mother received the guests, wearing an avocado green lace dress with beige orlich feather hat, and was assisted by the bridegroom's sister, Mrs. Vincent Aitken of Kingston, who chose a gold frosted silk sheath dress with brown satin hat and matching shoes.

For going away the bride wore a tweed suit in charcoal grey, with red accessories, silver grey mink jacket lined red and black cloche hat. The couple left for Toronto and point west and on their return will reside in Cornwall.

Guests were present from Cornwall, Sarnia, Gravenhurst, Madoc, Ottawa, Oshawa and Belleville.

Prior to her marriage the bride was guest of honor at showers given in Ottawa by Miss Marion Winters and Miss Marie Mills, Mrs. Shule Hortsfield, the office staff of the Estimates Branch of the Public Works, the ex-Wren Association, Mrs. Vincent Aitken of Kingston, the Lady Alexander Legion Branch, and others, also at trousseau tea given by her mother.

ONCE A SEAMSTRESS — Mrs. Ethel Wilson, Alberta's second woman cabinet minister, hasn't forgotten how to run a sewing machine. After nearly 25 years as a packing plant seamstress, Mrs. Wilson turned to politics. This month the Social Credit member of the Alberta Legislature for Bonnyville-Northeast joined the cabinet as minister without portfolio. (CP Photo).

Seamstress Becomes First Woman Cabinet Minister In Alberta in 37 Years

By WALTER KREVENCHUK

EDMONTON (CP)—Twenty-five years ago a 36-cent-an-hour seamstress decided she wanted to make the world "just a little better place."

She was named minister without portfolio in Premier E. C. Manning's Social Credit government.

"I was shocked when I learned of my appointment," she said in an interview. "I had not felt this honor would come my way."

After the first surprise, however, she "decided it was just another job to do" and expressed hope that she can do it well.

The 60-year-old silver-haired woman has done many jobs well. She was forced to take a job as a seamstress in 1937 when the death of her husband left her with three children to support.

JOINED UNION

"Working conditions and wages were very, very poor at that time," decided to do my share in improving things and joined the union movement."

As secretary - treasurer of the Edmonton Labor Council, Mrs. Wilson urged members to take more interest in politics and legislation at all levels.

The members took her at her word and nominated her as a candidate for city council in 1951. She was defeated but tried again the next year and won. She has served on council ever since.

Mrs. Wilson's interest in politics was encouraged in childhood by her father.

"As a child I was taught the importance of people taking an active interest in all facets of public life."

Her father was an unsuccessful Progressive Conservative candidate for the legislature in the early 1900s.

She was elected to the legislature for Edmonton Northeast in 1959 and late in 1962 became the second woman cabinet minister in Alberta's history, the first having been Mrs. Irene Parlby, United Farmers of Alberta government.

LIVES ALONE

Mrs. Wilson doesn't plan to change her way of living now that she's a cabinet minister.

"Any pressure on me to change my way of life—well, I just couldn't face it." Her house is a small clapboard cottage. She lives alone—her children are grown and married—and does her own housework.

She has retired as a seamstress—sewing and repairing uniforms—at a meat-packing plant and is prepared to devote full time to her new post.

"You must be prepared to sacrifice your private life to make a worthwhile contribution," she says. "But if I had it to do all over again, I would start earlier."

Disposition Of Old Books Topic at H-S

Following the filling of 160 bags of candy for the school children and pre-school children by members of the Foxboro Home and School Association a short meeting was held, on the evening of December 18.

Mr. Thompson welcomed all present.

Mr. Thompson had received the Home and School bulletin from the council and read a resolution or two from it.

It was decided that the bills for the plastic bags be paid, also the bill for the oranges when it is given out. Donations of money toward the candy were $4.86.

There was some discussion regarding the disposition of the library books in Mrs. Sines' room and the old library books in both Mrs. Rose's and Mrs. Sine's room. It was decided to leave disposal of same to the school board.

It was also decided that a suitable moments will be bought for the room whose pupils have the most parents out to the next Home and School meeting, January 17, 1963.

Following the usual closing of the meeting, lunch was served by Mrs. J. Hill and Mrs. J. Churchill and a social time was enjoyed by 12 or 14 members.

ENGAGEMENT NOTICE

Mr. and Mrs. Theodore Edward Schwab take pleasure in announcing the engagement of their daughter Sylvia Marilyn to Mr. Joseph D. Basch, the son of Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Basch of Toronto, the wedding to take place in February.

Small Talk

By Zena Cherry

What to do with the cards after Christmas?

It kills me having to throw them out when they're so beautiful and you know darned well some one at a buck apiece. One idea is to keep the ones which have reproductions of Canadian paintings. First thing you know you'll have a good collection of Canadian miniatures which can be framed separately and used in a group, or en masse in one large frame. There are some quite fine prints of such artists as Manly Macdonald, William Winter, Fred S. Haines, Frank Panabaker, Franz Johnston, Cornelius Krieghoff and so on.

As for the others, you can pack them in lots of 30 or 40, wrap in strong paper, leaving one end open for postal inspection. Put your name and address in one corner with the words "Used cards; no commercial value." A parcel such as this will cost 4 to 6 cents and may be sent to:

Limbless, Ex-Servicemen's Enterprises,
Christmas Card Dept.,
Newcastle-on-Tyne 3,
England.

Send only clean cards with nothing printed on because they are renovated and sold.

* * *

If you can't get the stopper out of your new bottle of Christmas perfume, put the bottle in the frig overnight and by morning the top should be loose enough to pry off with the dull edge of a knife.

* * *

Another frig hint. Nail polish kept therein will not become thickly impossible. It will go on the nails smoothly and dry quicker when applied cold.

* * *

Oh - - so you received a black nightie? Well, good luck you. They tell me black lingerie has a tendency to turn brown after washing.

However, the shade may be restored by using lots of bluing in the rinse water.

THE CRUCIAL YEARS

MONTREAL (CP) — Physical fitness expert Bonnie Prudden of New York believes the early years are crucial in developing a physically fit body. She said here that a woman of 40 can get rid of excess flabbiness in six weeks if she concentrates on regular exercise, but if the daughter is obese, she will need at least two years.

THE FAMILY COUNCIL

Wilma D. — On account of her, I can't tell my brother anything.

Mamie G. — I don't see anything so confidential in her talk.

Wilma D. — Because my sister-in-law is such a blabbermouth, I don't dare tell my own brother what's new with me and my family. He'll tell Mamie, and she'll tell the whole world.

She uses any little tidbits about us she can collect, as bait to get invited around. That's how she holds her audience. She hands out her version of every little family item she lays her hand on. For instance, I told my brother I'm getting a new fur coat. I planned to tell my friends, one by one, as I saw fit. What was my surprise to get a few phone calls the very next day from friends who wanted to hear the details.

How's that for a quick leak! Not any more. I must keep secrets from my brother.

Mamie G. — What's all the secrecy about? You'd think Wilma is working for the FBI the way she says she says she's supposed to be so important.

I can keep a secret as well as the next guy, provided it's labeled a secret. Otherwise I feel free to use my own judgment as to what, when and to tell it. But I don't see where I've done Wilma any harm to mention that she's getting a shared raincoat. It was the same when she joined a gym. After all, 1000 other women are signed up there, so I couldn't imagine trying to hide the fact. But she didn't talk to me for weeks because I wrote the news in a family letter to a cousin.

My husband feels as bad about this as I do. Wilma has no case at all.

The Council: Here we're back to the old joke on How to Spread the News. — telephone, telegram, and radio-Mamie!

As to what's telltale, all depends on what about and to whom. Obviously when it's about Wilma and to the public at large, she deems it un-telltale enough to herself. But with more relaxed people, anything that's destined to become public knowledge sooner or later may be bandied about sooner by anyone who needs conversational fodder.

Some folk tell you it's Friday as though it's a State Secret. Peering in the night and left with one hand over their mouth, they whisper sweet-nothings which are really nothings. Seclusiveness, secretiveness is a mannerism, a way of life with them, whether they are FBI men or merely nontrusting, self-important souls who want part with a word without a price attached.

This disagreement boils down to whether Mamie is circumspect, sensitive and discreet about Wilma's conversations, and whether Wilma is unduly touchy, suspicious and dramatizing about "routine" news.

As in-laws their "feelers" may be askew. And who's caught in the squeeze? Mamie's husband, of course. Wilma's husband and his wife turns him into a "grapevine" as far as his sister is concerned.

The happy compromise may lie in Mamie's realization that Wilma needs items about herself as attention-getters. When she's ready to tell, she will. What's left? So it behooves Mamie to give Wilma the limelight items to remember. See if you can answer the following on their behalf.

1. Do they give the bride an engagement gift?

2. Should they give a pre-bridal party for the bride?

3. Do the groom's parents give the bridal dinner?

4. Should they participate in the rehearsal?

5. How should they dress for the wedding?

6. Do the groom's parents stand in the receiving line?

7. Where do they sit at the reception?

8. Do they provide their own transportation to the church and reception?

9. If they are from out-of-town, do they pay for their own wedding and hotel expenses?

10. Is a thank-you note customarily sent to the bride's mother after the wedding?

Answers:

1. It's customary — but not obligatory — for the bridegroom's mother to give the bride a piece of family jewelry or some other heirloom as a token of the occasion.

2. The groom's parents often give a tea, a luncheon or some other type of small party to introduce the bride and her immediate family to their friends and relatives.

3. The bride's parents usually give the bridal dinner, but the groom's parents sometimes offer to do so.

4. They should, so they'll know at what point to take their seats and when to leave after the ceremony.

5. They dress according to the type of wedding and the time of day. The bride's mother usually advises them on this.

6. The groom's mother receives with the bride's mother. The bride's father usually does not receive. The groom's father often circulates with the guests. If he does not know most of them, then he usually joins the receiving line to be introduced.

7. If there's a sit-down luncheon or dinner, the groom's parents usually sit with the bride's parents at a special table.

8. The bride's parents provide transportation to both.

9. Yes.

10. The groom's mother usually sends a note to the bride's mother after the wedding, commenting on the arrangements and thanking her on behalf of her friends and family.

Question: My parents have been separated since I was ten, and I've been living with my mother and brother since then. Because of our religion they have not been divorced. I'm being married soon, and wonder if my father's name has to be included on the invitations and announcements. I rarely see him, and he will not be at the wedding, since he lives in a distant city. — M.B.A., Baltimore, Md.

Answer: If your parents are legally separated, then your mother may issue both in her name. The invitation, for example, would read: Mrs. John Smith requests the honour of your presence at the marriage of her daughter Mary, etc.

INTENSIFY LAB TESTS — Pressure for more laboratory tests of new drugs and greater hygienic controls was put on the federal health department in 1962, largely stemming from the thalidomide tragedy. 5. They dress according to the type of wedding and the time of day. The bride's mother usually advises them on this.

6. The groom's mother receives with the bride's mother. The bride's father usually does not receive. The groom's father often circulates with the guests. If he does not know most of them, then he usually joins the receiving line to be introduced.

7. If there's a sit-down luncheon or dinner, the groom's parents usually sit with the bride's parents at a special table.

8. The bride's parents provide transportation to both.

9. Yes.

10. The groom's mother usually sends a note to the bride's mother after the wedding, commenting on the arrangements and thanking her on behalf of her friends and family.

Question: My parents have been separated since I was ten, and I've been living with my mother and brother since then. Because of our religion they have not been divorced. I'm being married soon, and wonder if my father's name has to be included on the invitations and announcements. I rarely see him, and he will not be at the wedding, since he lives in a distant city. — M.B.A., Baltimore, Md.

Answer: If your parents are legally separated, then your mother may issue both in her name. The invitation, for example, would read: Mrs. John Smith requests the honour of your presence at the marriage of her daughter Mary, etc.

Story of Thalidomide Was Highly Dramatized By Actions of 3 Women

By BOB EXELL
Canadian Press Staff Writer

The year 1962 produced the story of the drug thalidomide, a story that became highly dramatized by the actions of three women.

One of the three was a Canadian - born doctor working for the U.S. government. Another was a young housewife in Belgium. The third was a television personality in Phoenix, Ariz.

Thalidomide changed each of their lives. For this was the sedative drug that gave rise to the curt, if not callous, phrase "thalidomide baby"—an infant born deformed, usually about the limbs, because its mother took the drug as a tranquillizing agent during pregnancy.

In the town of Liege, Belgium, during May, Mrs. Suzanne Vandeput, 24, killed her daughter Corrine by putting a drug in the girl's orange juice when she was eight days old. Mrs. Vandeput had taken thalidomide during her pregnancy and the child was born deformed.

In November, Mrs. Vandeput stood trial for murder. Others including the family doctor and relatives were accused of complicity. All five were acquitted.

The jury had arrived at this decision: The child's death was not murder.

In Phoenix, Ariz., Mrs. Sherri Finkbine, 30, a mother of four who was also the star of a children's TV show, went to court to seek permission for an abortion.

Turned down by the court in August, Mrs. Finkbine and her husband flew to Sweden, where abortion is more commonly and tively liberal. A Swedish court decided an abortion was justified. She aborted Aug. 12 of a deformed foetus.

FEW IN U.S.

In Canada, during 1962, there were dozens of deformed children born because of thalidomide; in Britain, there were hundreds; but there were only the figure ran into the thousands.

But in the United States there were almost none.

Dr. Frances Kelsey, a native of Cobble Hill, B.C., was the reason why. An official of the U.S. Food and Drug Administration, she was apprehensive about the drug when manufacturers proposed to market it. For 14 months she stubbornly refused to grant a licence for its sale in the U.S.

Then it was proved that thalidomide was responsible for fetal deformities. Dr. Kelsey's stubbornness was vindicated — and hailed. On Aug. 7 President Kennedy personally awarded her the U.S. Civil Service gold medal.

MRS. KENNEDY'S YEAR

The woman the most in the news during 1962, perhaps, was Mrs. John F. Kennedy. Whatever Jacqueline Kennedy was, publicity — and controversy — went too.

Named the world's first lady of fashion in January, Mrs. Kennedy later was criticized for wearing her skirts too short, for being photographed in a bathing suit, and for buying clothes in Paris instead of at home.

The president's popular wife acted as a sort of U.S. goodwill ambassador during semi-official visits to India and Pakistan. Later she also visited Mexico and vacationed on an Italian beach.

It was a quiet year for the royal families of Britain and Europe. Queen Elizabeth did not undertake any Commonwealth trips. The Queen Mother visited Canada for 10 days in June, and Princess Margaret visited the Queen of Jamaica's independence celebrations in August.

Princess Alexandra of Kent, 26-year-old first cousin of the Queen, was the newsmaker. Her engagement to Angus James Bruce Ogilvy, second son of the 12th Earl of Airlie, was announced Nov. 29.

In Athena, the Royal House of Greece and Spain's House of Bourbon were united May 14 with the marriage of Princess Sophia of Greece and Prince Juan Carlos, pretender to the Spanish throne.

Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt died in New York at the age of 78 Nov. 7, exactly 30 years after her husband was elected president of the United States for the first time.

On Sunday, Aug. 5, Marilyn Monroe, 36, a beautiful woman nurtured by Hollywood as a symbol of sex, was found dead in her bed. Miss Monroe, thrice married but unmarried at death, had taken her own life by swallowing a large dose of barbiturates.

On Tuesday, Nov. 27, Princess Wilhelmina, 82, Queen of The Netherlands for 50 years, died in her palace near Apeldoorn. Princess Wilhelmina's reign ended abdicated in 1948 in favor of her daughter, Juliana.

GOLD MEDALS FOR MARY

Vancouver's Mary Stewart, a 17-year-old who holds the world record for the 110-yard swimming event, won the Canadian women competitors' only gold medal at the British Empire Games in Perth Australia, during January. Her chief rival was in the butterfly event, although she did not match her record time.

United Church Holds Candle Light Service

FRANKFORD — Frankford United Church was filled to capacity for both morning and evening services on Christmas Sunday.

After the evening candle-light service, 60 young people went out singing carols, juniors walking and seniors riding on a tractor-trailer combination engineered by Fred Phillips. It was a cold, windy night with enough snow and ice to foster the Christmas spirit and everybody enjoyed the singing, returning to Rose-Lowery Hall afterwards for coffee and a sumptuous lunch served by the United Church Women.

The outside singing generated so much enthusiasm that the roof of Rose-Lowery hall was almost lifted from a succession of carols, hymns, folk songs, campsongs and nonsense rhymes.

The church was appropriately decorated for the morning service, by the Y.P.U. The choir, under the direction of Mrs. K. Austin, sang "Christmas Jubilate" a Russian melody and, "It Came Upon the Midnight Clear". Miss Bonnie Howe, soloist, contributed a lovely rendition of Michael Head's "The Shatter Winners".

The minister's text was from the Christmas story, "There was no room for them in the inn".

The flowers on the altar were in memory of the late Mr. Wesley Dean, and the late Mrs. Mildred Carscadden.

CANDLELIGHT SERVICE

In the evening the candle-light service was arranged and beautifully effected by 27 C.G.I.T. girls in charming blue and white uniforms, under leadership of Miss Barbara Stickle, Mrs. Ed. Sykes and Mrs. Arnold Stickle. Mrs. Stickle conducted the service, assisted by Rev. Cameron Hamilton, who offered the prayer and the call to worship.

Leisha Judd read the Christmas Story from Luke and Anne Beech contributed a violin solo during the offertory.

Candle-lighters were: June Dawe, Brenda Phillips and Sharon Vockeroth and the tubaren. Linda Dafoe, and Linda Wannamaker.

Mrs. Syke's inspiring meditation contributed to the spirit of the occasion as the choir sang "Gentle Mary Laid Her Child".

Twenty girls took part in a choral Scripture reading with Miss Barbara Stickle at the organ.

Decorations were by the C.G.I.T. girls.

The minister pronounced the benediction.

Readers' Friday Column

by Mary Moore

QUESTION:

Lately we have attended two different dances followed by Buffet Suppers. On both occasions we were served Curried Beef from a chafing dish. It was so delicious I decided to have it for our New Year's Eve buffet. However, I had been unable to find a recipe. Could you help me out? One dish had a slightly sour taste as if it may have had commercial sour cream in it. We have made your dark Christmas cake for '62 and found it delicious. It quite well too — a fault we have had other years . . . D. T.

ANSWER:

A beef dish which could be served from a chafing dish and which has "a slightly sour taste" is Beef Stroganoff, but it does not call for curried powder. Could that be one of the dishes you are after? If so, here it is.

Dinner Menus

FRIDAY

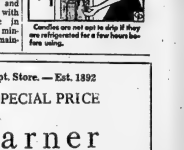
Fried Crumbed Smelts with Lemon; Parsleyed Baked Corn au Gratin; Shredded Cabbage and Carrot Salad with Dill Dressing; Canned Peaches; Toasted Crumpets; Coffee.

SUNDAY
(Guests)

Beef Stroganoff (see Friday); Buttered Noodles, Spinach Casserole; Avocado and Grapefruit Salad with Mayonnaise; Cinnamon Stuffed with Shaved Brazils, Swedish Thumbprint Cookies; Coffee.

BEEF STROGANOFF (serves 6 to 8):

Double this to serve 12 to 16. 2¼ to 3 lbs. sirloin steak ⅜" thick, flour, 1¼ teaspoons salt, ⅛ teaspoon pepper, 1½ tbs. chopped finely, ⅔ to 1 lb. mushrooms, sliced, 1½ cloves garlic, crushed, ¼ cup butter, 3 tablespoons flour, 1½ cans consomme, undiluted, 1½ pts. (30 oz.) commercial sour cream, ¾ teaspoon salt, ¼ teaspoon pepper, 1½ spoons Worcestershire sauce.



Cut steak into pencil-thin strips. Dredge lightly with flour mixed with the salt and pepper. Saute the onions with the mushrooms and garlic in ¼ cup butter for about 3 minutes. Add the beef, and remaining butter. Over high heat cook and stir the meat continuously for 3 minutes. Remove all from heat and lift out steak and vegetables. Pour off all but 6 tablespoons dripping and blend in the flour. Add the consomme and stir until smooth and thickened. Put in the sour cream, salt and pepper and keep heat low so the cream will not curdle. Add paprika and Worcestershire sauce. Just before serving, add the beef and vegetables and heat together a few minutes. Use more salt if necessary. Excellent for chafing dish service from a buffet. Here is the recipe for a genuine

BEEF CURRY (serves 10-12):

1½ lbs. sirloin steak cut in bite-size pieces, 2 cup flour, 2 tablespoons curry powder (or more), ½ cup butter or margarine, 3 cloves garlic, chopped, 4 cups water, 1 cup Sultana raisins, 2 apples peeled, cored and chopped (5pyz are good), 1 cup onion, chopped, 1¼ teaspoons salt, ½ teaspoon pepper, 2 lbs. mushrooms sliced and gently fried in butter.

Mix together flour and curry powder and dredge meat in them. Melt the butter in a large frying pan and add the garlic and meat, stirring often. When meat is browned on all sides add 3 cups water, raisins, apples and onion. Cover and simmer until meat is tender, not more than an hour. Season with salt and pepper, add the mushrooms and remove from heat. The curry can be made in advance and reheated and served from a chafing dish. It is always served with rice and chutney and usually with a great variety of accompaniments, each in separate bowls, such as shredded raw cocoanut, chopped green onion, chopped nuts, finely chopped hard-cooked eggs and crumbled crisply cooked side bacon.

I hope one of these is what you want. Both are highly recommended.

Candles are not apt to drip if they are refrigerated for a few hours before using.

Stains Can Be Cleaned If You Act Quickly

By JANET KASK

MONTREAL (CP) — Holiday accidents of the domestic type —such as the overflowing of New Year's cheer on the freshly cleaned carpet or upholstery—are no cause for alarm if you act quickly, says an expert on home furnishings.

J. B. Friedlander, representative of a Montreal textile firm, says it's good sense and not bad manners to rush out with the mop as soon as the accident occurs.

When children are the culprits, don't scold—teach them to mop up carefully themselves, says Mr. Friedlander. "They actually enjoy the responsibility."

"My children sometimes don't even take the time to analyse a stain. They're back with the soapy rag before I have time to remind them that gravy calls for a commercial type of cleaner. But who am I to quarrel with their chemistry—since it seems to work?"

SCRUB VIGOROUSLY

For water-based stains such as most types of drinks, for sweet and fatty foods, mud, and accidents involving infants and pets, he advises dissolving a teaspoonful of mild detergent in a half pint of tepid water.

First thoroughly blot or scrape off all readily removable portion of the spill. If the carpet is wool or man-made fibre, don't be afraid to scrub the spot vigorously, dipping a sponge or cloth into the solution.

Nylon carpets require less liquid, for although nylon is non-absorbant, the carpet's jute backing isn't. Thorough wetting of the backing can cause the jute to shrink and the carpet to buckle.

Also, sub-standard jute backing often used on less-expensive carpets of any fibre can produce a yellowish discoloration even after professional cleaning.

SPOTS MAY RETURN.

For oily stains, including foods, shoe and furniture polish, wax, tar, inks, cosmetics and chewing and pine needles, pat "do-it-yourself" liquid carpet cleaner to five parts water. If the spot is small, partly fill an egg cup with tepid water and add a few dashes of the fluid.

A commercial spot remover or dry cleaning solvent can be substituted. Always confine the area of the spill, working from the edges to the centre, whatever the stain or cleaner.

The same emergency treatments can be applied to upholstery—with the caution that nothing should be more gentle.

"There are three points to keep in mind," says Mr. Friedlander. "Prompt action, correct choice of solution and thorough cleaning.

"Some spots which appear to respond miraculously to a light sponging suddenly reappear hours or days later."

This is a delayed chemical reaction which occures when the spot has not been entirely removed. Any crushing of the carpet can usually be overcome by blotting in the direction of the pile.

Halifax Police Boys' Club Can Be Joined Free of Charges and With No Dues

By ED WALTERS

HALIFAX (CP)—From the time a Halifax boy reaches his ninth birthday until he finishes school, camping trips, radio courses, swimming and shooting instruction are his for the taking, free of charge if he joins the Halifax Police Boys' Club.

The club, set up 12 years ago and now housed temporarily in a dilapidated wartime building, teaches 350 boys carpentry, leatherwork, physical fitness and a host of other subjects. Instructors are volunteers from the armed forces, police and civilian life.

The lads pay no dues and the instructors receive no pay. The club is supported by donations.

Police Constable Reginald Borne, the president, says perhaps 60 per cent of the youngsters would have gotten into some kind of trouble if they hadn't joined the club.

Constable Borne said some of the boys are brought to the club's attention by juvenile courts or welfare organizations. Many others join on their own.

Police Sergeant Bill Mac-Donald, who has been with the club since its beginning, says it has a level-off influence also. Some boys come in with chips on their shoulders. Companionship and sweaty hobby bring out the best in their personalities.

SOY HAM LICENCES

He said 25 boys recently passed transport department examinations for amateur radio operator's licences as a result of their studies at the club. Many now are working in the electronics communications field with the department or in the armed forces.

About 50 boys have been placed in other jobs in the last two or three years.

Recalling how the club started, Sgt. MacDonald said 15 policemen who recognized the need for something to keep the boys out of trouble met in 1950 to discuss plans. A Hallowe'en party was organized and netted the first funds.

The club was at first open to children from underprivileged families only. Later membership was thrown open to all who wanted to join. Lack of instructors is about the only limitation.

A boys' band was one of the club's early achievements. It is several years it was invited to every parade and festivl in Nova Scotia. It is a state of decline now but Constable Borne says it's being revived.

The club plans to continue providing free facilities as long as possible. But it's looking for a new home. The present building is to be demolished.

Longer Drinking

Manitoba makes it 1 a.m. instead of midnight and Saskatchewan clubs will be allowed to serve liquor until 12:30 a.m. instead of 11 p.m.

The reverse situation applies in Quebec where the normal 1 a.m. deadline is cut to midnight for New Year's Eve drinking. In effect, the province is adopting Sunday hours for this midnight sigh.

In the normal sense, there's no public drinking in Prince Edward Island but private clubs can get permits to serve liquor up to 11:30 p.m.

British Columbia and New Brunswick are holding to the normal midnight closing time.

Top cabaret prices in major Canadian cities range from a basic cost (liquor is extra) of $15 to $20 a couple for dining, dancing and entertainment in Montreal, St. John's, Halifax, Saint John, N.B., Winnipeg, Regina, Edmonton and Vancouver to $30 in Montreal and $35 in Toronto.

In some of the country's highest-priced establishments the cheque for the evening's entertainment can easily run to $100 a couple or more, depending on how much drinking is done.

At the bottom of the ladder are clubs that provide bars and noisemakers and dancing but no food or drink for as little as $2 a person.

Two Brothers From Dublin Given 10 Years

TORONTO (CP)—Two brothers from Dublin were sentenced Thursday to 10 years in penitentiary after pleading guilty to three charges of armed robbery.

Magistrate Donald Graham recommended that Thomas Bergin, 28, an airport employee and Eamon, 25, a student teacher, be deported to their native Ireland after serving their sentences.

Their last exploit was an almost-successful attempt on a downtown branch of the Bank of Montreal in November during which police used tear gas and 12 shots were fired as the brothers missed out on $250,000 in a vault.

The pair pleaded guilty two weeks ago to this holdup, along with a $12,000 bank robbery here three years ago and an $1,100 theatre robbery last year.

Woman Mayor Of Leaside After Recount

TORONTO (CP)—Mrs. Beth Nealson became the first woman mayor of suburban Leaside Thursday when a recount of Dec. 3 municipal election ballots gave her a five-vote win over Mayor Lloyd Dickinson.

The 51-year-old Mrs. Nealson, mother of two, has been a town councillor for four years and member of the board of education for four years.

Thursday's recount under Judge Farquhar McRae gave her 3,551 votes to 3,546 for Mr. Dickinson, who led by 13 votes on the election night count.

THEY DON'T ALWAYS AGREE — Robert Thompson, (right) national Social Credit party leader, and deputy leader Real Caouette have disagreed over when party members in the Commons should support the government in confidence vote tests. The Social Credit vote has managed to keep the Progressive Conservatives in power but Mr. Thompson predicts a general election next summer. (CP Photo).

White's District

WHITE'S DISTRICT—White's Church held its Christmas Sunday service on Sunday morning with the Rev. Dr. Swann giving the Christmas story from Matthew, assisted by a Kerwan teacher formerly of Trinidad, who told of many interesting facts about Trinidad, including Dr. Swann's ministry there, and especially of the Poinsettia which grows like a tree.

The choir contributed a number, "His Birthday". The offering was for the church and Sunday School purposes.

At the close of the service, Mrs. Lina Hunt presented Dr. Swann with a lovely poinsettia and Mrs. Albert Jones made a presentation of a gift to Mrs. W. A. Jeffery, who is church organist and assistant to the Sunday School.

Sgt. John Linn and Mrs. Linn, of Cobourg, were Saturday tea guests of their parents, Mr. and Mrs. William Linn.

The sympathy of friends is extended to Mrs. Arnold Ketcheson and family in the loss of her father, Mr. David Bulpit, of Trenton.

Miss Linda Pearson is holidaying with her grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. Ernest Curtis, while her mother is a patient in Trenton Memorial Hospital.

Mrs. Robert Jones of Fort Erie is holidaying with her son, Mr. Eric Jones, Mrs. Jones and family.

Miss Louise Rush of Toronto, is spending the Christmas holiday with her brother, Mr. Clifton Rush.

Mr. and Mrs. Clayton Ritz, Janet and Cathy, of Thurlow, were Christmas Sunday guests of her mother, Mrs. W. Jeffery.

The sympathy of this district is extended to the family of the late Mrs. Bidwell Westover who passed away on Friday.

Congratulations to Mr. and Mrs. Robert Pearson on the birth of their daughter at Belleville Memorial Hospital on Wednesday, December 19th.

There was a good attendance from White's Church at the Candlelight Service on Tuesday evening at Wesley United Church, when the choirs from Centenary, White and Wesley united to put on a fine service. White's choir contributed, "We Three Kings", and "Star in the East," and "His Birthday". Those who assisted were: Mrs. Philip Campbell, Mrs. Lamont Mrs. Frank DeFord, Mrs. George Bilham, Mrs. Albert Jones, and Masters Ronald Corbin, Steven Jones and Bobby Corbin with Mrs. W. Jeffery as accompanist.

Church and Sunday School services at White's will resume at the usual hour.

The Bay of Quinte Women's Institute presented either potted plants or boxes of fruit to shut-ins during the year. This year, those who received them in the district were: Mrs. Walter Jones, Mrs. Jessie Sandercock, and Mr. Albert Jones. This kindness is surely appreciated.

Tractor, Many Other Items, Garage Burn

PICTON — A frame garage containing a tractor and many other items, destroyed by fire at the home of Ben Hutchison, High Shore road Mr. Hutchison and others were in the garage using a torch in repairing the radiator.

Flames caused an explosion, but fortunately the men escaped injury. The building was quickly a mass of flames. Due to the tractor being equipped with tracks for snow plowing, it was too heavy for a car to pull to safety.

Also lost was a quantity of tools, power and chain saw and miscellaneous articles.

The fire department from Camp Picton responded to the call and saved a hydro pole near the garage so that services were not disrupted.

The breeze was blowing away from the brick house and it was not endangered.

Successful Living

(A Canadian Social Worker Helps with Human Problems)

No Sympathy for Beggars

DEAR DORIS—What is wrong with me? I just turned a deaf-mute away from the door without giving him anything. I do this so many times I am beginning to wonder if I am human.

I am acquainted with poverty both at home and in the community, as my father is a minister. I can remember when I was ten years old we were packing Christmas boxes for the poor. I can see yet my mother after she packed the last box turn and say, "I only wish we could do the same for the children!" We ate hamburger for our Christmas dinner.

DORIS CLARK

I have worked my way through school and college, all the way, even going to school. I picked blueberries, crocuses, anything I could sell to help with my books and clothes, and yet I feel people expected me to get through school! No one ever thought we were living on subsistence levels.

Now I look at these people who expect so much for nothing and I am dead. I cannot lift a hand to do a thing to feed those on welfare or who won't work. I do have some pity for the children though.

I must say, I appreciate everything I have achieved and as a future social worker I realize I must change, but I feel nothing in the meantime . . . absolutely nothing towards beggars, imposters and lazy individuals.—KAY.

DEAR KAY—Who wants to give things to imposters or lazy people. Yet when you become a social worker, you will begin to see the poverty of spirit (perhaps originating in unhappy childhood) which has created these distorted personalities.

For such cases, unearned material help may degrade further. But when you are trained to do it, you will be able to treat causes—and bring about new attitudes which can make a discouraged "imposter" into a self-respecting going concern.

DEAR DORIS—I have been living with the same woman for nearly five years, and we have three wonderful children whom I love with all my heart. But we are not married because I cannot get a divorce from my first wife.

This way of living has been very hard on both of us, together with my business getting on my nerves. We fought a lot and finally she left me, taking the children along.

She has been gone now for a few weeks without letting me know where she is at, and not even a phone call. It's been terrible for me since. I can't concentrate on my work, they're all I have on my mind all the time. I cannot live that way. Please, Doris, tell me what to do.—HOPEFUL.

DEAR HOPEFUL—Why should she stay? Surely the only excuse for such an unblessed union is the joy of true love. Search for her through newspapers, friends, school contacts. And if you find her, you will have to lead in your attitude, as well as making another try for divorce.

DEAR DORIS—About the sex talks you mentioned some time ago in the paper. I think it should be taught in grades seven and eight. Brought more into the open. Because if we as grownups don't help our children with things like this, they can easily be led astray with vulgar stories.

I think we as parents and teachers and also social workers should yell it from high heaven, providing it is given in the proper way. For instance, I have my own 14-year-old son. Two years ago, when I was expecting our third child, I had told him we were looking for a new baby and I was quite surprised when he asked me how long does it take to get a baby.

From that time on, things were never kept secret. If they asked any questions, I always answered as well as I knew how.

When we were children at home, if we asked anything about sex we were told to wash our mouth with soap. But I have learned differently since then. — MOLLY.

DEAR MOLLY—How right you are. A wise friend of mine, who was both father and welfare worker, used to say, "Give them ammunition (the knowledge) and then they can fight their own way through difficulties."

* * *

TO MARILYN W.—I have leaflets on a dozen careers for girls and would send them to you if you would care to send a dollar with your next letter. I will also send you some ideas about learning to dance in your living room. Be sure to repeat both requests.

British Paper

have been right in getting rid of this headstrong and foolish person," Connor says.

The Manchester Guardian says the reports provide "a classic example of the Nazis' inability to understand the British mentality or the working of the British constitution."

"When Edward VIII actually said the things which the Duke of Coburg claimed he said will, presumably, never be known.

"But even if he did, the obvious conclusion to be drawn from the Duke of Coburg's report of them is that if the Nazis believed the British monarchy's views on foreign policy would have any bearing on the likely behavior of the British government, then it is not surprising that Germany lost the war."

The memorandum to Hitler was one of thousands of seized documents of German foreign policy captured with the state archives by the Allies at the end of the Second World War. A selection of these documents, covering the period April, 1925-March, 1936, was published simultaneously Thursday by the British, U.S. and French governments.

Publication of the German foreign policy documents sheds new light on the third Reich's relations with other foreign powers, including Russia.

A major theme of the period, however, was the attempt of the Nazi regime to form an effective working partnership with British leaders considered sympathetic toward Hitler's aspirations.

The British Royal Family also was thought to be among those sympathizers, according to German diplomatic assessment of the day.

How Long Will the Socreds Continue to Vote With Govt. Question on Parliament Hill

By KEN KELLY

OTTAWA (CP)—The burning question as Parliament faces the new year is how long Social Credit will continue to vote to keep the minority Progressive Conservative government in office.

In the pre-Christmas session, Parliament saw a Liberal drive, supported by the New Democrats, to defeat the government thwarted by Social Credit support of the government in confidence vote tests.

Social Credit Leader Robert Thompson took the line that the country's need for positive legislative steps must override Liberal election demands. As summed up by Gilbert Rondeau (Shefford), the Thompson policy was:

"To us, the important thing is not to change the seats of the pants on the benches of Parliament but it is rather to amend the legislation which in the near future will govern the destiny of our people."

It wasn't universally popular with the Social Credit MPs, particularly Deputy Leader Real Caouette.

SOCRED CREDITS SPLIT

In a Nov. 6 Commons vote on a Liberal non-confidence motion, two Social Credit MPs voted against the government and Mr. Caouette led four others in abstaining. The government squeaked through by 13 votes—one of its closest calls—as Social Credit broke ranks for the first time in a crucial vote.

After that, the government appeared to be trying to avoid permitting any issue to come to a vote in a way that Social Credit support might not be forthcoming.

The year ended with all parties working hard on organization for the next election which Mr. Thompson forecast for the summer of 1963.

Discussing in an interview Social Credit voting support of the government, Mr. Thompson said:

"Time is on our side. I haven't tried to hide the fact that getting more time was involved as well as the matter of what was good for the country. The more time we have to get our message across, the stronger we will become."

POWER IN QUEBEC

From a political movement which recruited virtually all its past parliamentary strength in Alberta and British Columbia before being blanked in the 1958 election, Social Credit became a spectacular force in Quebec in 1962.

Social Credit's capture of 26 of Quebec's 75 seats and four in Western Canada helped create a House of Commons in which no party commanded a majority—"a minority of minorities" as Mr. Thompson dubbed it in his maiden speech.

Only Mr. Caouette, the party's Quebec chief, and Mr. Thompson's three western colleagues—H. A. Olson (Medicine Hat), Bert Leboe (Cariboo) and G. B. Patterson (Fraser Valley) — had previous parliamentary experience.

Some able parliamentarians developed quickly such as Dr. Guy Marcoux (Quebec - Montmorency), party whip, and Gilles Gregoire (Lapointe), financial critic and Mr. Caouette's right-hand man.

MP EJECTED

Unused to Parliament's ways of handling business and its rules, some Social Credit MPs appeared to become impatient. One of them, Bernard Dumont (Bellechasse), was elected for the balance of one sitting day for defying Speaker Marcel Lambert.

Social Credit sources make no secret of their hopes of increasing their Quebec representation, especially by continuing the heavy concentration on television and radio which gave them 26 federal seats and Liberal Premier Lesage his 1960 and 1962 provincial election victories.

The party's federal wing counts on strong support from Premier Manning's provincial government in Alberta, which also elected 17 Social Credit MPs, and where the party lost to Conservatives by narrow margins in 12 constituencies in the 1962 voting.

Social Credit also has hopes for Saskatchewan candidates and is stressing organization in a number of Northern Ontario and Niagara Peninsula constituencies.

Said Andrea: "People on the ground told us to keep talking or shouting to stay awake, so we yelled the whole time we were up there.

"When I heard the cable was broken I figured we'd be up there all night. I thought about jumping . . . the snow on the ground didn't look so far away.

"But, I was glad I didn't jump after I came down and saw how far it was."

Rescuers looped a rope ladder over the chairlift cable at the high edge of the gully then inched the rope down to Andrea. She was told to tangle herself into the rope ladder and was then lowered to the ground.

The same procedure was used to rescue others.

Police said it took until early Thursday to rescue the chairlift riders and 4½ hours to lead the others down the mountain.

The duke met Edouard Herriot on his first visit to France in 1912, and always looked upon him as the benevolent politician and mayor of Lyon. Indians, Metis Must Choose Says Roblin

THOMPSON, Man. (CP) — Premier Duff Roblin said Thursday night the Indians and Metis of northern Manitoba "must make their own choice" regarding employment.

He was speaking at an evening political meeting following an afternoon conference with representatives of Indian and Metis groups and religious leaders in the area regarding stories of hardship among the people.

Premier R o b l i n said there were and are difficult conditions among the Indians and Metis and that he "has never closed his eyes to the fact." He added that while there has been a great deal done for the 80,000 natives in northern Manitoba, there still remains a great deal to be done.

He said that starting Jan. 28 community development officers will go to live in the Indian communities where they will try to help the Indians help themselves.

Mr. Roblin said the community development officers "will not take the lead and tell them what to do. They must make their own choice."

At the afternoon meeting, representatives of the Indian community said their problem was not one of starvation but one of a lack of employment.

A meeting between provincial and federal government officials and representatives of the International Nickel Company, Thompson's main industry, is scheduled Jan. 8 in Ottawa for talks on further employment of Indians and Metis among the 2,200 inco employees at the plant, the second largest of its kind in the Commonwealth.

Topics this week: A new device to identify sneak nuclear tests, pavements in pastel hues, and a strange legacy from the second world war.

UNDERGROUND SLEUTH

As part of the effort to find foolproof ways of detecting and identifying underground nuclear detonations, the U.S. Air Force is backing construction of a super-sleuthing instrument inside California's Sierra Mountains.

Called an extensometer, the giant, ultra-sensitive device will be designed primarily to measure strains in the earth's crust caused by natural earthquakes and by tidal forces created by the moon and sun.

But government scientists are hoping it also might help in the quest for methods to identify sneak nuclear tests underground.

Developers of the instrument say it's so sensitive that, aside from measuring earth strains, it should be able to record the impact on earth of periodic radiation storms stirred up by nature in space.

PASTEL PAVEMENTS

"The trouble with the New Jersey turnpike," a reporter's daughter once said, "is that it's just miles and miles of just miles and miles!"

Relief from such potentially dangerous monotony on the super highways may come from new, synthetic pavement materials, which are available in virtually all colors of the rainbow—including red, green, blue, yellow-gold or white.

Developed by Esso Company scientists, these materials already are being used at service stations, and on tennis courts, walks, driveways and patios—and the white colored type has also been laid on some old concrete roads. Some safety experts now are suggesting wider applications, including use on super highways.

OILY WATERS

U.S. Navy researchers say oil from sunken tankers of the Second World War is still seeping to the ocean surface "and contributing to what has become a serious international problem—the pollution of the sea and its shores by oil."

Areas bordering Europe's North Sea, and the eastern seaboard of the United States have experienced the greatest contamination, they say. They add that besides the contribution from wartime tankers, ocean waters also get pollution from up to 250,000 tons of oily substances discharged annually by ships at sea.

MEASLES IS EPIDEMIC

CALGARY (CP) — The Calgary health department reported Thursday an outbreak of measles in the city has reached epidemic proportions. In the last week, 306 cases of measles were reported, bringing the total number of cases in the city since Dec. 1 to more than 1,500.

Sunday School Lesson

Irresponsible Religion

By ROY L. SMITH

It is unfortunate, but it is true, that there is a very great deal of irresponsible religion in our world—religion that never gets down to earth among the toilers and the wounded, to help them solve their real problems.

Sound theology is a very important part of any religion, but the theological vaporizing that leaves out of account all the troubles, temptations, and bewilderments of the plain man is a waste of time and a betrayal of a trust.

There is a very grave danger that the preachers and teachers of Christendom will exhaust themselves with their theological theories, and leave the wounds of the world unhealed. A church janitor said a very wise, and probably a discerning, thing about the pastor of the church. "I think he must be a very learned man, and I guess he knows his books. But the worst fault I have found in him is that he spends most of time answering questions I never heard anyone ask."

ANTIQUARIAN RELIGION

Down through the centuries some extremely bitter battles have been fought by the Christian theologians, as they have confronted the pagan philosophers. And let us thank God that the victories have been won — cleanly, conclusively, and completely. That means that there is no necessity for returning to those battlefields and fighting those battles over again. Let's keep our battling contemporaneous.

DETACHED RELIGION

There are those matters technical, tedious, and tantalizing — which are of vast interest to the preacher. Some of them are speculative matters, concerning which no one will ever be able to offer any conclusive evidence. And there are those other matters, which have to do with peculiar problems with which the plain man never has to deal.

There is a very great danger that the preacher may carry his own problems into the pulpit, and discuss them at the expense of the congregation that has never faced them or discovered them to be problems. Only in the rarest of instances have such matters any deserved place in the pulpit or the Bible Class.

SELF-CENTRED RELIGION

No small part of the modern cult of "peace of mind" is centred in self. We become very self conscious, aware of our difficulties, perhaps sorry that we have sinned without being sorry for our sinfulness, or convinced that there is not much that even oGd can do for us.

The Pharisee's prayer in Jesus famous parable of the Pharisee and the Publican, is a perfect example of a great deal of our praying. Notice that the old prayer did not ask God to do anything to make him better, for as he looked at himself he could see no fault in himself that even God might want to correct.

The Uniform Sunday School lesson for December 30: "Dissipleship," Matthew 28:19-20; Acts 16:9-15; Romans 1:1-7; 1 Corinthians 2:1-5; Ephesians 4:11-16, 23-32; Colossians 1:25-29.

The most difficult problem in all the field of religion, is the self-centred man who cannot believe that he needs any salvation, forgiveness redemption, or newness of life. What he has already achieved suits him so well, that it shuts him away from what he might be and become.

CALLED TO BE SAINTS

As Paul used the word, "saints" did not mean perfect people. Instead, it meant people who had found a perfect example — a Savior — and set off in pursuit of saintliness.

It is commonly understood, when we use the word saint in modern common speech, that we mean one who has achieved saintliness. Instead, the New Testament means men who have started out to become saints. It is not a matter of success, but of objective. It does not represent the finished product but the end toward which we strive.

ANAESTHETIC RELIGION

The word "saved" which is on the tongues of so many Christians, is apt to suggest that the danger is all past, that the problems are all solved, that the responsibilities have all been assumed, and that there is nothing to do now but wait until God's curfew has sounded and we are "called to our rest." The religion that leaves us anesthetized is a false faith, utterly unworthy of the name Christian.

Teen-Age Canada

Here's a Resolution

By JACK HUTTON

It's that time of year again — the resting period between Christmas and New Year's Eve when a few thoughtful adults prepare their resolutions.

Why shouldn't Canadian teenagers try writing a few of their Just in case that prospect leaves you tongue-tied, a teen - age friend of mine has Kindly agreed to let the rest of you see his examples for 1963.

1. I will stop calling Dad the "Bossa Nova" because he thinks it means "bossy".

2. I will meekly volunteer to wash the dishes two or, three nights a week — even though I hope like made that my help isn't needed.

3. I will rush outside to shovel off the walk everytime it snows. (This means, of course that no one should criticize my TV-watching for three hours after that.)

4. I will not refer to either Mom or Dad as the "Warden" in future when they make it known to my friends that I have a curfew to meet after a week night date.

5. I will read at least one good book each two or three weeks during 1963 and will not ask for the family car too often, at least no more often than five nights a week.

6. I want to improve my wind. Therefore, I will cut down on watching TV cowboys. I'm going to watch the private detectives instead.

7. I am going to make a determined effort to tolerate the eccentricities of my brothers and sisters — until the first time that my sister tries wearing my favorite sweater again.

8. I am going to stop driving down to the drugstore and the corner grocery because I need the exercise. (I wonder how I'd make out hitchhiking instead.)

9. Why should I go around with just one girl when others haven't had the pleasure of my company on a date? I'm going to make a firm effort to take out more lucky girls in 1963.

10. I shall not reveal these resolutions to my family because there is a sneaky chance they might make me live up to them.

SERIOUS AFFAIR

My friend who penned the resultions above added a semi-serious postscript. "Have you ever watched adults making up their annual New Year's list of things to do or don't?" he asked.

"Around my family, it's a very serious affair. Dad starts thinking about his a week or 10 days in advance, and we help him polish some of the phrases around the breakfast table.

"Friends of his who drop in before or during the holiday season sit around for half-an-hour at a time while he explains what he has resolved to do or not to do.

"They all look very impressed, at least the first year they do. And we all agree that things are going to be different next year. No more leaving the toaster on or leaving soap in hot water.

"But wait until two weeks after New Year's Day. Things will be right back to normal — and we're already thinking about the next list of resolutions will be!"

CHRISTMAS HUMOR

I've heard this gag circulating over the last few weeks among teen-age friends. Have you heard it?

Question: "Did you hear Santa Claus was getting married?"

Answer: "He's marrying Mary Christmas."

Maybe I'm starting to get old, but that hasn't strained my funnybone yet. Pass along other local bits of humor you feel would make the rest of us chuckle, and I'll print them here.

Just Notes: I'm waiting for it, but haven't heard anyone mention a "Bossa Nova twist" dance. Maybe they're trying the Popeye to it.

Several of you disagree with me about the 11 records topping the Boston accent of U.S. President J. F. Kennedy. Sorry but I still think it's in bad taste when it uses his family for an easy gag.

Watch your local jukeboxes for the impact of Elizabeth Taylor, the American actress. Canadian record dealers are going to release a new record, "Cleo", to coincide with the release of her latest multimillion dollar picture, "Cleopatra."

New Quebec Liberal Govt. Dipping Toes Into Waters of Long-Term Economic Plans

By JOHN YOSTON

QUEBEC (CP)—The Quebec Liberal government, its position strengthened by the results of a snap general election, is gingerly dipping its toes into the waters of long-term economic planning.

A gentle flow toward more state intervention, just noticeable early in 1961, reached a swell with the November election called by Premier Jean Lesage. The tide is expected to continue in 1963.

The election was called on the issue of state ownership of private electricity producers. Despite some nationalistic overtones in the campaign, Mr. Lesage insisted the cabinet had decided on expropriation "for economic and not racial reasons."

Public ownership of electricity, he said, would be the first vital step to long-term economic planning in co - operation with private enterprise.

The election result, which increased Liberal representation in the legislative assembly by nine seats, was considered a mandate to take over 11 privately owned power companies. Legislation authorizing the multi - million - dollar acquisition will be introduced during the session opening Jan. 15.

SEE LOWER RATES

Mr. Lesage and Resources Minister Rene Levesque repeated often in 15,000 miles of campaigning that state ownership of electricity would be "the motor, the key, the basis" of economic development of less-favored regions.

With electricity in the hands of the people through their government, they argued, there would be unity of direction and lower rates which would help bring job - producing industries to areas that might otherwise go without.

The government's Economic Advisory Council, established in 1961, said it has "highest hopes" for what it called "indicative planning with assistance." It said this would be a democratically instituted system, applied through ordinary legislative powers and enjoying "such financial support as would make its application attractive to those engaged in developing the economy."

Changes and additions to the cabinet early in December were taken as an indication of Mr. Lesage's intention to push ahead with economic development. Three new ministers, including the treasurer, are understood to support long-range planning.

The major shift sent the youngest minister, 35-year-old Gerard D. Levesque, up from fisheries to industry and commerce. His new department, with its nucleus of economists and statisticians, will work closely with natural resources where many of the government's planning advocates are found.

OPPOSITION UNDECIDED

These are the men who control Rene Levesque, 40-year-old firebrand, that exploration of the power companies is necessary for future growth. Both Levesques, although not related, are from the Gaspe.

Rene Levesque's personal campaign in favor of power expropriation is believed to have prompted the government to act quickly. It decided upon the election to obtain "a decisive mandate" to acquire the companies at an estimated cost of $300,000,000.

The Liberals won 63 seats and the Union Nationale 31 with one independent elected.

Caught in the middle of a top-heavy power organization when the vote was called, the Union Nationale took no firm position on the issue. Premier Lesage was among those who suggested this hurt the party.

The election also saw some public differences between Daniel Johnson, Union Nationale leader, and his first lieutenant, Jean - Jacques Bertrand. Mr. Johnson refused to take a stand on the power question. Mr. Bertrand was for it in principle.

FORMER MINISTERS LOSE

The Union Nationale lost many of its old guard, including former cabinet ministers, in the election but it gained a number of young, relatively unknown members.

Twenty-five of the assembly's 95 seats changed hands in the vote, the Liberals taking 17 from the Union Nationale while losing eight others.

Union Nationale gains were all in rural areas—five of them in the underdeveloped Lower St. Lawrence Region. Liberal gains were in both urban and rural areas.

The Social Credit factor was closely watched in the election following Mr. Johnson's appeal to that party's supporters to back him in the absence of Social Credit candidates. But despite Social Credit's strong showing in last June's federal election, it appeared to have little effect in the over-all result provincially.

BELLEVILLE, ONTARIO, FRIDAY, DECEMBER 28, 1962

Tom Tanner, of London, Leader of the Opposition, discusses the results of a sitting with Don Richardson, of Cocksville, Premier of the 42nd Session of the Ontario Older Boys' Parliament. Headquarters of the session is at Albert College, but sittings are in the Auditorium of the Ontario School for the Deaf. The public is invited to the sittings.

Older Boys' Parliament Continues Session Here

The forty-second annual session of the Ontario Older Boys' Parliament, promoted by the Ontario Council of Christian Education, site in Belleville this year for the first time in 25 years. Delegates from across the province are nominated and elected to the parliament from among 16 to 20-year-old boys active in educational groups in participating churches.

Purpose of their meeting is to appraise their education programs, within the church groups, for the past year, and plan the programs for the coming year. The discussions are carried out according to normal parliamentary procedure. Don Richardson of Cooksville, is the premier and Tom Tanner of London, leader of the opposition.

Delegates consider the session of the parliament a holiday, but it is certainly not a restful one. The members are kept at work and at prayer from 7:30 a.m. the rising hour, to lights out at midnight. Most sittings are devoted to business, but in the absence of a normal sitting Sunday "government" and "opposition" leaders will be elected for the 43rd annual session, next year.

Members, as they are elected in their own constituencies decide themselves whether they will belong to the "government" or to the "opposition." Leadership of the parties are normally held for only one year at a time, but the same members may be returned as members as long as they can come within the age limitations.

There are 115 members of the parliament in Belleville now, and an additional 15 executives of the Council for Christian Education. Headquarters for the parliament is in the main building of Albert College, but sessions are held in the main auditorium of the Ontario School for the Deaf.

Saving every word, Ralph Inns, minister of social problems at the Ontario Older Boys' Parliament meeting in Belleville, keeps a tape recorder on his desk at the sittings. A 'teddy Bear holds the microphone for him. To the left, Craig Hall, minister of conferences and conventions, looks on.

TO USE CANNON

MONTREAL (CP) — McGill University's high - altitude research program has been set back about a year in the new year because of unusually rainy weather at the launch site in the Barbados, Dean D. L. McKeel of McGill's engineering faculty said Thursday. The program is to fire scientific rockets up to almost 100 miles into the air by using a Second World War 16-inch cannon.

Teachers Criticize Colleges For Not Providing Facilities To Meet Student Demands

HAMILTON (CP)—Ontario's universities have been criticized by the province's high school teachers for not providing facilities to meet student demands for admission.

Delegates at the Ontario Secondary School Teachers Federation convention were critical Thursday of universities for raising admission requirements, adding subjects as a selection device and establishing arbitrary dates of application that sometimes were set before final high school examination results were known.

A resolution passed by the federation said the universities had more time than secondary schools to prepare for the expanding student population.

The freshman class of 1960 will exceed the total enrolment of 32,000 in provincial universities this year, a resolution said. Total enrolment will increase to 100,000 by 1972, it said.

The federation said in a resolution it "believes that failure to accept a large number of persons suitably qualified who desire to enter institutions of further education is destructive of the morale of public education at other levels and deprives this province of the skills and advanced education which it requires for further development in all fields."

A proposal by Ontario high school teachers to control their professional affairs similar to doctors and lawyers, was shelved by the federation.

E. G. Jackson of Ottawa, who presented a resolution covering the proposal, said: "Only in that way can we attain the professional standing we so much desire."

The resolution would have "demanded" provincial legislation in the 1962-63 session to effect transfer to the federation responsibility for setting professional standards and administration of courses for teacher training.

One delegate suggested the word demand be changed to request. Another said professional status should be achieved in stages. Another said the federation would have difficulty in obtaining funds to finance a professional society.

Three Arraigned For Holdup of Shoe Factory

MONTREAL (CP)—Georges Bernier of St. Jerome, Que., and Michel Bonin of Montreal, both 22, and Sylvain Parrino, 17, of Montreal, were arraigned Thursday on charges of attempted murder and armed robbery at a Montreal shoe factory.

Preliminary hearing for all three was set for Jan. 3.

Defence lawyer Raymond Daoust said the 3d accused were arrested a week ago and the law stipulating that an accused must be arraigned within 24 hours is being "flagrantly ignored."

He did not ask for bail and the accused were ordered held until preliminary hearing.

The charges arose out of the attempted murders Dec. 21 of police constables Claude Lafortune and Jean-Guy Picard and the armed robbery of $322 at the Slater Shoe Company.

They were also charged with holding company official Eugene Giboau hostage in his office for more than three hours with a sub-machinegun.

Longshoremen, Owners Urged To Negotiate

NEW BORK (AP) — Labor Secretary W. Willard Wirtz has re-entered the crippling dock strike with an urgent plea to both longshoremen and ship owners to resume negotiations in the name of the national interest.

The International Longshoremen's Association, last only a new proposal by the ship owners can break the deadlock. He expressed doubt about an early end to the six-day strike along the east and gulf coasts.

These developments came as the strike saw its first flareup of violence—the shooting of a dockworker who crossed ILA picket lines in Galveston, Tex. The non - union worker was wounded in a foot.

The current strike actually started last October, went on for four days and was halted by a federal labor law injunction. It was resumed at the expiration of an 80-day "cooling off" period.

WILL HOLD MEETINGS

Wirtz, who has been out of the negotiations since the ILA and the ship owners held their last joint bargaining session before the strike started Sunday, scheduled separate meetings with each side.

The strike of 60,000 longshoremen has effectively closed all east and gulf coast ports to all but military, emergency and dangerous cargoes, which the union itself has exempted from the strike provisions.

The dispute between the ILA and the shippers centres around the size of work gangs, which the ship owners want cut to 17 men from 20. The longshoremen have refused this, saying they will not willingly eliminate jobs in the face of automation.

Dr. Frances Kelsey Heads Office to Pass on Requests To Test Drugs on Humans

WASHINGTON (AP) — Dr. Frances O. Kelsey, hailed as a national heroine for keeping thalidomide off the United States market, today was put at the head of a new U.S. office which will pass on requests to test new drugs on humans.

Her appointment as director of the investigational drug branch was part of a reorganization at the Food and Drug Administration's new drug division which was approved today by Welfare Secretary Anthony J. Celebrezze.

Dr. Kelsey, a native of Cobble Hill, B.C., said she knew the new job "was in the wind" and was pleased, but wasn't certain yet about the scope of her new duties.

In a statement Celebrezze said the reorganization of the drug division will permit the FDA to cope with its increased responsibilities in the new drug area.

GIVES AUTHORITY

As a backlash of the outcry over thalidomide — a sedative blamed for deformities of thousands of infants born around the world — Congress last October passed a law giving the FDA stronger authority over production and sales of prescription drugs.

To carry out the new law and to make administration changes the FDA proposed a rash of tighter regulations which after being discussed and criticized are now being redrafted.

An FDA spokesman said today that the regulations' dealing with the testing of drugs on humans will be issued "fairly soon."

Dr. Kelsey's investigational drug branch, according to the FDA announcement, "is being established to evaluate reports of proposed clinical tests of new drugs" which "manufacturers and others will submit in compliance with the investigational drug regulations.

"Frankly, I don't know what it (the new job) will consist of" until the regulations come out, Dr. Kelsey told a reporter.

TO CHECK REPORTS

But broadly her duties, for which she will receive $15,045 yearly, will be to check on reports of firms proposing to test new drugs on humans.

She will be operating under new powers which give the FDA authority, among other things, to:

Require "substantial evidence" that a drug is effective as well as safe before it may be approved for marketing.

Bar the marketing of a new drug until it has received the affirmative approval of the FDA, which also received additional time to pass on the safety and effectiveness of the drugs.

Require that new drugs be tested on animals before they are given to humans in clinical testing.

Dr. Kelsey, a no - nonsense, straight - talking woman, said she was happy with her new assignment because it was in a field to which she had devoted her career.

She became known as the heroine of the thalidomide episode by refusing to permit U.S. marketing of the German drug despite what she described as the "great pressure brought to bear."

For this, Dr. Kelsey, 48, received a special and distinguished government service from President Kennedy who told her that the hopes to be here for all your children" were riding with her decision to bar the drug.

CN's Deficit Is Expected To Be Down $19,000,000

MONTREAL (CP)—Canadian National Railways recorded "noteworthy achievements" including higher revenues in 1962, President Donald Gordon said today.

In a year-end review, Mr. Gordon credited aggressive sales policy, the introduction of new services and techniques, investment in improved equipment for the brighter business year.

"Our operating revenues showed marked improvement and CN's deficit is expected to be down some $19,000,000 from the 1961 figure," he said.

Freight revenues were up five per cent and passenger revenues showed the smallest decline—about two per cent—in many years, and revenues from Canadian National Telecommunications reached an all-time high, going up by 13 per cent to about $37,000,000. Hotel revenue was not significantly changed.

Total operating revenues are expected to show an increase of about four per cent and to exceed slightly the budgeted figure of $736,000,000, he said.

Nevertheless, Mr. Gordon said, the company faces "very real difficulties" largely because it is saddled with the heavy debt incurred when the government formed the Crown corporation by buying up private railways.

CNR's capital structure needed to be revised to remove the burden of fixed interest charges required "because of inadequate charges to operations in the years before current-day depreciation procedures were adopted," he said.

The recommendations of the MacPherson royal commission which urged greater freedom of action for railways should be adopted, Mr. Gordon said, "to enable CN to find its truly competitive place in the transportation market."

There were flat cars for hauling automobiles and trailers introduced during the year "and immediately available to regain business previously lost to competitors," Mr. Gordon said.

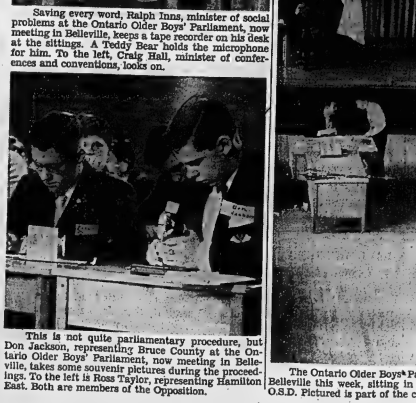
Labor settlements with non-operating and running trades unions had resulted in revision of work rules, many carried over from the days of steam trains, which would help create a more flexible and mobile work force.

Mr. Gordon said the current indications are that economic activity in Canada will increase in 1963, but keen competition probably would offset some of the benefits to the railways.

P. M. in for Questioning On His Early Disclosure

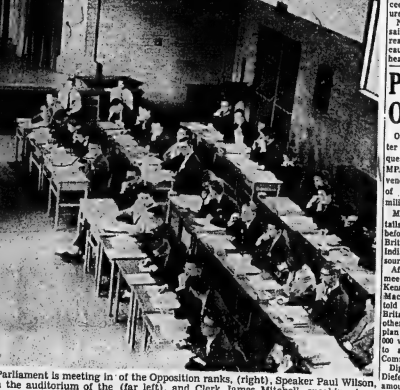
OTTAWA (CP)—Prime Minister Diefenbaker likely will be questioned closely by opposition MPs when Parliament reconvenes Jan. 21 on his disclosure of the amount of a Western military aid program for India.

Mr. Diefenbaker revealed details of the program at Nassau before the United States and Britain could officially inform India and Pakistan, diplomatic sources said here Thursday.



After attending a luncheon meeting Dec. 21 with President Kennedy and Prime Minister Macmillan, Mr. Diefenbaker told reporters that the U.S., Britain and Canada and some other Commonwealth countries plan to provide India with $120,000 worth of military equipment to aid its forces fighting Communist Chinese aggression.

Diplomatic sources said Mr. Diefenbaker revealed the amount of aid before British and the U.S. could inform India for reassure Pakistan that the Western weapons could be used only by India in its conflict with Red China.



Canadian authorities said Mr. Diefenbaker had not leaked any information deliberately or inadvertently but had merely mentioned the figure—$120,000,000—which had been fairly common knowledge among officials here, in Washington and London for a number of weeks. The figure was, however, the first public announcement of the projected amount of the aid program.

Pakistan earlier expressed alarm over Western military assistance to India on grounds that India might use it in its long-standing dispute with Pakistan over Kashmir.

There were some reports that the U.S. and Britain were upset by Mr. Diefenbaker's disclosure. However, in Washington American and British diplomatic sources said officials of their countries were not unduly perturbed by the premature disclosure.

This is not quite parliamentary procedure, but Don Jackson, representing Bruce County at the Ontario Older Boys' Parliament, now meeting in Belleville, takes some souvenir pictures during the proceedings. To the left is Ross Taylor, representing Hamilton East. Both are members of the Opposition.

Has Goal, 4 Assists In 9-3 Rout Of Bruins ★ ★ ★ ★ ★

Blues Big B Slides By Leafs Big M

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Stylish Andy Bathgate of New York has vaulted past Toronto's Frank Mahovlich in the National Hockey League scoring race.

Bathgate scored his 19th goal of the season and added four assists Thursday night as Rangers whipped last-place Boston Bruins 9-3 in the only scheduled NHL game.

Bathgate's five points gives him 37, one more than Mahovlich, who has 23 goals—the league high — and 14 assists. The big Toronto winger had taken a commanding four-point lead going into Thursday night's game.

Bathgate, a 30-year-old resident of Victoria in the off-season, now has scored a goal in six consecutive games. Mahovlich is currently on a five-straight-game scoring streak. The longest consecutive goal-scoring streak in league history is nine games, held jointly by Montreal's Maurice Richard and Bernie Geoffrion.

Rangers' nine goals is the highest total in one game by an NHL team this season. Rangers remain in sixth place, 10 points behind fourth-place Montreal and eight points ahead of Boston.

MAYES SCORES TWICE

Bathgate's linemates, Dean Prentice and Earl Ingarfield, each scored twice for the Rangers. Dave Balon also scored two goals, while Camille Henry and Bronco Horvath each tallied once.

Boston's scorers were Jerry Toppazzini, Jean-Guy Gendron and Johnny Bucyk.

Ranger goalie Gump Worsley played a big part in the lopsided win, making 37 saves compared with 20 for Boston rookie Ed Johnston.

Bathgate and Bucyk moved up into a three-way tie for first spot in the goals department with Gilles Tremblay of Montreal. The three have 15 goals each, seven less than Mahovlich and two less than second-place Parker MacDonald of Detroit.

The Bruins took an early lead on Toppazzini's goal for the first period.

But Balon tied it up and Rangers scored twice—Henry and Ingarfield being the marksmen—during Boston penalties to open up a 3-1 lead at the end of the first period.

Gendron tallied the Bruins to only a goal behind with a quick goal early in the second period. But Earl Ingarfield and Prentice scored before the period ended to make it 5-2, and Rangers scored four more times in the third period to Boston's once to pile up the win.

Bathgate and Prentice have been linemates since they played together 11 seasons ago on the Guelph Biltmores junior club that won the Memorial Cup. Ingarfield has been centering the line steadily since last season.

Discuss Sonny, Floyd Rematch

NEW YORK (AP) — A rematch for the heavyweight championship between world titleholder Sonny Liston and former champion Floyd Patterson looked today as a distinct possibility following a somewhat clandestine meeting between representatives of the two camps.

Promoter Tom Bolan, president of Championship Sports Incorporated, said Thursday he is discussing a rematch with Patterson and Jack Nilon, Liston's adviser.

A meeting was held Thursday night at Nilon's New York real estate office. Before the closed-door session, Nilon said Baltimore or Las Vegas are likely sites. The fight would be staged around March.

Returning Players Say

Quakers Lack Reserve Power

VANCOUVER (CP) — Two players on loan to Saskatoon Quakers during their exhibition hockey tour of Europe say the team does not have the reserve power to beat any of the top teams in Sweden, Czechoslovakia or Russia.

Coach Bobby Kromm of Trail Smoke Eaters quoted defencemen Harry Smith and Don Fletcher as saying, however, the Smokies could make it in the 1963 world hockey championship, could beat the Czech's national club.

The coach of the former world champion Smoke Eaters said in an interview on his Trail it cost the Quakers $2,500 to have the defencemen play two games in Czechoslovakia.

"It was a costly trip," he said, "but the Saskatoon management agreed to have the players home by Christmas."

Smith and Fletcher played against the Czech's national team and its B club. Quakers lost the first contest 4-1 but won the second 6-3 for their first win of the tour.

Kromm said his concern now is getting the Smokies in shape for the world championships in Stockholm which start March 5

Says Machen Condition Improved

NAPA, Calif. (AP) — Heavyweight boxer Eddie Machen confined in Napa State Hospital since he was found writing a suicide note two weeks ago, is reported greatly improved.

"He is getting along just fine, and responding extremely well to his treatment," a hospital spokesman said Thursday.

Machen and his wife, Charlotte, gave a Christmas Eve party with cake and ice cream for other patients in his ward.

Machen was found Dec. 12 in his car, parked alongside a highway, with a gun beside him.

A highway patrolman said Machen had fired three test shots at the vehicle and was writing a farewell note to his wife.

A doctor declined to say when Machen might be released.

Wings, Whip Royals

Flyers, Petes Tie 2-2

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Peterborough Petes and Niagara Falls Flyers failed to settle the battle over second place in the Ontario Hockey Association Provincial Junior A group Thursday night as they fought to a 2-2 tie before 3,000 Peterborough fans.

The result left Peterborough in second, two behind Montreal Canadiens and one ahead of Niagara Falls. Both Peterborough and Montreal have a game in hand over Niagara Falls.

Hamilton Red Wings edged closer to all three top teams with a convincing 6-2 win over the last-place Guelph Royals in front of 3,020 home town fans. Hamilton now trails Niagara by three points.

Niagara Falls could jump in front of Peterborough tonight and Hamilton moved to first place when Flyers meet Canadiens at home. Hamilton is at Guelph in the other game tonight.

Ron Hergott scored for Niagara Falls in the first period to give them a 1-0 lead. John Vanderburg tied it before the period ended. Peterborough went ahead in the third on a goal by Keith Wright, but Wayne Maxner tied the score at 19:34 of the final.

At Hamilton, left winger Earl Heiland scored twice for Red Wings, the defending Memorial Cup champions. Bryan Campbell, Bob Thomas, Pit Martin and Paul Henderson scored the other goals. For Guelph, Sandy Fitzpatrick and Trevor Kelly scored.

In OHA Metro Junior A play, Brampton defeated Toronto Knob Hill 6-1 at Brampton.

Don Westbrooke scored three times and had an assist and linemate Brian Bradley had two goals and two assists. Bob Jago scored the other Brampton goal. Paul Kelcher scored for Knob Hill.

Ortiz Told To Fight Or Else

MUSKEGON, Mich. (AP) — World lightweight champion Carlos Ortiz is reported to be under ultimatum to defend his crown against Kenny Lane of Muskegon by April 1 or vacate the title.

David I. Gudelsky, Michigan state athletic commissioner, said Thursday he received a telegram Dec. 20 to that effect from Charles Carson, World Boxing Association president.

Gudelsky said the champion was evading a bout with the veteran Muskegon southpaw, now ranked the No. 1 contender.

Lane was in a similar situation more than four years ago when his handlers claimed he was being ducked by Ortiz, a bout with then-champion Joe Brown. The two finally met at Houston, Tex., in 1958, with Lane losing a 15-round decision

FERRARESE RETIRES

APPLE VALLEY, Calif. (AP) Don Ferrarese, left-handed relief pitcher with St. Louis Cardinals, has announced his retirement from baseball. Ferrarese, 33, said Thursday he will go into private business. He has been in organized baseball 15 years.

Highest Price In History

Offers $7,100,000 For LA Rams

LOS ANGELES (AP)—Daniel F. Reeves has ended the battle of the millionaires for control of Los Angeles Rams with a bid of $7,100,000, the highest ever paid for a National Football League franchise.

Reeves, broker - sportsman and president of the Rams, outbid the triumvirate of Edwin W. Pauley, Fred Levy Jr. and Hal Seley at a private auction Thursday to gain sole control of the club, ending a seven-year feud.

Reeves will actually pay $4,800,000 because he already owns one-third of the club.

Reeves said he is taking over as general manager from Elroy Hirsch but will not decide on a head coach for a week or so.

In no sense, Reeves said, is interim coach Harland Svare, who took over when Bob Waterfield resigned in mid-season, out of consideration.

Reeves had warm words for Hirsch, mediating general manager the last two years of the owners' war. He said Hirsch can continue in the Ram organization as long as he chooses.

OWNERS QUARREL

The owners had differed bitterly over general policies of running the club.

Negotiations to settle the ownership fight had been under way since last fall. Reeves recently filed suit in court to have the partnership dissolved but this now will be dropped.

The previous high for an NFL franchise was almost $4,000,000 in the sale of Cleveland Browns several years ago.

The Rams had troubles on the field as well as among the owners. They finished the 1962 season in last place in the Western Division with one victory, a tie and 12 defeats.

Gananoque Juniors Tonight!

The Belleville Junior "B's" resume action after a lengthy holiday layoff when they entertain the Ganaoque Islanders in an OHA Eastern Junior League tilt at Memorial Arena tonight.

The Belleville squad has not seen action since December 19 but face a heavy schedule during the next week. After tonight's game here, the locals play in Trenton Sunday afternoon, in Picton next Thursday and are at home to Napanee one week from tonight.

Coach Don Barclay and his fellow workers are hoping that all the Mel Nick left a few wins in the Belleville players' stockings. The team has one win and one tie to show for nine games but the management is hopeful that the team will start an upward climb against the Islanders tonight.

Gananoque is a Junior "C" club but is said to be strong in all departments. The Islanders edged Belleville 4-3 in Gananoque in the only other meeting between the two clubs this year, so Belleville will be out to get those two points back at nine o'clock this evening.

Sunday's game is also a big one for Belleville since Trenton was just one point back of the locals in the league standings, prior to playing in Picton last night. Neither club wants that basement spot and both will be out to get ground to to pick up to catch the other team.

Schoolboy Curlers Beaten

TORONTO (CP)—John Ferguson of St. Thomas, Doug Murray of Galt and Don Clark of Agincourt, Ont., each won three games today to qualify for the semi-finals in the Parkway Curling Club's annual schoolboy bonspiel.

Ferguson's rink beat Ron Banfield of Trenton RCAF base 5-4, Gord Pinder of Belleville 9-2 and Rick Findlay of Toronto 6-5. Murray defeated John Perkins of Richmond Hill 10-1, Don McKechnie of London 7-5 and Brian Holmes of Parry Sound 13-1. The Clark rink beat Dan Dickerson of Brampton 5-4, Gord MacLeish of Lindsay 10-3 and Merv Macauley of Trenton RCAF 7-6.

The semi-finals in the annual Christmas holiday event for schoolboy curlers will be played today.

Sullivan To Coach Rangers?

...Would Become Harvey's Boss

NEW YORK (CP) — George (Red) Sullivan, fiery playing coach of Baltimore Clippers in the American Hockey League, is reported to be taking over the coaching job of the National League's New York Rangers from general manager Muzz Patrick.

In a radio interview Thursday night, Dave Anderson of the New York Journal-American said he learned the change will be made within the next 10 days.

Sullivan, 33, a native of Peterborough, Ont., was captain of the Rangers and left the team last season after five seasons as a New York centre.

Before joining the Rangers, Sullivan spent two years each with Chicago Black Hawks and Boston Bruins.

If the report is true, it will be an odd switch.

Spectators said Sullivan left the Rangers last year because Doug Harvey, a former Montreal Canadien defenceman, had been named playing-coach.

When Harvey was in Montreal he was involved in a skirmish with Sullivan in which the slight Ranger centre suffered a ruptured spleen.

However, Sullivan, playing coach of Kitchener - Waterloo Beavers in the Eastern Professional League last season, always contended Harvey's arrival at New York had nothing to do with him leaving. He said he bore no grudge against Harvey.

Harvey is still with the team but only as a player. Sullivan would become his coach.

The Rangers are mired in fifth place in the six-team NHL, 10 points behind the fourth-place Canadiens.

Quakers Lose Another

PARDUBICE, Czechoslovakia (CP) — The Tesla Pardubice hockey team edged Canada's touring Saskatoon Quakers 4-3 Thursday night in an exhibition game before more than 10,000 fans.

Tesla scored the winning goal with only 15 seconds remaining in the game, while each club was playing two men short. The Quakers had taken a 3-1 first-period lead but allowed Tesla to tie it 2-2 in the middle period.

The loss was the fourth in six games in Czechoslovakia for the Quakers of the Saskatchewan Senior Hockey League. Earlier they lost two games against the Swedish national team in Stockholm.

George Dolana, a member of the Czech national squad, scored the winning goal on a shot that caromed off one of the Saskatoon players into the net.

Canadian scorers were Don Smith, Bill Lindsay and Maurice Ottebre.

Saskatoon's next game is scheduled for Sunday in Pilsen.

Groom Says He Set Track Fire

BUFFALO, N.Y. (AP) — A groom who had an "irrepressible urge" to set fire to a state police seat, that he set a fire at Buffalo Raceway that killed 19 harness horses valued at $50,000 and cost the life of another groom.

George Briggs, 21, of Mansfield, Mass., a groom for about five years at New York state tracks, was charged with arson.

Robert Wimberly, 55, of Philadelphia, the other groom, suffered a fatal heart attack while leading horses from the fire. Police said he ignited straw with a cigarette lighter.

LONDON (AP) — British featherweight champion Howard Winstone defeated Teddy Rand of Los Angeles at the National Sporting Club Thursday night when referee Harry Gibbs stopped the fight in the third round of a scheduled eight-rounder. By GRAHAM COX

WINNIPEG (CP) — Bob Boucher, 19-year-old Manitoba speed skating champion, was under no illusions when he headed for Europe as a member of a Canadian team chosen for six-week tour.

He wasn't counting on any spectacular victories against Europe's best but he did think the Canadians would return as better skaters after tackling first-class competition.

The team left Dec. 22 and will spend two weeks training in Hamar, Norway, before setting out on a month of gruelling competition.

The squad was to have had nine members but Calgary's Larry Mason pulled out, saying he could no loo nger represent Canada and that it included skaters who should never have been considered.

Besides Boucher, the members are Canadian champion Rolf Olin of Calgary, who is also manager, Murray Gardiner and Joanne Fath of Edmonton, Mary Nichols and Eddie Rose of Red Deer, Alta., Steve Kovacs of Toronto and Jerry Koning of Calgary.

SEES POTENTIAL

"I'm really looking forward to this tough competition we'll get over there," Boucher said before leaving. "I think that Canadian skaters can be as good as any in the world. But what we're been lacking is real top-flight competition. For the reason alone I'm sure the trip will help us all."

Don McCannell, president of the Winnipeg Speed Skating Club, agreed, saying "hopin' Boucher and the other team members will be able to pick up valuable training tips and pass them on to our younger skaters."

The competition will not only test the skill of the Canadians, it will provide a basis for deciding whether Canada will enter a team in the world championships in Japan next year.

Boucher has been in the sport only four years after giving up hockey. An indication of how serious he is about it can be seen in his training.

Mild weather in the southern part of Manitoba meant there was little chance to practise on ice. So he bicycled 25 miles a day and did leg exercises with weights.

"Cycling is as close to speed skating as any other exercise," he said. "Running doesn't help much because it only tightens your calf muscles. I need much in speed skating anyhow."

The Canadian Physical Fitness Council granted the Canadian Speed Skating Association $2,000 to help pay for the trip. But each of the team members had to push up $450 for expenses.

TO DISCUSS FINANCES

NEW YORK (AP)—Tommy Richardson, president of the expanded international League, has called a meeting of league representatives in New York Jan. 8 to discuss a "number of major items," including shaky league financial assistance for increased transportation costs. Richardson said Thursday each team was advised of the meeting and all major league teams which have interests in the league also were invited. The increased travel expenses involved with league expansion to 10 teams is one of the major items, Richardson said. The league recently expanded to include Indianapolis and Little Rock.

Hull Ottawa Defeats Red Wings

OTTAWA (CP)—Hull-Ottawa Canadiens of the Eastern Professional Hockey League trimmed Detroit Red Wings of the National Hockey League 6-3 before a capacity crowd of 8,724 fans here Thursday night.

Rookies Norm Beaudin, Claude Larose and Bill McCreary accounted for four of the Habs' goals with Larose scoring two. Keith McCreary and Bob Courcy added Hull-Ottawa's other markers.

Detroit scorers were Norm Ullman and Gordie Howe. Detroit scored their only two goals in the first period.

The Detroit team which has played three games in successive nights seemed to tire in the third period and could not overcome the aggressive Canadiens.

DETROIT (AP) — Goalie Terry Sawchuk and two of his Red Wings teammates were on the injured list today, following last Wednesday's 5-4 loss to the Maple Leafs at Toronto.

Sawchuk's condition was the most serious, as Red Wing headquarters reported an Ottawa physician had diagnosed his condition as a bowel obstruction and suggested hospital treatment.

The Wings played an exhibition game Thursday night with the Ottawa-Hull Canadiens in Ottawa, won 6-2 by Hull-Ottawa.

Others on the Red Wings injured list are defenceman Val Fonteyne, who had 13 stitches taken in his head after a bump in the Toronto game, and defenceman Marcel Pronovost, who pulled a stomach muscle.

Fonteyne will miss Saturday night's National Hockey League game at Montreal, while Pronovost is a doubtful starter.

Some Quebec Minor Leagues Quit CAHA

MONTREAL (CP)—At least half the minor league teams in Quebec province have dropped out of the Canadian Amateur Hockey Association, it was learned Thursday night.

The development is the apparent result of discord arising from a player-registration fee innovated by the national body governing all but professional hockey.

In effect the charge is to cover a $2-issue subscription to Hockey Canada, the CAHA's new monthly publication edited by Lan Taylor of Kitchener.

The magazine is sent to registered players by mail.

A reliable source said the program has run into vehement opposition in Quebec province and it appears CAHA registration has fallen off this season by "at least 50 per cent."

Last season the CAHA-affiliated Quebec Minor Hockey Association had 17,216 players registered from mosquito to juvenile leagues — covering youngsters 18 and under.

The informant said league conveners complained this season about having to act as "magazine salesmen" and team organizers — particularly in French-speaking areas—were flatly against it.

Although a bilingual edition of the magazine is published, it was felt the French-language content was insufficient.

In one Montreal district, suburban St. Laurent, where 60 teams were registered in 1961-62, it was learned only 20 or so registered this season.

The fee is 25 cents for each player in bantam, midget and juvenile ranks, with $1 for coaches and trainers. At the junior level it's 50 cents and for intermediates and seniors $1.

In the mosquito and peewee age-bracket, the fee is optional.

Donald MacDonald, secretary registrar of the Quebec association, said the report of a wholesale withdrawal is way out of line.

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — Chuck McKinley and Frank Froehling III, the United States' two top-ranked amateur tennis players, have been seeded first and second in the Sugar Bowl tennis tournament starting today. The Big Seven

BY THE CANADIAN PRESS

Winnipeg-born Andy Bathgate took over the National Hockey League's individual scoring leadership from Toronto ace Frank Mahovlich Thursday night, scoring one goal and assisting on four others as New York overwhelmed Boston Bruins 9-3.

The five-point gain gives the Ranger right winger a total of 37, one more than Mahovlich. It also moves Bathgate into a tie with Detroit's Alex Delvecchio for most assists in the NHL this season, 22.

Mahovlich, idle Thursday, leads in goals scored with 22.

Another big gain was chalked up by New York's Den Prentice, who registered two goals and two assists to move from an eighth-place tie into a tie with Boston's Johnny Bucyk for third.

Both Prentice and Bucyk, who netted one goal Thursday, have 32-point totals but Bucyk is ranked ahead since he has scored more goals—15 to the New Yorker's 11.

Tie for fifth spot with 31 are three players—Chicago's Stan Mikita, Detroit's Gordie Howe and Boston's Murray Oliver. Oliver picked one assist in the only NHL game Thursday to make the list.

The leaders:

	G.	A.	Pts.
Bathgate, New York	15	22	37
Mahovlich, Toronto	22	14	36
Bucyk, Boston	15	17	32

Western Hockey

EDMONTON (CP) — Left winger Jack McIntyre scored four goals, three of them on breakaways, to pace Edmonton Flyers to an 8-4 victory over Calgary Stampeders in a wide open Western Hockey League game Thursday night.

A crowd of only 1,450 braved a heavy snowstorm to watch the game.

The win boosted Flyers nine points ahead of Calgary in the race for third and last playoff berth in the WHL's Northern Division but Stampeders have four games in hand.

Dennis Rathwell, Don Chin, Ray Kinasewich and Doug Messler scored the other Edmonton goals. McIntyre, 32-year-old veteran of three National League clubs, picked up an assist on Rathwell's goal.

Calgary's scoring was done by George McAvoy, Gord Vashpava, Lou Jankowski and Eric Sutcliffe.

'Ring' Selections

Tiger, Fighter of Year

NEW YORK (AP) — Ring Magazine, in its annual review released Thursday, named Nigeria's Dick Tiger, the world middleweight champion, its Fighter of the Year.

The boxing magazine picked Sonny Liston's dethronement of heavyweight defender Floyd Patterson in two minutes, six seconds, as the round of the year.

Its selection for the fight of the year was the action-packed 10-rounder between middleweight contenders Henry Hank of Detroit and Joey Giardello of Philadelphia at Philadelphia Jan. 30. Giardello won a disputed split decision.

Earlier this month Tiger, who had battered the middleweight crown from Gene Fullmer of West Jordan, Utah, Oct. 22, was named Fighter of the Year and winner of the Edward J. Neil Trophy by the Boxing Writers Association.

Ring, in the February dated issue, also announced its annual rankings.

Despite its hailing of Tiger as Fighter of the Year, Ring continued to recognize Paul Pender of Brookline, Mass., as world champion. Pender was stripped of his title by the New York State Athletic Commission for failure to defend it within six months. Pender has taken court action to force the commission to restore the title.

One Canadian is mentioned in the rankings—Bob Cleroux of Montreal, 10th in the heavyweight division.

SEEKS 1972 OLYMPICS

PORTLAND, Ore. (AP) — Howard A. Hobson, a long-time figure in American sports, was named Thursday chairman of a committee aimed at bringing the 1972 Olympic games to Portland. The bid, by a group of businessmen, is based on the assumption that the 1968 games will be held other than in the United States, leaving 1972 open for this country.

Fraser, Laver Close Careers

Aussies Sweep Cup Series 5-0

By WILL GRIMSLEY

BRISBANE, Australia (AP)—Neale Fraser and Rod Laver, two of the latest in Australia's long line of tennis champions, closed out their Davis Cup careers with victories today which gave Australia a 5-0 sweep over Mexico in the 1962 challenge round.

Fraser, 29, limping and leg weary, put on a tremendous exhibition for a 3-6, 11-9, 6-4, 3-6, 6-4, triumph over Mexico's No. 1 ace, Rafael Osuna, in a marathon match which lasted two hours, 45 minutes.

The handsome Melbourne lefthander, who won the Wimbledon crown in 1960 and the United States championship in 1959 and 1960, said today's battle was the swan song of his long competitive career.

"I have been travelling around the world playing tennis for 10 years," he said. "I have had it."

Then Laver, winner of every major tournament during the last year in a grand slam matching that of Don Budge in 1938, turned back talented Antonio Palafox 6-1, 4-6, 6-4, 8-6.

With the same deft left hand which carried him to world pinnacle in amateur tennis, Laver is expected to sign a $100,000 contract Saturday for a professional career.

He will begin his tour against Lew Hoad in Sydney, Australia, Jan. 5.

A crowd of 5,000 at Milton Courts—chased to cover once by a 23-minute shower—cheered the Mexicans in their attempt to salvage something from the one-sided series but Fraser and Laver were too good.

Laver played in patches and was two players on the court. At times he was brilliantly flicking shots down the line and powering winners into corners with rifle accuracy. Then he would lose concentration and lapse into simple errors which proved costly.

Fourth To Reach Six Figures

Willie May Get $100,000

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — There is evidence that Willie Mays, the National League's 1962 home run leader with 49, will become baseball's fourth $100,000-a-year player next season.

Charles Feeney, San Francisco Giants vice-president, said Thursday contracts have not been sent out yet to Mays or any other players on the National League's 1962 pennant winning club.

But he said:

"The club had a good year and obviously most of the players are in for raises next year."

Mays, the Giants' star centre fielder, drove in 141 runs, the best RBI total of his career. He batted .304, his lowest since 1956, but his 49 home runs included one four-bagger that forced a pennant playoff with Los Angeles Dodgers.

Mays is reported to have been paid $90,000 for last season ending in a taut World Series loss to New York Yankees, four games to three.

Ted Williams of Boston Red Sox and Joe DiMaggio of New York Yankees, both retired, and Stan Musial of St. Louis Cardinals are the three players who have been paid $100,000 a season.

This Day In Sports

Picton Jrs. Thump Trenton 15-1

PICTON (Special) — Picton Merchants ran scoring wild against the cellar-dwelling Trenton club here last night and chalked up a 15-1 OHA Eastern Junior League victory.

It was a Picton night all the way as the Merchants led 5-0 at the end of the first and 7-1 before whipping home eight unanswered goals in the third. Picton outshot Trenton 54-21 and held a 30-5 margin in the third period alone.

Jefferies ruined Branscombe's shutout bid after Picton had built a 7-0 lead at 17.36 of the second period.

Picton got a 20-point scoring performance from the line of Larry "Pocket" Pero, Harold Haddock and Gary Haesnel. Pero scored four goals and helped on three more, Haesnel had three goals and three assists and Haddock scored once and drew six assists.

Don McNeil also had a "hat trick" for the Merchants, plus one assist, while Carl Stacey scored two goals and helped on three others. Bob Brown, with a goal and two assists, and Gary Sainsbury, with one of each, "Dusty" Rhodes and Lavender, with an assist apiece, rounded out the attack.

Picton drew eight penalties, including one major, while Trenton had five minors and a major.

Unofficial Moral Boosters In Every Business Office

By HAL BOYLE

NEW YORK (AP) — No business office today is complete without its unofficial morale boosters.

In addition to its paid cheerleaders, every office also has its quota of self-appointed joy spreaders. They take upon themselves the task of convincing the rest of the herd that life can still be wondrous—even if a fellow does have to work every day for a living.

Perhaps the following characters of this ilk are familiar in your own office:

Nostalgic Ned — He tries to make everyone feel grateful by telling how much worse things used to be in the old days.

Flannel-mouth Fred — He spends most of his time going around indiscriminately spreading all the other employees on the back and saying: "You're doing a grand job." Secretly, he hopes this will bring him to the eye of management as a man with executive talent.

Rainbow-top Rosalee — The executive secretary, a glamor gal with a middle-aged spread, fondly believes she gives every man in the place a thrill by tinting her hair a different exciting color every month.

Bankrupt Ben —This guy is a reverse philanthropist. "Lend me $50," he wheedles. If you do, he feels that he has benefited you by giving you a fresh interest in living and a new hope—the wild hope that somehow, some day, he may pay you back.

Woeful Wilbert — "Gee, I wish I was on top of my job the way you are," he sighs seriously to each and all. Wilbert, who was born with 12 thumbs, is always in trouble. But he makes all the other employees—who were born with only 11 thumbs—feel like unrecognized geniuses.

The great himself — The boss has his own inimitable way of giving everybody a shot in the arm. Along about this time of year he posts a notice on the bulletin board saying:

"If business keeps up like this, we probably won't lay off half the staff after Christmas—we'll lay off two-thirds."

By GERRY LOUGHEED

TORONTO (CP) — National Hockey League fans received a jolt back in 1955 when coach Dick Irvin of the mighty Montreal Canadiens switched to a similar post with the Chicago Black Hawks.

Those were rough days for the Black Hawks. They had finished out of the Stanley Cup playoffs in eight of the previous nine seasons. In both the 1953-54 season and the following one, they had finished a distant last.

Why would Irvin give up a successful career with the Canadiens to take over the pathetic Chicago club?

Most fans figured it was a matter of money and they were partly right. Irvin did receive a healthy boost in salary.

SELKE TELLS WHY

But there was another side to Irvin's surprise departure from Montreal. The manager of the Canadiens, Frank Selke, tells about it in his recently-published book, Behind the Checkerboard (McClelland and Stewart Limited).

It was Irvin's goading of the volatile Canadiens star, Maurice (Rocket) Richard, that ended his coaching days at Montreal.

One night in Toronto, Richard engaged in a fight with Bob Bailey of the Maple Leafs. Referee Red Storey ordered Richard to the dressing room. As the Rocket was leaving the ice Irvin leaned over and said something to him. Richard immediately returned to the fight with Bailey and also became involved with the referee.

ANGRY RICHARD

Near the end of the season, Montreal was losing to the Boston Bruins and Irvin tried to rouse his players with a lecture between periods.

The pep talk was aimed mainly at captain Butch Bouchard. Selke writes that Richard who responded to the whip. He fairly sizzled with rage."

Hal Laycoe of the Bruins, "probably by accident," cut Richard for eight stitches in the scalp. "Partially stunned and certainly boiling over, Richard went after Laycoe who beat a hasty retreat."

The Rocket then scuffled with the linesmen and the outburst resulted in him being suspended for the balance of the season by the league president, Clarence Campbell.

FATEFUL RIOT

Montreal's next game was against the Detroit Red Wings—the fateful St. Patrick's night of 1955 when a riot, touched off by Campbell's suspension of the idolized Richard, occurred at Montreal Forum.

After the riot, "Dick Irvin made the very comment I've seen the Rocket fill this place but this is the first time I've seen him empty it."

"When Dick launched into another tirade at President Campbell after we lost our final game that season, I had made up my mind."

"You can't coach this team any longer," Selke told Irvin. "It's all very well to keep a team full of fight but there's a limit to that, too. Now, Dick, you can stay with us or you can go to Chicago . . . but if you stay with us, you can't coach."

So ended Irvin's career with the Canadiens. He took over at Chicago the next season—the Hawks finished last again—and he died the following year of cancer.

Robert Merrill Gets Lift By Appearance on Show

By CYNTHIA LOWRY

NEW YORK (AP)—The career of Robert Merrill, the Brooklyn - born baritone, has taken a new twist since the night several years ago, he first sat down, crossed his knees comfortably and, prodded gently up by Jack Paar, started reminiscing.

Merrill was then no stranger to broadcasting. He had been singing in front of microphones since his teens. He once had a radio show of his own. He has become a Metropolitan Opera star, a recording star and a concert star.

"But after the exposure on the old Tonight Show, he continued, "People started hailing me on the street, addressing me as 'Bob' and treating me like an old friend.

"I think that being recognized as a person has resulted in my being more effective because I can introduce television friends particularly young people—to good music."

Merrill, a likeable, lively fellow helped pay for his voice training at one point by singing in a burlesque house.

Merrill will be soloist on Sunday night's version of Firestone program on ABC, singing Pagliacci and Oscar Straus.

Research Council Finds Way To Take Drip Out of Rinks

By JOHN E. BIRD

OTTAWA (CP)—The National Research Council has found ways of taking the drip out of curling rinks.

Methods of controlling condensation are outlined in a new building digest issued by the NRC's division of building research which undertook a study of the problem because of the growing popularity of curling in Canada.

Dripping arises from the melting of frost that has accumulated on the underside of the rink roof or ceiling. The water falls to the ice sheets where it refreezes to form bumps.

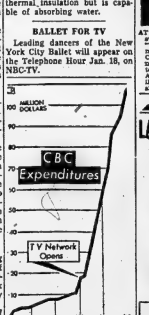
Under normal weather conditions on the Prairies the problem occurs only in the spring. But in areas with more moderate or variable winters, dripping may occur frequently.

Accumulation of frost on the ceiling is the result of the condensation of moisture from flooding and scrubbing operations—the sprinkling of fine droplets of water on the ice to give it a polished surface. Condensation of moisture from curlers, spectators and from the ice surface itself adds to the problem.

HEAT CAN HELP

The division says dripping may be solved in a number of ways, depending on the characteristics of a particular rink and the money available to pay for control measures.

These include removal of moisture by ventilation or dehumidification, elevation of ceiling temperatures, and control of dripping by absorption.



Introduction of heat into the curling rink is described as probably the most generally applicable and effective condensation control, especially in the colder areas of Canada.

In combination with heat, a roof deck or ceiling with some thermal insulation value should be used for heat economy and to provide maximum ceiling temperatures.

Ceiling finishes with water-absorbing characteristics offer considerable advantages over finishes that are incapable of taking up moisture. Wood roof decking is an ideal ceiling finish since it not only provides thermal insulation but is capable of absorbing water.

HOLD COSTS — The government's austerity program brought a $5,000,000 cut in the CBC's estimated 1962-63 expenditure budget. The estimate was held to $110,000,000, still a record and almost six times higher than when the corporation started television operations in 1952. It compares with costs of $107,611,154 in the fiscal year ended March 31, 1962. (CP Newsmap).

1962 Was Good Year For Going to Movies

By BOB THOMAS

HOLLYWOOD (AP)—It was a good year for going to the movies, even if 1962 didn't produce any film that seemed to be an enduring classic.

The general run of Hollywood film provided entertainment of a wide variety. There was less dwelling on the sordid, although this year did bring Lolita and A Walk on the Wild Side. Movie makers found that sex and shock didn't necessarily guarantee box office.

Here are the dozen American made movies that seemed the most meritorious of 1962:

1. Lawrence of Arabia. Too long and sometimes diffuse, it was nevertheless a monumental achievement in the use of the film medium.

2. To Kill a Mockingbird. A modest lesson in human dignity, it got closer to the heart than any recent movie.

3. Long Day's Journey Into Night. Terrifically acted, this filmed stage play was a potent and demanding experience.

4. Billy Budd. An effective parable of good versus evil, it was notable for the angelic performance of Terence Stamp.

5. The Longest Day. Almost as good as the original stage production.

6. Miracle Worker. A beautifully acted duet between Anne Bancroft and Patty Duke.

7. Music Man. A rich reproduced, it was still a miraculous musical, thanks in large part to the driving performance of Robert Preston.

8. Mutiny on the Bounty. It made up in beauty and size for what it lacked in dramatic impact.

9. Freud. A remarkable intellectual experience, it was a brave and successful attempt at plumbing the hidden reaches of the mind.

10. Counterfeit Traitor. Here was high adventure at its best, a drama that moved fast yet managed to be real.

11. Manchurian Candidate. Its audacious science - fiction plot was not to be taken seriously; it could be enjoyed as a suspense film starring with the best of Hitchcock.

12. Birdman of Alcatraz. It managed to tell a difficult theme and turn it into engrossing drama.

Air Transport Command Holds Varied Operations During Record Year 1962

RCAF Release

When a Yukon turboprop transport of 437 "Husky" Squadron completed the longest non-stop flight in RCAF history during the closing days of 1961, it served as a portent of Air Transport Command's activities in 1962.

With the new year, the Yukon went into operational use on a scheduled basis when it began regular passenger and cargo flights to Europe in support of the Canadian Armed Forces in Europe.

The RCAF's No. 1 Fighter Wing at Marville, France, serves as the European terminus for 437 Squadron's transAtlantic flights, and the squadron completes three return flights a week.

Once a month a Yukon stages through the United Nations airfield at Pisa, Italy, to Leopoldville in the Congo.

SUPPORT ARMY EXERCISES

The three major exercises of 1962 were Cut, Great Bear, and Exsor I. During these three exercises, ATC aircraft airdropped 5,442 paratroopers, 20,000 pounds of equipment, airlifted 2,045 troops and ale landed more than 500,000 pounds of material.

Canadian Army paratroopers are also dropped from RCAF Air Transport Command aircraft on "continuation" training. During 1962, over 3,500 army paratroopers were airdropped from ATC aircraft.

CANSO CEREMONY

On April 18th at a colorful ceremony at RCAF Station Downsview, the last Canso amphibian of the RCAF flew into retirement. On hand for the ceremony were former members of the RCAF flew boat reconnaissance Squadron which, during World War II, was awarded 13 Distinguished Flying Crosses, one Air Force Cross, three Distinguished Flying Medals and 21 Mentions-in-Despatches and, most important, the first Victoria Cross awarded to the RCAF during World War II.

During post-war years, the Canso was used in the RCAF primarily in a search and rescue role. Today, the CSR110 Albatross triphibian has taken over from the Canso at Search and Rescue units from coast to coast.

On June 4th and 5th, the Yukon was in the news once again. A 437 "Husky" Squadron Yukon flew non-stop 5,640 statute miles from Vancouver, covering all ten Provinces and the two Territories of the Dominion before landing with a load of cargo and passengers at Rome Air Base, Frosinone. Captain of the aircraft was Squadron Leader C. R. "Bob" Simmons of Amherst, N.S., and Moncton, N.B. Operations Commander was Group Captain D. J. Williams.

In contrast with the 14½ hour Yukon air journey, the first RCAF cross-Canada flight took place in 1920 when six DH9 biplanes, flying in relays, took 45 flying hours to cross the Dominion from Halifax to Vancouver.

RECORDS ESTABLISHED

Highlight of Air Force Day at RCAF Stn. Trenton, Ont., in late June was the long distance endurance record established by a 437 Squadron Yukon.

From Ottawa the Yukon flew the 3,000 miles and returned south to land at North Bay, Ont. Complete airborne flight time was 23 hours and 15 minutes — a world record for turboprop transports.

In August, 435 "Chinthe" Squadron established a new record for RCAF airlifts when two Hercules turboprop transports of that Squadron airlifted three and three-quarter stillions pounds of cargo in 113 flights from Thule Air Force Base, Greenland, Alert near the North Pole. The aircraft made a flight every three hours for two weeks working with only one break — a twelve-hour delay when high winds grounded all aircraft at Thule.

Two Hercules transports airlifted two amphibious Otters and their crews to Biak, West New Guinea, from Trenton via California, Honolulu and Wake Island. The Otters will operate as part of the United Nations force sent in that troubled land until early 1963 when the UN force is scheduled to disband.

The Otter force has since been re-supplied by another two Hercules which made the trans-Pacific run as part of the annual re-supply of the Canadian Contingent to the International Truce Supervisory Commission in Saigon, Indo-China, in early December.

In the Middle East, men of Air Transport Command serving with 115 Air Transport Unit attached to the United Nations Emergency Force guarding the Egyptian-Israeli frontier look forward to the weekly visits of the ageless North Star transports.

In the Congo, Canadian servicemen with the United Nations are supported by 437 Squadron Yukons.

Both the Yukons and the North Stars operate from Pisa, Italy, the Italian Air Force base which serves as the European terminus for United Nations support flights.

While on the subject of North Stars, it is only fitting to mention the disbandment of 426 "Thunderbird" Squadron on August 31st.

From the Yukon Territory to Santiago, Chile, from the Azores to Alsace, and from Honolulu to Hong Kong, the Roundel of the RCAF has become familiar to all with the 426 Squadron North Star.

The disbandment of the "Thunderbirds" at this date vividly portrays the end of an era, the great turboprop powered aircraft with greater speed and load-carrying capacity have relieved the slower piston-engined aircraft of most Air Transport Command operations.

On September 4th a Yukon, piloted by Squadron Leader R. D. Rusch, flew from B.C. carrying medical supplies, blankets, clothing and Red Cross personnel and supplies, left Walton Airport near Toronto for Tehran, Iran. The 6,500-mile journey to the earthquake ravaged country took 21 hours.

The load-carrying capability of the Boeing Bomber type of 435 "Chinthe" Squadron was put to the test once again on September 17th when a RCAF CF-104 Starfighters to Europe ferry flight.

The single-engine, supersonic jet fighters were dismantled and packed into the cargo hold of the Hercules for the trans-Atlantic flight, which started at the Canadair plant at Cartierville, P.Q., and ended at No. 3 Fighter Wing, Zweibrucken, Germany. The operation could be completed in 1963—in the meantime, the Hercules were busy on other important operations as well.

Eighty simulated patients, both ambulatory and stretcher, were loaded aboard a 437 Squadron Yukon at Trenton on October 13th for a return trip flight to Edmonton.

The exercise, designed to test the Yukon in the role of an "air ambulance," was under the direction of Medical Officer Flight Lieutenant S. A. Khan of ATC Headquarters. Members of the Royal Canadian Navy accompanied the flight as observers.

GOLDEN HAWKS

The new addition to the ATC fold occurred on November 8th when the famed Golden Hawks left their new home at the RCAF Station Trenton, Ont. Previously stationed at Summerside, N.B., during the winter months, the Hawks were moved to Trenton to put them under "striking" distance of the major number of towns and cities where they put on their renowned aerobatic demonstrations in the summer.

The new base of operations also aided the men of the flying team to make use of the overhaul and repair facilities of No. 2 Repair Depot, also at Trenton.

Although operationally under the control of Air Transport Command, the Golden Hawks are provided with administration and supply support by Air Transport Command.

Everything from kit boxes to kiddies was airlifted by 437 "Husky" Squadron Yukons from Trenton, Ont., to Dusseldorf, Germany, in the rotation of the Canadian Infantry Brigade Group in Europe. The First Battalion of the Royal Canadian Regiment and dependents replaced their comparison in the Canadian Guards at Soest, Germany. The rotation began on November 20th and will be completed in February 1963.

Marking "finis" to the year's activities of Air Transport Command was Operation Santa Claus. The annual re-supply and Christmas mail to remote Arctic outposts was carried out by one C130B Hercules of 435 "Chinthe" Squadron. Both the Central and Eastern Arctic were re-supplied by the one aircraft. In past year, Operation Santa Claus involved the use of two C119 Flying Boxcars.

When Will Next Federal Election Be Called and What Will Be Outcome Is Question

By JAMES NELSON

OTTAWA (CP)—A year that experienced political confidence, indecision and then confusion is ending on a note of suspense.

The big questions on the threshold of 1963 were: When will the next federal general election come? What will be its outcome?

The year 1962 started with the Progressive Conservative government, re-elected in 1958 with the biggest parliamentary majority in Canadian history, confident that it could stem the resurgence of opposition parties that gave New Democrats and Social Crediters were equally confident.

But the result of the June 18 election was indecision on the part of the voters. They elected a minority government in five years, the Conservatives squeaking back into office after skidding from 208 of the Commons' 265 seats at dissolution.

The opposition parties, by joining forces in the new Parliament that opened in late September, could have defeated the government at any time. But the Liberals, not wanting themselves as well as with the administration, and the government survived early tests of confidence.

NO PROVINCIAL UPSETS

The interplay of party politics has been the order now of the year, producing an air of confusion heightened by rumor and speculation.

One big question remained unanswered: What, if anything, has happened since June to change voters' sympathies in March, 1963, the earliest that another election could be held?

The provincial general elections proved little. Liberal governments in Quebec and Newfoundland, Conservative governments in Prince Edward Island and Manitoba were unemotionally re-elected.

Prime Minister Diefenbaker is reported holding himself in readiness to decide whether to seek a stronger mandate quickly or to hide his time.

The government can call an election at any time. Many observers think Mr. Diefenbaker will do so before the Conservatives are unable to defeat him, though he said in early December that the government is not thinking or thought of an immediate election.

The Liberals, who doubled after 17 years as CCF premiers their Commons representation in June and believe their popularity is still growing, have been chafing for an early election. But their efforts to this end in Parliament have been frustrated so far by Social Credit voting support of the government.

Liberal Leader Pearson says that in the next campaign his party will concentrate on the positive features of its program and not, as was the case last summer, on the negative features of the government's record.

The Social Credit party, back in the new Parliament after losing shut out at the 1958 election, has been showing growing impatience with the government.

Its leaders, newcomer Robert Thompson and Real Caouette, have been embroiled in Parliament that his election campaign indicated he might be seeking the co-operation of Conservatives in forming a government after the June election, a surprise and disappointment to many who thought the marriage of the old CCF party with organized labor would increase its appeal.

NDP Leader T. C. Douglas defeated in Regina City in June, won an October by-election in the British Columbia constituency of Burnaby-Coquitlam to return to the Commons planning generally is Wallace McCutcheon, former right-hand man of Toronto industrialist E. P. Taylor. Mr. McCutcheon gave up more than a score of directorships to become a senator and minister without portfolio in August.

Party standing in the Commons as the year ended was: Conservative 116, Liberal 99, Social Credit 30, NDP 19, Vacant 1, Total 265 The vacancy was in St. John's West, where the Liberal victory of June was voided by the courts.

Lesage Offers Fixed Prices For Power Shares

Quebec Premier Ready To Buy Private Firms

QUEBEC (CP)—Premier Lesage has gone over the heads of company directors to issue an offer to buy the shares of 11 private power firms already earmarked for expropriation.

To avoid speculation he made the surprise announcement Friday night after all stock markets in Canada had closed. Total cost of the expropriation for which his government received a mandate in the November general election—was estimated at $604,000,000.

The purpose in making the offers now, he said, was "to avoid the long delays that any other method of settlement would inevitably entail," he said.

"The government is satisfied that the prices offered are fair and reasonable both to the shareholders and to the citizens of the province."

He made the statement in the cabinet meeting room, surrounded by his cabinet colleagues and members of the Quebec-Hydro Electric Commission, Crown-owned corporation that will take over the companies.

Letters formally making the offer to shareholders will go out "within a few weeks."

DIRECTORS NOT TOLD

Mr. Lesage said that directors of the companies involved had not been advised of the statement, "for security reasons mainly."

"In an offer of this magnitude, involving 4 many companies, it would have been obviously impossible to keep the proposed terms secret. It would also have given a possible advantage to the directors over the shoulders as a whole."

His indication that the announcement was unexpected was the action of shares of companies listed on the stock market scant hours before.

Shares of the largest firm concerned, Shawinigan Water and Power Company—closed on the Montreal Stock Exchange at 25¾, up 2¾ points from Thursday. Mr. Lesage said Shawinigan shareholders would be offered $30 per share.

He termed the offers "firm and definite."

Asked what would happen if he indicated they would simply hand control over through legislation to be introduced at the legislature session beginning Jan.

Father of Five Burned to Death At Sarnia

SARNIA (CP)—A 44-year-old father of five was burned to death within seconds Friday when a sheet of intense flame belched 70 feet from a petroleum purifying plant he and four others were cleaning.

Four others were burned, one of them seriously.

His clothes blazing, Wilber G. Gilmour of Sarnia leaped 15 feet from a blazing platform to ground level. Ambulance men said he was dead before he hit the ground.

The flames enveloped the workmen at the huge Imperial Oil Limited refinery here, sending Cameron Bayne, 27, of Sarnia, to hospital with severe facial burns. His condition was described by hospital officials as fair.

Treated for burns at the refinery's emergency medical centre were Carmen Taylor, 32, of Sarnia; Melvin Lapish, 43, of nearby Courtright, and Clarence Kilmer, 46, of nearby Wyoming. They were sent home after treatment.

Cause of the fire is not yet known.

It broke out while the crew of five was cleaning a clay plant used for purifying petroleum products.

Company officials say they believe some of the liquid leaked from the plant and somehow ignited. They said the liquid was present despite all normal precautions.

SUE SHIP LINE

LOS ANGELES, Calif. (AP)—The U.S. government is suing owners of the British luxury liner Oriana for $350,000, charging their ship was to blame when it collided with the U.S. aircraft carrier Kearsarge. The charge was contained in the government's answer to a $450,000 damage suit filed by the Orient Steam Navigation Company Limited, owners of the Oriana.

Fidel Castro, Man of Many Moods, Retains Role of Hero

The following dispatch was written by Joe McGowan Jr. of The Associated Press who represented U.S. news services on the voyage to Cuba of the American freighter African Pilot.

MIAMI, Fla. (AP)—Dr. Fidel Castro Ruiz is a man of immense personal magnetism, quickly changing moods and an almost sincere dedication to improve the lot of "el pueblo," his people.

THE WEATHER

WEATHER

Synopsis: Cold arctic air has pushed across the Prairies into Northern Ontario and northern Prairie states. The cold air will sweep across Northern Ontario this morning and move into the southern regions this afternoon. Precipitation will end with the arrival of the colder air except in areas in the lee of open water where snowflurries and occasional snowsqualls for forecast for tonight and early Sunday.

He demonstrated all of the above to four Americans when he took them on a whirlwind tour of Havana last Sunday.

The Cuban premier hid nothing. His tour ranged from slum areas to the ultra-modern workers' apartment development called José Havana.

He bragged about accomplishments of his revolutionary government which, he said, celebrates its fourth anniversary Jan. 1, and admitted certain problems yet to be overcome.

During the two-hour tour, Castro's motorcade rolled by miles of the beautiful Havana sunsets, from immense happiness to silent delight and on to boredom which produced a few stifled yawns.

The tour started from the dock where the U.S. freighter Africa Pilot arrived with $11,000,000 worth of the supplies being exchanged for freedom of the Bay of Pigs invasion prisoners.

Castro appeared shortly after the ship docked. He was introduced to ship Captain Alfred Boerum, former U.S. surgeon-general Leonard Scheele, Washington lawyer E. Barrett Prettyman Jr. and myself.

The tour came about after

P.M. DEFENDS RIGHT TO TRADE WITH RED BLOC

Hints Canada Irked By U.S. Action

NASSAU, The Bahamas (CP) — Prime Minister Diefenbaker has championed Canada's right to trade with Communist nations and hinted that Canada and Britain were miffed over what they called President Kennedy's secrecy preceding the recent United States stand in the Cuban crisis.

"There are some who say," Diefenbaker lashed out Friday in a Kiwanis Club of Nassau meeting in the Nassau Beach Hotel, "that we ought not to trade with Communist countries. That is not the view of my country."

"The government of Canada takes the view that excepting defence and strategic materials, there should be trade with Communist countries. There is no other way in which you can break down the walls of separation and suspicion.

"We have dealt with Cuba throughout the last several years in non-strategic materials. We have dealt with China. We have had a large trade in wheat with China . . . I believe if we follow the course you can break down, as I said a moment ago, those walls of suspicions."

CALLS MISINTERPRETED

Gardner will be examined by a psychiatrist.

Education Minister Says It Will Be Long Time Ere All Teachers Have Degrees

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Education Minister William G. Davis indicates Ontario is a long way from the point where all the province's elementary school teachers will have university degrees. He says teachers' colleges haven't enough applications from Grade 13 graduates — let alone university grads—to fill the demand for teachers.

This, he told the annual meeting of the Ontario Public School Teachers' Federation Friday night, is why the province is continuing its two - year courses at teachers' colleges for Grade 12 graduates.

"We have already been able to discontinue the in - service course which consisted of two summer courses each year followed by a year of teaching and then completed by a year at teachers' college," he said. "The last graduates of that course will be certified next June.

"We have also been able to raise academic requirements for admission to other courses at teachers' colleges. Students entering the two-year course now must have the Grade 12 graduation diploma of the general course with four options rather than the three options formerly required."

Mr. Davis said that as well students entering the one-year course now must have standing in both Grade 13 English papers among their eight subjects for admission. Before, they required standing in either English composition or literature. The minister said he hoped a recent requirement that new appointees to principalships of larger public schools have university degrees "will encourage many elementary school teachers . . . to continue university study."

The federation, meeting in Toronto, earlier decided to withdraw temporarily 10 $500 scholarships for high school students entering teachers' college. Four response and inadequate qualifications were blamed for the move. Of 58 applications

OECD Expresses Concern Over Canadian Problems

LONDON (CP)—Concern over "deep - rooted problems" restricting Canada's economic growth is expressed in a report released Friday by the Organization for Economic Co-operation and Development.

The lengthy economic survey payments is likely to improve but adds that it is "unfortunate" the government chose stringent monetary measures which will almost certainly have an unfavorable effect on the course of domestic activity."

The report suggests the government measures did not take full advantage of Canada's "considerable margin of unused resources in the economy."

The OECD, with headquarters in Paris, was set up in 1960 and includes Canada and the United States in its 20 members.

The survey refers to Canada's "slow rate of growth" and says persistent high unemployment and large deficits on the current external account were aggravated by a "short-lived but sharp exchange crisis in the first half of 1962."

The report says that although the gravity of the crisis owes much to short-term influences, including temporary uncertainties about future government policy prior to the last general election, "it was not unrelated to the longer-term problems with which the authorities are faced."

The report says one "basic problem" Canada faces is decreased demand for primary products used in war materials during the Korean conflict.

"Defence expenditure was considerably reduced after 1953 and total government expenditure on goods and services, in real terms, showed only a moderate increase."

"The slowing down of the expansion in the United States clearly had a considerable influence on developments in Canada. With the United States taking about three-fifths of Canada's merchandise exports, and with the generally strong financial and economic ties between the two countries, stark conditions south of the border were bound to have a major impact on the trend of activity in Canada."

The demand for Canadian products has not kept pace with Canada's ability to produce, the report says.

FIGHT BUILDS UP OVER VISIT TO RED H.O.

Winnipeg Teacher Under Attack

WINNIPEG (CP) — Controversy is growing over the case of a Winnipeg school teacher who took a group of students from the United States on a visit to the Manitoba Communist party headquarters.

With the outcry of two Roman Catholic priests into the dispute, teacher Lionel Orlikow in an interview Friday said the situation is "beginning to get dirty."

He suggested the priests entered the picture because of his stand against provincial government financial aid to parochial schools.

David Orlikow, a brother of the teacher and New Democratic Party member of Parliament for Winnipeg North, brought the case to light recently in the House of Commons while discussing questioning of students and teachers by the RCMP about Communist affairs.

His brother, Lionel, had already been named as the recipient of a $5,000 Winnipeg school board bursary to help permit him to leave his job as a teacher at Selvirin High School and study for a master's.

Dr. Andrew Moore, a member of the school board, said last week that in view of the Communist development, he would ask the school board to reconsider awarding of the bursary.

ASKS POSTPONEMENT

However, when the matter arose at a board meeting Thursday night, Dr. Moore asked for a postponement. He said he had discovered more evidence and needed more time to establish its validity.

At the meeting Paul Willms, a teacher in suburban St. Vital who lives in Winnipeg, presented a petition signed—among others—by two priests. It said the board had no right to spend $5,000 of the taxpayers' money on a scholarship and that the board should have exercised more discretion in the choice of a recipient.

In a signed statement issued through the Manitoba Teachers' Society, Mr. Orlikow said he was asked in October by Professor Victor Peters of Moorhead State College in Moorhead

Judge Upholds Contention of Two Accused

MONTREAL (CP)—Mr. Justice Ignace Deslauriers ruled Friday a prosecution contention that Chief Judge Edouard Archambault of session court acted irregularly in a case against a Union Nationale party organizer and a former Quebec provincial policeman.

He ordered everything to start all over.

Andre Lagarde, chief organizer for the Montreal area Union Nationale, and Gaston Archambault, former head of the QPP holdup squad, are accused of conspiracy to violate the Dorion Elections Act.

They first chose to face preliminary hearing, followed by jury trial. Lagarde contended Judge Archambault for a quick, summary trial before him alone.

The prosecution contended that this choice can be made at the start of arraignment, and that the judge cannot change the decision once preliminary hearing is under way. It sought a writ preventing Judge Archambault from hearing the case his way.

Mr. Justice Deslauriers ruled that Judge Archambault had not followed the correct procedure. The entire procedure was so "sprinkled with irregularities" that it could possibly have voided the trial, Mr. Justice Deslauriers ruled.

Heavy Ground Fighting Around Elisabethville

3 Planes Destroyed, Attack Very Successful

LONDON (Reuters)—Britain today called for an immediate cease-fire in The Congo and renewed its opposition to a political settlement imposed by force.

The foreign office said in a statement the British government has a "repeatedly impressed" upon United Nations Secretary-General U Thant "the futility of trying to impose a political settlement on The Congo by force.

"This could only lead to a prolonged and expensive occupation of the country by the United Nations," the statement said.

The foreign office said Sir Patrick Dean, Britain's representative at the UN, had been instructed to urge U Thant to take advantage of an offer by President Moise Tshombe of Katanga to send representatives to Leopoldville to arrange a fair division of revenues between Katanga and the central government.

But the statement said "the first necessity is an immediate cease-fire" in the fighting is secessionist Katanga province.

Five Workmen Killed as Wall Knocked Over

WASHINGTON (AP) — Tons of red clay cascaded down an embankment Friday and knocked over a partly constructed concrete wall, killing five workmen and injuring 11.

Two other men thought missing for a time in the suburban Maryland cave-in were located alive after rescue workers searched for five hours through a tangled mass of clay, splintered wood, hardened concrete and clay gumbo.

The dead were Edgar Poole, 57, a carpenter. The other four included Lester Dowell, 37, and Raffiel Hendricks, 28.

The wall, part of the basement substructure for a branch department store in form a portion of a 70-acre shopping centre, collapsed with a rumble and a crash. Everywhere said there was no warning.

The unshored sides of the excavation, weakened by thawing weather, swept across a seven-foot gap and knocked down the wall and form into which concrete was being poured.

Most of the 50 men was working on the section of wall when it collapsed.

Most of Continent Shivered In Chilling Winds From Steppes

LONDON (AP)—"Go to the sun" vacation ads blossomed in British and European papers today as most of the continent shivered in chilling winds from the Russian steppes. But most of the southern resorts extolled in the advertisements were basking in the same freezing or near-freezing temperatures.

Even the Italian Riviera, after a long free of the heavy arctic that has blanketed nearly the entire country, got its first frosty morning of the season at Genoa.

More snowflakes were reported around Milan, Bologna and Verona.

At Avellino, in southern Italy, new snow drove wolves down from the upper reaches of the Apennine Mountains. A farmer shot two which tried to slip into his sheep pens.

Fog added to the traffic chaos in Holland and Britain. Traffic already snarled by icy roads was reduced to a crawl in southern Amsterdam.

The cold spread over much of central England, bringing new dangers on ice-covered roads. Forecasters predicted temperatures all over Britain would remain around the freezing point.

The big freeze brought sport to a halt. In Britain alone, 26 soccer matches were cancelled and three horse racing pro grams were scratched.

In Switzerland, so many householders left water faucets running to prevent frozen pipes that cities declared a water shortage.

The oddest accident of the cold spell occurred when a 15-year - old Guernsey boy was taken to hospital with burns suffered when he was hit by a snowball. The snowball ignited some explosive caps in his pants pocket.

Dismiss as Silly Tale Duke Favored Nazi Alliance

By DOUG MARSHALL
Canadian Press Staff Writer

Most informed opinion in Britain has dismissed as nonsense the report that the Duke of Windsor, as King Edward VIII, favored an alliance with Nazi Germany.

The report is contained in the latest official volume of captured German diplomatic documents published Friday. German emissaries in London during the mid-1930s apparently convinced Hitler that Edward VIII was an admirer of the Nazi cause.

The Duke of Windsor has issued a statement from Paris saying the reports were slanted to curry favor with Hitler and thus give a false impression British newspapers generally echo this view.

However The Daily Mirror's Cassandra (pseudonym of columnist William Connor) says the documents reveal the duke as "a headstrong and foolish person." Cassandra concludes:

"King Edward VIII, according to his German representative, emerges as a fatuous figure who, if Hitler had won—and how nearly he did—would have come to the top of the heap as a puppet monarch not worthy of the love that was poured on him by an affectionate and unsuspecting British public."

Most of Hitler's information about the king seems to have come from the Duke of Coburg, a grandson of Queen Victoria and a second cousin of the British monarch.

Coburg attended Eton, England's top school, and during his diplomatic period in London cultivated some of his old schoolfellows who held high places in the government. He presented himself as an expert on English society.

The documents make clear that Hitler apparently believed his emissary's reports and accepted the unlikely theory that the British monarch's views on foreign policy could influence the British government's behavior.

Moreover, much of what Coburg reported seems to have been garnered from casual conversations in private over cocktails and coffee.

Several newspapers say the documents underline the need for Western governments to stress their true opinions again and again. Flippant gossip can lead to totally wrong conclusions.

"How many obtuse and insensitive Soviet Coburgs," wonders the Manchester Guardian, "may be getting hopelessly wrong - headed impressions of the true state of British public opinion over Berlin or over Britain's relations with the United States?"

Fifty Girls Enjoy Day At 'Y' Camp

The Y.M.C.A. Girls' Christmas program continued Friday with an outdoor day of fun in the snow. Close to fifty girls arrived at the 'Y' at 9:30 in the morning and had a bus trip to Oak Lake, the Y.M.C.A. Day Camp site, where they spent the morning on toboggans, sleighs and skis on the hills surrounding the camp site.

The girls returned to the camp site lodge where they had their lunch, square danced around the fireplace, and then again returned to the hills for more fun in the snow outdoors.

Before the bus arrived to take the girls back home they had another lively sing-song in the lodge.

Monday afternoon, the Y.M.C.A. will be featuring a New Year's Eve "Fun Afternoon" of games, prizes and dancing for members and non-members, as part of its holiday program.

The program will begin at 2:00 and continues through until five o'clock.

Window Casing Catches Fire

Christmas tree lights left burning all night, caused concern early this morning, when the window casing around which they were located, caught fire.

The alarm was received at the Fire Department early today from 15 Cherry Gardens. The blaze was quickly extinguished and no damage was reported.

Traffic Officers Promote New Safety Device

There's plenty of stripes around the Belleville police department these days as traffic officers promote a new accident preventive.

The stripes are on a small — but effective — safety reflector applied on the inside post of an automobile door on the driver's side.

The stickers are designed to eliminate that accident, unfortunately too frequent on police fatality records.

The driver, parking his car beside the curb, opens the door, opens his door and steps onto the roadway — into the path of an oncoming car.

The stickers, distributed to police departments by the Gestetner corporation, act as a warning indicator for oncoming motorists when the driver's door opens.

While they do not duplicate for caution and common sense, say traffic officials, the sticker is another safeguard to driving — a safeguard they will be happy to distribute to city motorists in coming weeks.

Three Dead, Four Injured In Traffic Count in District

Three dead; four injured.

That's the count after a series of highway accidents in the Quinte district last night.

The drivers of the automobiles were killed near Bancroft when their cars crashed headon. North of Napanee, a woman died when her automobile crashed into a tree stump. Both of Belleville on Highway 401, three nurses were injured in an accident involving two cars and a tractor-trailer.

On Highway 28, seven miles west of Bancroft, a grizzly head-on smash took the lives of Kirk Mansfield, 21, Flinton, Ont., and 57-year-old Percy Vader, Bancroft.

Mansfield was instantly killed. Vader died on his way to Bancroft hospital.

A passenger in the Vader car, Arnold Watson, R. R. 3 Havelock, also suffered minor injuries and was taken to Bancroft hospital.

Coroner D. O. W. Anderson has ordered an inquest into the fatal mishap.

In the Napanee area, 43-year-old Mrs. Doris Sigsworth, Oshawa, was instantly killed when her car crashed into a tree stump. Scene of the accident, still being investigated by police, was on Highway 2 by two miles east of Enterprise.

THREE NURSES HURT

On Highway 401 at the Shannonville overpass, three Kingston nurses were injured when the car in which they were travelling went out of control.

Taken to Belleville General Hospital were Northa Samuel, fractured pelvis and chest injuries; Glenda Lewis, and Elizabeth Corpus, both with minor cuts. Miss Samuhat was detained in hospital but her companions were released after treatment.

Police say they were passengers in a car driven by Pedro Reyno DeLeon of Chicago. The DeLeon automobile, in the eastbound highway median, struck the rear of a road transport operated by Lyall Trucking Limited, and then bounced into a car driven by Douglas Archer, Brighton.

Siren Systems To Be Tested

To make certain that air raid warning system sirens are always in top working condition, sirens in Belleville and Trenton will be tested periodically, it was announced today by Col. Angus Duffy, co-ordinator for the Quinte Area Emergency Measures Organization.

Col. Duffy noted that under certain weather conditions the particle tubes were responsible for the sirens. The tests will be carried out by fire departments in the two municipalities.

The tests will be done with the least sound from the sirens as possible so as not to unduly alarm residents.

Strikers Will Learn Fate On January 7

ST. THOMAS (CP) — Seventeen striking city hall employees may learn Jan. 7 whether or not any action will be taken on their refusal to abide by an ultimatum under which they were to have returned to work Thursday or face dismissal.

Alderman Joseph Conrath, chairman of city council's personnel committee which issued the ultimatum, said the council is expected until the city's new council is inaugurated Jan. 7.

The ultimatum was issued by the committee.

"Council may decide to name somebody else to the personnel committee," he said.

Other committee members are Mayor Vincent Barrie, Ald. Donald Stokes and Ald. Jack Stirling. Ald. Stirling will also be a member of the new committee as he retires from council at the end of the present term.

The 17 strikers, members of Local 841, National Union of Public Employees (CLC), are seeking recognition of the local as their bargaining agent.

A spokesman for the union says the NUPE does not believe council will approve the committee's recommendation to dismiss the employees because it would be contrary to the province's labor laws.

The 17 continue picketing city hall.

PORGY AND BESS

When George Gershwin's folk opera Porgy and Bess was performed in Seoul in 1957, few Koreans had seen Negroes and many did not know the word.

School Becomes Model for Other Board

Belleville's Harry J. Clarke Public School in the east end of the city may soon become a model for Bay of Quinte District school boards who are contemplating the construction of new classroom accommodation.

In the past several weeks a number of school boards in the area have visited the Belleville school on inspection trips with the view of following similar design in their own construction programs.

The reason for the interest is reported to be that the per room cost factor at the new Belleville school is good while the lighting and heating systems are also felt to be exceptionally fine.

Also a new idea in roof design given a projection of from 12 to five feet was planned by the architects, Watson and Weigand. This projection assists in keeping out the hot summer sun, and in winter it still allows the low angled sun rays to enter the school with their brightening and warming effect.

Prisoner Says He Killed Grimes Sisters

LOS ANGELES (AP)—A prisoner about to be released after serving 20 days on a drunken mess charge confessed Friday to the killing of the Grimes sisters in Chicago.

"Six years ago today I killed Barbara and Patricia Grimes and I've been running ever since," sandy - haired Alfred Hall tells Los Angeles police and reporters.

Lawless, 34, who said he is from Jamestown, Ky., said he picked up the girls at a Chicago theatre, molested them, choked and bound them, then threw them from an auto.

The bodies of Barbara, 15, and Patricia, 17, were found beside a country road southwest of Chicago on Jan. 6, 1957. The girls had vanished from their Chicago home Dec. 28.

CONFESSES TO ANOTHER

Police said Lawless also confessed to the murder of a man named Walter (Pee-John) Miller in Jamestown on Dec. 1948."

Miller was found beaten to death, beside a road just north of Jamestown, in southeast Kentucky. The case has never been made in the case, Jamestown Police Chief Rufus said the slaying was "about the time" given by Lawless.

Lieut. John A. Tidyman called Lawless a "psychopath" and "a probable suspect" in the Grimes case. He said Chicago authorities said they would be send an officer to question Lawless.

Police at Chicago said the confession of Lawless follows a host of dozens of persons who sought — for whatever twisted reason—to assume the guilt in one of the ugliest murders in the memory of veteran policemen.

Within days after the discovery of the bodies, police announced they had a detailed description from an illiterate skid road dishwasher. When it was pointed out that his story did not check out, he was released in all but name.

BEATRICE MARY YATEMAN
(Contributed)

Following a lengthy illness, Beatrice Mary Yateman, 66, passed away in the Sheppard Nursing Home, Belleville, on December 8th. Around The Tee

A rink of teachers, Everett Fairman, Harold Mott, Joe McKay and Ralph Ellis journeyed to Oshawa on Thursday to compete in a bonspiel for teachers only and came home with beautiful silver rose bowls after winning their three games. There were 56 rinks in competition and two rinks, the Oshawa Curling Club and Oshawa Golf and Country Club, were used to run off the games. The winning rink represented the latter, at both clubs in excellent condition and lightning fast and that a good time was had by all.

William Riley, general chairman of the annual spiel of the Quinte Curling Club, the Trenton Curling Club and the SCAP Curling Club, to be held at the three rinks starting on January 30th, to the following Sunday, stated that the total entry list of 64 rinks is filled and there is a long waiting list. There will be several rinks added in this year's spiel along with many that competed last year. The prize list will be out shortly, stated Riley by sked.

But to all this a moment. Which one will it be December 31st? You gave me years of happiness, And left me memories of a lifetime, But you left me beautiful memories.

I will treasure through the years.

French Plane With 22 Aboard Said Missing

AJACCIO, Corsica (AP) — A four-engine French plane with 21 persons aboard disappeared over the Mediterranean Island today, airline sources said.

Search parties began a hunt for the plane, a state carrier belonging to the Air - Nautique Company.

The airliner was flying from Bastia, on the northern tip of the island, to Ajaccio, about 60 miles southwest. From Ajaccio it was to continue to Nice, on the ERA. The weather was bad.

Gendarmes began a search near the village of Piedicorte after reports that the plane had been last seen flying in the area.

The passengers on the plane included members of the Bastia basketball club and team supporters, including two children, first reports said.

Trenton Golf Course Is Winter Playground

Trenton residents can stay in town and still enjoy winter sports. All they have to do is to follow holidaying school children to No. 1 fairway at the golf course, behind the hospital. Youngsters, these days, are keeping the slopes alive with activity from daylight to dark. For riding down hill and enjoying yourself, in the good old fashioned way, you only need standard paraphernalia, hand sleighs, toboggans and skis. Skiers Bobbie Waldroff, 10, (right) and Stewart Foster, 9, on their climb back to the top, pause to watch chums zoom to the bottom.

Here is a happy group of young "snow queens" with varied equipment for winter fun-making. Front row, left to right: Marilyn Campney, Nancy Lane, Terry Webber, back row, left to right: Barbara Scuccato, Dianne Scott, O'Dilie Scuccato, Jean Candy and Jann Grant.

Cuba Charges Men Are Sent To U.S. Base

KEY WEST, Fla. (AP)—Anti-Castro Cuban elements are being transplanted from U.S. soil to Guantanamo Naval Base, Cuba, for aggression against Cuba, Havana radio charged today.

The broadcast heard at Key West quoted the Cuban government news agency Prensa Latina as saying Cuban refugees are being sent to the U.S. Navy base to "enlist in the American Army and participate in serious provocations and attacks on the Cuban coast."

Worry About Plan to Rent Court Offices

TRENTON — Councillor-elect Gerald Weaver, today had no comment on a suggestion he might be involved in a "conflict-of-interest" issue if he rents quarters to the town's probation agency.

Town council this week passed a resolution of intent to rent a building from Mr. Weaver on Elgin Street to house the family court and probation staff, without quarters since fire destroyed the McNair Block earlier this month.

Yesterday, Mayor James MacDonald said he had obtained legal advice indicating that the rental of a building from the councillor-elect would probably result in a conflict of interest.

Mr. Weaver was elected to the 1963 council in December and will be sworn-in January 3rd. Mayor MacDonald said council passed the resolution before Mr. Weaver assumed his seat, believing it could thus avoid a conflict of interest.

Town Council Holds Opening Meet Jan. 3

TRENTON — Trenton council's inaugural meeting, held by tradition on the day of the week following New Year's Day, and this year, planned for Wednesday, Jan. 2nd., has been postponed until Thursday, Jan. 3rd. The postponement is due to the inability of Councillor Ed Todd to be present at Wednesday's meeting. The meeting will be held in the town hall, over the police station, with the formal ceremonies commencing at 11 a.m. Town citizens are free to attend the swearing in of council, but in the past few years, very few, have availed themselves of the opportunity of seeing municipal government in action. Religious ceremonies will be conducted this year by Rev. A. W. Lougheed and council will be sworn in by clerk-comptroller O. W. Larry.

At this meeting too, the mayor of the town, by custom, outlines plans for the coming year - - - finances permitting.

Once council has been duly sworn in, the members will pass a by-law, by the terms of which the town may borrow enough money to carry on until the first tax payments come in.

Council members for 1963 are Ross Burti, Ed Todd, Gerald Weaver, Claude Graham, Duncan McDonald and James Duncan. Mayor D. James MacDonald will be filling out the second year of his two-year term this year. Councillors Graham, Duncan and McDonald also have another year to go. Councillors Burti, Todd and Weaver, elected in the 1962 December elections, will sit two years.

Will Conduct Tour of Schools

TRENTON — Next Monday, starting at 8.30 a.m., school board chairman of grounds and buildings, T. S. Ketcheson and E. D. Topping, who sits on the committe with Mr. Ketcheson, will conduct any of the 1963 board members who choose to go, on a tour of the town's schools. Starting place will be Trenton High School and the focal point will be the finished section of the new million-dollar technical addition. Right after the first of the year, parts of the new section will be put to use. The entire addition should be ready for occupancy some time next spring.

On view, to, will be the new four-roomed addition to Queen Elizabeth Public School on Sillers Ave., in east Trenton.

Prince Charles Public School on Dufferin Ave. in west Trenton, is a fairly new school. Oldest school in town is Dufferin Avenue public school, constructed near the beginning of the century.

Other schools coming under board jurisidiction are College Street public school in east Trenton and North Trenton public school.

Close to 3,000 students attend the town's public schools and more than 1,000 students are registered at the 4 high school. With the new addition to the secondary school, around 1,400 students may be accomodated.

Is Your WILL Up to Date?

Many people review their Will at the beginning of each year. Your executor may have moved away or become ill or become unable to give sufficient time and attention to administer your estate. In view of the considerable changes in dollar values your Estate has probably changed in value.

You may have given too many legacies, or too large in amount, under your Will and have deprived your wife and children of sufficient to provide for their care and keep. You may have to adjust some of the shares going to beneficiaries. Births, marriages and deaths in your family may have made your estate plans obsolete. Increased succession duties and income taxes may affect the estate plans made by you for your family.

Your Will is one of the most important documents you will ever be called upon to sign. If you have a Will, we suggest that you review it now — and if not make your Will now and appoint Victoria and Grey Trust Company as Executor.

It costs no more to have group judgment and financial responsibility.

Clinking Money

The Canadian dollar has come back into the news again, but for a different reason this time. Now silver dollars are the focis of attention, and the reason is that there just are not enough of them. The mint made more than one and a quarter million of them in 1961, and even more than that in 1962, but almost all have disappeared from circulation. Officials assume that they are being bought up and stored by collectors, and squirreled away into piggy banks by children.

The shortage cannot be solved by minting more of them, for the time being, because the full facilities of the mint are required to keep up with the demand for pennies, nickels, dimes and quarters in the vending machine age.

As our largest coin, the silver dollar enjoys a unique position, especially since it is the only coin duplicated in value by a bill. Because of this position, more silver dollars are saved than are spent, and it is a safe bet that most of those silver dollars have been given as gifts.

But the big circles are easily negotiable, and some people find them far more satisfying to have in one's pocket than a thin sheet of paper. During 1959, when a large factory in Medicine Hat decided to show the people of the city just what its payroll meant to the general prosperity, it paid its employees in silver dollars. The following week, Medicine Hat was the clinking-est town in the west.

Between children's piggy banks and collectors' display cases, the past few years' production of silver dollars has been lost to the spending public. But with the continued rise of vending machines, the coins may become more popular. Few Canadians will regret the change.

Watch Fest This Swindle

A new swindle has been developed during the past six months, and at least one team of conmen is touring the country with it. Peterborough was hit recently; perhaps Belleville will get a visit soon.

The swindlers usually choose an elderly lady as their victim, and, by means unknown, gain information on the victim's bank account.

Armed with this information, one of the con-men telephones the victim, and introduces himself as a bank official. He explains that there have been some irregularities at the bank, and the victim is asked to help the bank find the cause. Sometimes, the specific explanation is that a teller is suspected of being dishonest.

If the victim agrees to co-operate, she is asked to go to the bank and withdraw a specified amount from her account. Often, she is instructed to ask for the money in specified bill denominations. Always the withdrawal is large.

When the victim has withdrawn the cash, and the money to her home or to a pre-arranged meeting place. There, the phony bank official thanks her, and takes her money, supposedly to return it to the bank.

Citizens should remember that no bank inspectors would not ask strangers over the phone for co-operation in solving bank problems, and that anyone making such a request is probably a thief. Bank managers usually find out about large withdrawals before they are completed, but even this will not help the victim, unless the manager is expecting a swindler to strike.

The only sure protection against this swindle is to suspect immediately any suggestion that you withdraw any large sum of cash from your bank account.

Share And Share

Blind persons and amputee crippples recently received official approval to ride free on the city transport system. When the line was privately owned, the free rides were given by the owners, but under new management the practice could not be maintained officially without a special by-law.

Some people will mutter, of course about their taxes being wasted, but most citizens will approve this move. It is one step forward in the acceptance of the responsibility of the city, to make life easier for people whose lives, even with consideration, are much harder than most.

Briefcase Is Now Out, Suitcase Is Status Symbol

By RICHARD JACKSON
(From The Ontario Intelligencer's Ottawa Bureau)

OTTAWA — Notes off the frayed reportorial yard - and cuff - :

STATUS SYMBOL

Nobody who is anybody, especially in the upper levels of the External Affairs Department, carries a briefcase any more. Once the badge of the young up-and-coming career man, the briefcase in the castle-conscious set of the federal bureaucracy is for the office boys.

The briefcase still may be perfectly in order for such citizens as Canadian financier E. P. Taylor, IPR President H. R. Crump and other such tycoons who come to Ottawa on business.

But they're "outsiders."

And in the eyes of External Affairs types, almost from any other world.

On Parliament Hill, the Man Who's Going Places carries neither briefcase nor attache case, but a small economy-size suitcase, plastic or shabby, battered about at the corners and with a London, Paris, Bonn, Delhi — but never Washington — decal on the lid.

CROSS PURPOSES

What is known as "The Ottawa Man" -- the careerist in External Affairs who actually hates Ottawa, and can't wait to say doesn't think much of Canada, either - - wouldn't want to be caught dead in a briefcase. A new one, or even a Canadian or an American-built car.

The departmental parking lot -- free, no fee - - is packed with Mercedes, Volvos, Opels, Vauxhalls, Bentleys, Renaults, Austins, and just about any other foreign make you'd care to name.

None of them new and shiny, of course. Too ostentatious.

All of them a bit shabby. More genteel, don't you know.

When Ambassador Beyond their control - - like no overseas postings for a few years - compels them to be attended to such crass depths as buying a Canadian Ford or Chev or Plymouth, they like to try saving face by removing the manufacturer's name plates.

All of which, the Hump and Hustle crowd at Trade and Commerce finds slightly on the silly side.

ABOUT FACE

That leg injury Prime Minister Diefenbaker sustained' last Summer was a whole lot worse than he admitted, or all but a very few people knew. What started out, in the early reports which were more "corrected," as a minor bone breakage in the ankle turned out to be a fracture which necessitated serious complications from foot to above the knee.

He kept mum about it, and, of course, his medical advisers remained silent, hoping it would clear up. It didn't, after seven weeks, it did. Now, even the limp has gone, but for a time, the pain was severe and extremely worried.

The PM, now in the pink of good health, both physically and emotionally — his spirits haven't been this high since the exciting new Diefenbaker days of 1957 — is adding a little snow-shoeing at Harrington Lake to the nearby Gatineau Hills to the in-town walking he does to keep in shape.

Not a courier des bois by any means, the PM reported the other day that he had turned toes over teakettle on his snowshoes and hung head down, feet caught in a bush, until rescued by one of the hands at Harrington.

Sat for an hour and swung up and down the road to keep warm and kill time one other night when his driver, glancing over his shoulder to talk to the PM, ran the car off the Harrington Lake road and into the snow-deep ditch, there to mire down.

At such minor irritations, the busy Prime Minister can laugh, an indication perhaps of the very fine fettle of his esprit as he heads into a new and politically exciting year.

A JUDY

Crack-of-the-Session was Miss Judy LaMarsh's snapper to all the hoofrear over the Canadian NATO Parliamentary Association's much publicized junket to Paris.

The MPs — and Senators — came home from Paree to read in the papers those choice words written by one of the two newsmen who thumbed a ride with them and the odd lakes of duty gazing-on in the sin-bins of Montmartre.

The latte-tale correspondent who accepted their hospitality then embarrassed them with their wives and constituents snitched with gossip about gay nights in Pigalle and days sleeping it off instead of attending to NATO business around the council tables.

Of course, it was all pretty ridiculous, especially coming from a correspondent — any correspondent for that matter —who belongs to a professional discounting La joie de vivre."

The report of the "woman - chasing" got into print, even in the usually well-mannered and usually famous for nered Canadian Press wire copy.

It was too much for La Judy, Niagara Falls' gift to Parliament.

"I hope", she sniffed with a winking smile, "that includes accusing me of woman-chasing".

And that got into print, too, with Judy cracking along with everybody else who read the NDP's Douglas Fisher's account of the Parisian Knight's Tale.

Strictly Personal

Laughter Gives Wide Range Of Feelings

By SYDNEY J. HARRIS

Purely Personal Prejudices: Of all the human reactions, laughter has the broadest range of feelings — it can signify the deepest sympathy with, or the greatest scorn for, the kindness that includes ourself in the laughter, or the sadism that sets us apart and above.

The sad spectacle of public life is that democracy degrades statesmen into politicians, while autocracy hardens them into despots; into those who try too hard to please or to pursue power, to those who ignore and condemn the public needs.

The striking difference in the mortality rate between men and women in which women are much less apt to succumb to such diseases of stress as a heart attack(a) is not inexplainable, to my mind, by the fact that women can relieve their stress by confiding anxieties to women friends, while men commonly have no such release from tension.

Why do children seem to "catch" the bad habits of their associates, and never their good habits; or, as the larger question in moral philosophy, why do vices, like disease, seem to be contagious, while virtues, like good health, are not?

One of the most astute observations in social psychology was said: "Society is a masked ball, made by Emerson, in which everyone hides his real character — and reveals it by hiding."

Translation is the most treacherous of endeavors; to translate any language properly, we must know not only the bare "meaning" of words, but their overtones and undertones; I remember a sign in English I saw in the window of a Parisian dress shop some years ago: "Gowns for Street Walking."

Genuine repentence is a rare emotion; most of us repent the discovery of our misdeed, not the mischief itself. Instead of a test of character, as someone has said, is what we would do if assured that we would never be found out.

When we are young, we desire desperately to be "different from self"; as we grow older, we learn that if we are loved it is often "despite" our quirks.

Zealousness is a passion that can be controlled and directed (only by wise men; but, unfortunately, it is found mostly in fools. (While reminds me of Santayana's apt definition of a "fanatic" as "a man who redoubles his efforts after he has lost sight of his goal."

There is no modern equivalent for that fine old archaic description of a certain type of young man as a "whippersnapper."

GLEANINGS FROM OUR FYLES OF BYGONE YEARS

20 YEARS AGO

December 29th, 1942

With the Christmas vacation being in effect a season of extra activity will take place at the YMCA. One of the features of the program is a specially arranged game of basketball between the members of this year's juvenile team and a team composed of members of last year's team who are now over age and other Y members who are away at college. J. Hyde is lining up the team which will likely see most of the following in action: Hyde, Mason, Rogers, Robertson, and John Locke, still in town, and Cronk, Evans and Cameron who are attending Queen's. Pickering from the 'Q' of Ralph Clapp on leave from the Air Force and Myles Morton. The game will likely be played December 30th at 8 p.m., public welcome.

Christmas carols delightfully given by the Girls' Club of the Belleville Collegiate Institute under the direction of George Mayhew, director of music, were heard at the regular meeting for the Kiwanis Club on Tuesday. Leo B. Riggs, chairman of music for the Club introduced Mr. Mayhew and his glee club which included Marion Lashbrook, Elinor Finkle, Wilma Judge, Mary Wright, Gordon Watkin, Cyril Smith, Hugh Simpson, Stan Wiggins and Ray Jarvis.

Nice Profit From a Joke

Hamilton Spectator

An English newspaper the other day carried the story about a Birmingham attorney putting a penny-farthing bicycle on his stand in the International Cycle and Motor Cycle Show at Earls Court, London, "for a joke."

Inquiry at home soon dispelled our native ignorance and we learned that such a bicycle in England is one of the high wheel-fashioned type with the big front wheel (penny) and the small rear wheel (farthing). The newspaper story explained that two U.S. bicycle manufacturers, Mr. Leo J. Cohen of Los Angeles and Mr. Arthur Peters of Minneapolis, saw the joke. They chuckled,as they wrote out orders for 5,000 pairs of penny-farthings to be sent to the U.S. A director of the cycle company said: "We are astounded at receiving such an order" —which makes one wonder if there may be other huge surprises in British export salesmanship.

On this continent, penny-farthings are defined much less colorfully as "ordinary" bicycles, to distinguish them from safety ones with brakes. But we're still at a loss for the reason for the $30,000 order. Is it part of the New Frontier physical program the President has been promoting? It seems hardly likely though, that being thrown from a high bike over the handle-bars onto the road would better equip a man to defend democracy. One thing sure, before a chap was thrown for a loss, he could look down contemptuously on those count-less cars.

But what's behind it all? As for Messrs. Cohen and Giffis a penny-farthing for their thoughts.

Do Wives Need to Get Away From Home Occasionally?

By JOSEPH G. MOLNER, M.D.

Dear Dr. Molner: Please write about the need for wives to get away from their homes occasionally. A common complaint among us seems to be that our husbands cannot understand our desire to escape.

I am 45, have married children (aged 24 and 21), three sons at home (17, 7 and 4). My husband likes hunting and has just gone to Canada with the fellows, after ignoring my plans for him to take me fishing.

He says he needs to get away, too. I am filled with resentment. He resents my bowling with the ladies Thursday afternoons. Can you help convince him I must get out before I lose my mind?
— Mrs. C.R.

You won't lose your mind. Just your temper. But I can't say I blame you.

Some people may say that such a problem is "self-created." They're doubtless right. But it is health, which is more than a physical state, but is emotional and mental as well. The doctor's province extends considerably beyond curing the merely physical illness, and beyond mere prolongation of life. The goal (in my view) of medicine is promotion of active and happy life; not just years.

There are people who have lived and died without leaving their immediate neighborhood and they liked it. For them, that's fine.

Not all are alike. Others like a change of scene. (And some, who travel endlessly, long for a settle down in one place.)

After a quarter of a century of being tied down, you want a change. You ought to get one. Better a month of happiness than a year of living in constant resentment, and your husband, it seems to me, ought to understand.

I suppose it's beside the point to comment that probably you should have raised the last 10 or 20 years ago. Your husband had gotten into the habit of expecting you to stay home and tend to things over the 24 years that you've been caring for the children. It requires a jolt for him to change now.

However, it sounds to me as though such a jolt should be administered, especially since he resents your taking an afternoon for bowling.

As physicians, most of us think things over carefully before intruding in a case like this. Sometimes we hint cautiously, hoping someone or the other will begin to think without being pressured. We don't always know both sides, either.

Nor are we under any illusion that selfishness is limited to a single sex. Some wives are fine fishing trips; some are interested in everything except fishing — and nobody should go fishing except people who like to fish. There are selfish, lonelsky husbands. There also are greedy, slave-driving wives.

But most couples learn to give and take. They learn to give as well as to demand, and they never since doing calisthenics. I hope you will, too. What's sauce for the goose . . .

Dear Dr. Molner: Can physical strain as the result of calisthenics cause inflammation of the gall bladder or appendix? I have had pain in my right side ever since doing calisthenics.
— M.G.

Physical exercise doesn't cause appendicitis or gall bladder disease. Look elsewhere for your trouble.

A Lift For Living

Light of Christ Shines Through the Darkness

By Dr. RALPH W. SOCKMAN

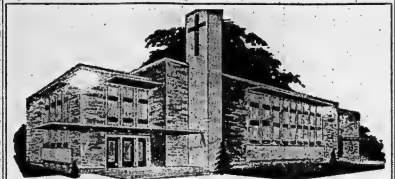
In the early summer of 1942 during World War I we were dining one evening at the home of a friend when the blackout sirens was sounded. Immediately all lights in the outside rooms were extinguished. As it was a balmy night we gathered at the open windows to watch the effect of the blackout in a city of myriad lights. The transformation was impressive. From the tenth floor window, the street seemed like a well of darkness with eerie sounds rising from unseen persons. Then an air warden blew his whistle and called out that an apartment on the sixth floor was showing a light through the open door of an inner room. Then another whistle and another warning. And so on. It is a difficult task to attain a complete blackout in a city of multitudinous lights.

That experience recurs to my mind as I read the Prologue of the Gospel of John: "In him was life; and the life was the light of men. And the light shines in the darkness and the darkness has not overcome it."

Now let us ask why this Christ-light refused to be put out? One reason, may I suggest, is that it is fed by the deepest and most genuine elements of our human nature. When we wish to test the genuineness of a person, just turn little children loose in his presence. Their unspoiled natures respond to what is real in a person. They hang around Jesus so that He said to their elders, "Suffer the little children to come unto me, and forbid them not, for of such is the Kingdom of Heaven." They took to Jesus because He was real. Little children take to the Christmas story likewise because it is made up of the most real things in life — the innocence of childhood, the brooding love of a mother, the generosity of the humble. Christmas is the bright day of childhood because on that day the best in life becomes the most real.

And we grown-ups, tailored by fashion, starched with our conventions, stiff with our pretense and prig — we too turn back to the simple story of Bethlehem with a sort of homesickness of soul, because deep down in our hearts we know that the goodness there revealed is the native air into which we were born. Christmas is the season when the real breaks through the crust of convention and the mask of falsity.

These Christmas holidays are not just a dreamy interlude between the stern realities of war threats and competitive business. They are holy days when the holiness and the wholesomeness of life shines through. In the birth and career of Christ we see life in its most real and genuine qualities. That is why it cannot be blacked out.



But while we cannot overcome the light that shone in Christ, we can overlook the source of it.

We now take all this light for granted without looking for the originating source.

But suppose we were to cut the wires which bring the light of Christ to the world. Suppose we were to close all the churches, stop all the Christmas celebrations, silence all mention of God and Christ in schools, radio, the press. If this were to occur, it would not be two generations before the lights would fade in our hospitals and philanthropies, our colleges and fraternal orders, yes, in all our circles of living.

Hitler boasted that he would blot Christianity out of Germany. He failed. But he brought on a tragic darkness.

The light of Christ "shines in the darkness and the darkness has not overcome it." But, alas, we can darken the rooms where we live.

"NICHOLAS MIKA: MAN OF PARTS"

"I was entranced by this place . . . I could not leave . . ."
—Po Chu-I in "The Jade Flute."

Today we were talking with a novelist, artist, photographer and industrial items—all one man: Mr. Nicholas Mika.

What had really caught our attention were various Belleville scenes printed on white tiles signed "Mika" being sold in several Belleville stores. Who was this artist who captured our local scenic beauty so well?

Several of us went to see him, expecting to visit him in his "studio" which in truth turned out to be a sizable, newly constructed factory building, on Dusenk St.

"As a matter of fact, while we employ seven people at present, it will be necessary to expand. By next year we expect to employ around twenty-five," admits this quite mannered man of rather stocky build, who took us on a conducted tour of the spacious work-room. Employees were sitting or standing at benches much as a class at school might be working about doing manual training. Some were fitting white tiles in wooden, varnished frames. Another attended a baking-oven, which looked like a small white electric stove. Others were doing silk-screening.

"Yes, we make frames for the tiles, down there," asserts Mr. Mika. "And here is the photography room. For, though I make and draw the original sketches, they are of course photographed upon the tiles, then baked, before framed, for sale."

"Then the tiles are your principle item?"

"Oh no, by no means" said Mr. Mika leading us to the finishing office, where at times he serves coffee to his clients from a tiled (with his pale-blue tings) coffee-table on which stands a coffee pot and cups, ready for use. "The tiles are really a side line, mainly for tourist attraction.

No our main industry is manufacturing industrialized parts by silk-screening process. We do the silk-work that are on your radio, your TV sets, your telephone. Also all kinds of stickers used on your car and post-ers.

"Yes, you might say this is a fairly new branch of modern industry, though in large cities throughout the States there are plants that employ thousands in silk-screened work. Silk screening itself, however, is a very old process, imported by the Chinese thousands of years ago, when they wove their screens with bumgshair. Then Germany in a recent century became interested, and today Frankfurt is a very advanced centre in this field."

"How did I become interested? Well to begin with, back in the Ukraine where I was born, my father had a large printing business. Ink you might say is in my blood. I attended Art School at Krakow for four years, studied languages at the University for two years and journalism for two years. I have written and had published four novels. (Indeed, for two years my articles on The Story of Stamps ran in the Ontario Intelligencer.)

On my way from the Ukraine I met my future wife in Germany, and when I arrived in Quebec, I looked at the map of Ontario, put my finger on Belleville, because I liked the name. Upon arriving here, I found-I liked it, and when I had several exhibitions here one of my paintings which seemed to sell well, I refused to go elsewhere to sell them. Belleville suited me perfectly. I became a draftsman at the Bata Shoe Company and there I worked for eleven years). My fiance came from Germany and we were married in 1950 in the United Church here.

Looking for a hobby, aside from my work, I noted in a magazine one day, a do-it-yourself kit for silk-screening. All for twenty-five dollars. I decided to try it, worked in my basement and found it absorbing. For fun I made various things such as Christmas cards, selling some and more each time, until I became convinced there might be a future in this work for me, and as you see, this is the result. My wife and I run it together and though hard work it is interesting, and we very happy. No wonder we think Belleville a wonderful place in which to live."

In giving up another way of life and coming to Canada to begin a new way which has flourished so well, is enriching to us all. It seems an excellent note as we end an old year, with which to begin a new one. A Happy New Year, To One And All!

Stories of Famous Hymns

WONDERFUL FOUNTAIN THAT CLEANSETH FROM SIN

Wonderful fountain that cleanseth from sin,
Wonderful comfort, abiding within,
Peace rolling in like the waves of the sea;
Wonderful freedom, when Christ makes us free.

Wonderful promises, meeting my need,
Wonderful answers, my prayers far exceed;
Wonderful help for the work of each hour;
Strength for the conflict, victorious power.

Wonderful mansion that shineth so far,
Lit by my Saviour, eternity's Star;
There I shall praise Him with Edna's bright throng,
Wonderful country, O wonderful song!

Chorus
Wonderful, wonderful mercy I sing,
Wonderful grace of my wonderful King;
Wonderful favor from Heaven above,
Wonderful mercy, wonderful love.

Two Philadelphia hymn-makers — Miss Eliza Edmunds Hewitt and Mr. B.D. Ackley — collaborated to produce this beloved gospel hymn.

Miss Hewitt, who contributed the words, was born in Philadelphia on June 28, 1851 and did most of her song-writing during the latter part of the nineteenth century. After graduating from high school, she became a teacher but her life-long and work were hampered for many years by a spinal ailment which often kept her confined to her home.

Later, however, she recovered sufficiently to take a course in English literature and in the years that followed she wrote a continuing stream of hymns which attracted wide interest. Many of these are still very precious to present-day Christians.

Mr. Ackley collaborated with his brother, A.H. Ackley, to write many well-loved religious gospel hymns in A "When The Night Is O'er", "I'll Tell To All The Wond'rful That God Is Love", "In The Service Of The King" and "Jesus, I Am Coming Home Today".

Mr. B.D. Ackley served for many years as private secretary and also as pianist for the famous evangelist, "Billy" Sunday.

SPEAKING of MANNERS

PATRICIA LEWIS

GREET THE NEW YEAR WISELY

Ring the old year out and the new year in, if you will, but make sure that reckless celebration doesn't leave as unpleasant ringing in your ears.

New Year's Eve is a time for merriment which presumably should start you off with a clean slate for 1963. But unrestrained joy, and hoopla can push you into the new year with more hangovers than you expected.

The bad taste in your mouth on New Year's Day can be a natural aftermath of too much food and drink the night before. If there are sour overtones, usually you have only yourself to blame.

So be prepared for the big night out. But forewarned is half the battle. If you keep the following resolutions in mind, maybe you won't have to make any new ones the day after:

Don't try to be the life of the party. The muscles in your body are a year older and perhaps they won't take kindly to the gyrations of the Twist. In fact, play safe — don't engage in anything too strenuous unless you have complete health insurance.

If you're playing hostess, remember that New Year's Eve is a long, long night. Watch your guests carefully and, when necessary, keep the drinks short. An overly generous serving is not necessarily the most successful.

Try to enjoy the spirit of the occasion and your associates and friends. That's the real reason for getting together on New Year's Eve. Showing off beyond your capacity is not going to make you any happier and just might have the reverse effect.

Don't decide that now is the time to tell your husband what's really wrong with him. And vice versa. Your wife, as hostess, your friends and neighbors — and the boss, particularly, if it happens to be present.

Make it your last drink when you feel you've had enough. Drink coffee for your nightcap. Don't drive if you've had more than enough, and listen to your wife when she offers to drive. It might be the best offer you've ever had.

If you remember only half of the above, you'll probably have a Happy New Year. And that's just what I wish every one of you.

QUESTION:

Would you Le kind enough to assist me in finding a recipe for bran muffins . . . You may be interested in my recipe for Melting Moments — quite different from those in your column and rated delicious by my friends.

(Contributor Jessie C.) 2 oz. margarine (¼ cup), 2 oz. lard (¼ cup), 3 oz. sugar (¼ cup minus 1 tablespoon), ½ egg, ½ teaspoon almond essence, 5 oz. flour (1 cup plus 1 tablespoon unsifted).

Cream fats and sugar together. Add egg and almond essence. Beat in flour. Roll into small rounds and roll in crushed cornflakes. Flatten slightly. Bake in moderate oven (350 deg.) for 10 to 15 minutes . . . Jessie C.

QUESTION:

I can't seem to have success with Bran Muffins . . . Allene L.

ANSWER:

I am mailing to both of you girls C.M.'s highly recommended recipe for Bran Muffins. Here is another good recipe.

Soak the bran in milk in a mixing bowl for 5 minutes. Mix molasses and shortening, and add the well-beaten egg. Mix — do not beat. Combine with the soaked bran. Sift the flour, baking powder and salt together, and add to the mixture all at once. Stir just enough to blend the ingredients. The mixture need not be smooth. Fill greased muffin tins ⅔ full and bake at 400 deg. Fahr. for a little less than half a hour. Makes 10 to 12 medium muffins.

Thank you, Jessie, for your version of Melting Momenta.

LETTER:

It would be my pleasure to share this recipe with you as it has proved so popular with our guests. I first served it with a holiday turkey and ham dinner and it has been requested many times since.

Charlotte Whitton Chosen Newsiest Woman of '62

BY THE CANADIAN PRESS

Charlotte Whitton, sometimes described as the ringleader of Canada's biggest free circus, has been chosen Canada's newsiest woman of 1962.

The sixth time women's editors of Canadian daily newspapers have selected the controversial 66-year-old Ottawa mayor for the title in a Canadian Press poll.

She first became woman of the year in 1951, her first year as mayor, and was named again in 1952, 1953, 1960 and 1961—other years in which she presided over the often noisy proceedings of the capital's city administration.

In November she was again elected for a two-year term with a 6,000-vote margin over lawyer Sam Berger, the same man she defeated in 1960.

Her presence adds spice to the meetings of the Ottawa board of control where much of the language used in arguments is strong and where Miss Whitton has been in almost constant battle with controllers.

The lively activities reached their peak on Nov. 13 when the mayor and a male controller engaged in a display of fisticuffs following what Miss Whitton said was a caustic remark that she wasn't going to take sitting down.

FIRST MINISTER

Runner-up in the woman-of-the-year balloting was Mrs. Claire Hoy of Montreal - Canadian of Montreal, 38 - year - old lawyer and longtime champion of the rights of Quebec women. In 1962 she became the first woman cabinet minister in the province's history.

Another receiving support was Mrs. Hugh John Flemming, wife of the minister of national revenue and founder of the International Kindness Club, a children's organization that promotes kindness to animals.

Actor Whitton and Mrs. Casgrain also placed one-two in the public affairs category of the CP poll.

Literature and art — Mrs. Sheila Burnford, author from Port Arthur, Ont., whose first book became a Canadian bestseller.

Stage, screen, radio and TV —Actress Kate Reid.

Music — Opera singer Teresa Stratas.

Sports—Swimmer Mary Stewart.

CHILDREN'S BOOK

Mrs. Burnford, a doctor's wife ahd mother of three, won the Canadian Library Association's 1962 medal for the best children's book in English, The Incredible Journey, a fascinating story of a trek by three family pets determined to be reunited with their masters. The book topped the list of best-selling fiction for several months.

Kate Reid, 31-year-old Toronto actress who has been called the "Queen of Canadian theatre," was applauded for her appearances at the Stratford Shakespearean Festival as Lady Macbeth in Macbeth and as Katherine in The Taming of the Shrew.

Miss Stratas, 23-year-old Metropolitan Opera star from Ottawa, Ont., and Toronto and the headliner at the 1962 Canadian National Exhibition grandstand show, was chosen winner in the music category for the second year in a row.

Mary Stewart, 17 - year - old Vancouver swimmer who holds the world record for the 100-metre butterfly and won a gold medal in her specialty at the British Empire Games in Australia, was also picked for the second straight year.

THE FAMILY COUNCIL

Rose V. — My affair isn't hurting anybody.

Stuart S. — The man will drop her and then where will she be?

Rose V. — I'm close to 40 but people take me for about 30. I've been separated from my husband for ten years now, although neither of us has pressed for a divorce. There's no real reason for one now, despite what my brother says.

Four years ago I met a wonderful man in the office where I was working. He is single and has made it clear he intends to remain so. I have accepted his terms, and from there on have had the only real happiness of my life. We spend our vacations on trips together, run off to Atlantic City frequently for weekends, and have a beautiful relationship.

My brother is after me to end the friendship or to insist upon marriage. There's no good reason for him to do either.

Stuart S. — I'm mortified at what Rose is doing. She thinks nothing of staying overnight at my fellow's apartment, walking up and down the streets of my neighborhood with him, and encouraging tongues to wag whenever she meets people who know us.

Her affair can lead to no good. What if she became pregnant? She says she may refuse to take care of her through some common-law-wife arrangement. But with a guy who's in the habit of ducking all responsibility, I'll bet she'd find herself pretty much on the spot when she discover she's several years older than he. Her cosmetics can't hide the truth forever. The whole business is dishonest and immoral.

The bottom will fall out of Rose's rickety life and then she'll come crying to me.

The Council: People like Rose usually wind up crying on some one, or into a pillow. And the memory of passionate — but unloving — moments isn't enough to stay the flow of tears over any length of years.

The institution of marriage wasn't an overnight invention. It was arrived at by society as the best arrangement for stable community, and it's a "catchall" for answering vital human needs. Above all, it's a protection par excellence for a woman. So my woman who, like Rose, just chucks it overboard is like a navigator deliberately throwing off the rudder of his ship. Next comes shipwreck.

Legally separated from her husband, Rose is free to step out on dates and play the field. All's fair if it helps her set her sights right and decide upon a sound future course. But to mix all the cliches, she's building a house of cards on sand while playing with fire!

In addition to grieving and humiliating Stuart, she's turning herself into a sitting-duck for heartbreak. First, let her forget that "gallant" commonlaw-wife promise from her boyfriend. That's trite. No one contract will "hold water" while Rose's marriage contract is still in limbo. Next, she must remember that no two people having an affair will want to end it at the same split-second. Usually one tires of the deal before the other. And, in this case, the playboy may well be the "one" especially since Rose has tried to deceive him about her age. Also, Rose has agreed to his selfish terms which lets him get with nothing to lose, but leave her with a smashed marriage, a smudged reputation, and a sad vista.

Our advice to Rose is to take a cold shower and then face the cold facts. The man doesn't love her. If he did, he would be offering her some real security. Perhaps the biggest attraction for him is that he can't have her. If she ends her marriage, he is readily available, he'll probably "chicken out" of the affair in the end and she'll be instead, and do what's right for a change — right for your marriage, right for your brother, and right for yourself, Rose?

Seamed Detail

By VERA WINSTON

Slot seaming is the dominant detail of this smart dress, right for resort and ready for spring later on. The fabric is heavy, crease-resistant linen in a lustrous yellow banana shade.

The seaming divides the dress, which is basically a shift, into a tunic effect. The wide sash with a centre seam is placed low at the hips and also serves to accentuate the illusion of a tunic.

The frock is also available in medium blue.

15 and the settlement of cost left to the courts.

He also referred reporters to this section from his official statement:

"It must be emphasized strongly that this is not an offer made with a view to bargaining. It has been felt that it would not be fair to the shareholders to make an offer that was not definitive and might open the door to speculation.

"Furthermore, in all cases where it may become necessary to have compensation fixed judicially, Quebec Hydro will avail itself of recent jurisprudence to the effect that an addition 10 per cent for compulsory dispossession is not to be added to an estimate indemnity."

MAKES OTHER OFFERS

The announcement also made the following offers for other shares:

Shawinigan Water and Power class A $30.25 per share;

Dominion Canada Power Company Limited $56.75 per share;

Gatineau Power Company $33 per share;

Lower St. Lawrence Power Company $37 per share;

Northern Quebec Power Company $43 per share;

Northern Quebec Power Company Limited per share.

Mr. Lesage said shares of the Quebec Hydro Corporation are included in Shawinigan's offer.

A price for three remaining companies—Shawinigan Chemicals, Electrique de Farnham and La Compagnie Electrique de la Sarre — was not immediately announced because of lack of information.

The premier said it would be "appreciably less" than $1,000,000.

The offers will not become operative unless accepted by holders of 51 per cent of the outstanding stock of each company except Shawinigan Water and Power and Quebec Power—both controlled by Shawinigan—the offers will expire when shareholders outside Shawinigan.

CARRIES OUT POLICY

Mr. Lesage said the offers were made "to implement as precisely as possible" the policy announced when he sought a snap general election on the expropriation issue. At that time he said shareholders would receive "fair compensation to be fixed in taking into strict account the legitimate interests of the shareholders and the taxpayers."

His Liberal party — first elected in 1960—was returned to power in the Nov. 5 election with a nine-seat increase in its majority. It has 63 of the 95 legislature seats. The opposition Union Nationale has 31 and there is one Independent.

He campaigned on the promise that state control of electricity would be the basis of legislation.

Minn., to arrange a tour for a group of Russian farmers.

Among other points, the students visited a cathedral, a Russian Orthodox church, a synagogue, the legislative buildings and Communist party headquarters and met with the approval of Prof. Peters.

Following the trip, Mr. Orlikow said:

"We then went to Communist headquarters in Moscow. Ross, the local president, was there and gave a longish talk on the Communist party, the Canadian foreign policy and the meaning of the Communist party.

"Questions were asked and this involved another 20 minutes for discussion. . . .

"I am not a Communist and the only purpose in seeing Mr. Ross and his headquarters was, quite frankly, because I thought this was something these students could get a kick out of."

Rev. O. J. McInerney of St. Edward's Church and Rev. K. L. Childs of St. Paul's Cathedral were the priests who signed the petition. They said in interviews they had not talked to Mr. Orlikow, but believed that by his actions he had shown political feelings toward the Communist party.

Your Car

Car Requires Extra Care During Winter

By EUGENE B. MILMOE

The battery which adequately served your needs during normal warmer weather may not be nearly strong enough to shoulder the burdens imposed by zero temperatures. Trying to squeeze an extra few weeks or months' service from such a battery only invites unnecessary headaches and expense, especially if your car is one of the automatic transmission models which cannot be push-started.

The same general caution applies to spark plugs. Although they may not be fouled, eroded or off-gap enough to prevent engine operation, they may be incapable of furnishing the hot, fat spark needed for fast starts on frigid mornings.

The manifold heat-control valve is another winter trouble spot. If it sticks in the open position, you may not be aware of it during warm months. In cold weather, however, the condition will not only cause starting trouble, but the engine will warm up very slowly, thereby losing excessive wear, sluggish operation and a resultant poor gasoline mileage.

• • •

From F.J.: "My brakes were relined recently and now they squeak. Would this be due to a hard type of lining?"

(A) It might. Incorrect adjustment or poor metallic contact are also possibilities.

• • •

N.G. writes: "Although I keep tire pressure exactly what it should be, my car leans slightly when brakes are applied. Any suggestions?"

(A) A sagging front spring could be at fault.

E.N. asks: "When slipping on ice or snow, you can get moving, they say, by putting on the hand brake and accelerating. Not with my car. When the hand brake is on, the car won't budge — even on dry pavement."

(A) The idea is to gain traction by applying the hand brake lightly, while feeding gas slowly.

• • •

From M.J.: "I tried regular gas in my engine which is supposed to get premium. Sure enough, spark ping resulted until I switched back to premium. Any theories to causes this ping? Vibration?"

(A) Yes. The fuel doesn't burn properly. When the spark occurs, it begins to burn slowly and unevenly, and ends as if suddenly explodes, causing the knock or ping.

Garden Notes

Plants for the Average Home

By FLORA M. SAVILLE

Pothos, Philodendrons and peperomias submit well to the dry warm air of the average home. They ask for a minimum of light, fresh air, water and heat.

If the indoor gardener were to limit his plant collection to these three families he could still fill his home with attractive hanging array of fine foliage.

Peppermias come from South America and adapt readily to a coffee table, mantel or windowsill.

In their jungle home some grow as epiphities (a plant that grows on another plant but is not a parasite). Others crawl or spread over stumps or roots and on jungle floors. Still others act like succulents. They must not be over watered and need some light, not necessarily sunlight.

Potting soil should be like that of African violets, rich in humus, good drainage and a little chopped charcoal.

A-WIDE CHOICE

Available are fifteen or more named varieties of the genus peromia obtusifolia silver edge, P. pixie, or Astrid, P. hederifolia (Ivyleaf), P. little fantasy, P. rubella, P. sweetheart, P. glabrella, P. tunaeformis, P. blackie, P. verticullata, P. glabella variegata, P. fosteriana, P. moneyana, P. emerald ripple, P. metalica.

P. glabella varigata has very pale green foliage with a white margin, grown in a good light this makes a beautiful contrast plant.

Philodendron (araceae) are members of the arum family. They come from southern America. These plants do well in poor light and can go for weeks without water. Lush green leaves make these handsome house plants.

Philodendron means "tree loving" and the name was bestowed because in their native homes they twine around trees to reach the light that filters through the tree canopy. Some long aerial roots have two uses, they hold the plants to the tree and gather food and moisture from the tree bark and from the humid air of the jungle.

There are many forms which are self-heading and have stocks only a few inches long. These forms grow in compact groups but most of them are vines.

Those who explore will delight in searching for new varieties and the Florida hybridizers are at work to bring out new hybrids.

TWINING VARIETIES

Twining varieties can be supported on a piece of bark, a moss pole or on most any wire. These are called totems. They can be trained to a pole or allowed to trail over the side of the pot to adorn a mantle or bookcase. Some of the self heading varieties need a piece of bark to lean on.

They can be grown in water but do much better in soil. The same soil mix as above. The pots need an inch of gravel in for porous soil. When the self heading varieties get too tall, or the bottom leaves drop off, no hesitation about cutting them back. This will force the plant to throw up new growth to replace the old. Leave the plants in the same pot for one year, repot for several years. Feed with foliage fod or liquid fertilizer. These plants are more beautiful with the years.

You may be able to root the top which you cut off in water, perlite, or water and so have two plants.

Your florist will have some of these Philodendrons and can get others for you. Philodendron cannaefolium, a fine growing plant for a foyer. P. oxicardium, leaf petiole (leaf stock), P. guttiferum is also a fine plant for usually sold on a totem. Wind the plant around and around to fill the totem with foliage. P. McNellianum is self heading.

Labor Urged to Be Ready For Sweeping Changes

OTTAWA (CP) — Claude Jodoin, president of the Canadian Labor Congress, today urged organized labor to be ready to adopt to sweeping changes in scientific methods, in production techniques and in society itself.

In a New Year's message, the head of the 1,050,000 - member CLC said the trade union movement must be alert to these changes and be prepared to adopt new methods and new approaches to meet them.

"Unless we maintain an alertness there is always a danger that the effect of changes will be upon us before we realize it, and certainly before we plan to meet new conditions and circumstances.

"It is quite obvious now that we have not been sufficiently aware of the real nature of changes which are taking place now.

"There has been too much tendency to support the idea that what is happening in industry is merely an extension of what has been happening since the first wheel was turned, that everything will eventually take care of itself. This is not the case.

TIME RUNNING OUT

Mr. Jodoin said that the CLC is fully aware of the change in its pressure for steps to improve labor - management consultation and for the participation of labor, together with other groups, in contributing toward planning under government auspices.

He noted that in the last year there has been a considerable change in some management representatives' view of need for better labor - management relations. There has also been a new interest in the use of planning by government.

The labor leader saw ground for encouragement in the government's programs to meet the changing conditions resulting from automation and other technological advances, as well as to provide a forum for economic consultation at a high level.

Time is running out. While other countries have been moving ahead Canada has been standing still. We cannot afford to let another year go by without taking decisive action."

On the international front, Mr. Jodoin said Canada's relationship with the Commonwealth and the United States is being reviewed. "The policies we adopt during 1963 may prove to be significant in this regard."

He said other serious decisions are faced in other fields of international relations as well —citing "a very immediate need" for clarification of Canada's policies on nuclear arms, aid to needy countries abroad and in dealing with other important external problems.

"While we should take care not to become unrealistic, there are signs that offer some hope of a slight thaw in the cold war," he said, citing the renewal of disarmament talks in Geneva and the growing exchange of views by the great powers.

"Certainly if 1963 brought a relaxation of tensions and enabled us to direct into more constructive channels the tremendous forces that are required now for defence this would be a great year in the history of mankind.

Fidel Castro

Castro told the Americans to make themselves at home in Havana and go sightseeing if they wanted. Prattyman mentioned he would like to see the home of the late author Ernest Hemingway, who spent many of his winters on his farm in the Havana suburbs.

"Come with me," replied Castro and the tour was under way.

The tour passed the Cuban flashing port being constructed with Soviet aid, and which came under fire in the U.S. as a possible submarine base. Castro identified it and said: "You may have read about this."

At Hamlpney's home Castro explained how it was being preserved as a museum.

Upon returning to East Havana, Castro stepped from his car and walked ahead of the touring group, pointing out a new school, a shopping centre and the apartment buildings yet under construction.

Within minutes two or three hundred Cubans had crowded around, trying to touch Castro's uniform or shake his hand.

Bodyguards made no attempt to hold the crowd back.

As the tour swung back toward the city, Castro told of new hospitals and of doctors being trained to staff them. He told also of many new schools, of strides in eliminating illiteracy. He said 5,000 teachers a year are being trained.

As the cars breezed through the streets, most of the people recognized Castro. Their faces turned to grins and they waved, tried to run alongside the car, to reach inside to touch their hero.

Others, however, did not recognize Castro. They stared icily ahead, as though they were unable to see the cars and the mob of people.

Castro apparently realized the Americans had sensed the situation.

He turned to me and said: "The work we are doing is much more popular with the rural people, the farmers. We have not made everyone in the city happy."

DORIS CLARK

DEAR DORIS—After reading your article this morning, I was never so disgusted in all my life. Telling that woman "Bravo! You did the right thing."

Did you ever come to any conclusion as to why he was drinking or mistreating her? Why is the neighbor taking such a big interest? If she would only pay more attention to her husband than her neighbor, she wouldn't be in this predicament.

The woman, even before Christ was born, was the home-maker under any circumstances. She is to love and understand her husband. Not to call him down and ridicule him. This woman should go back home where she belongs and make something of her marriage.

Anybody can walk out, but why run away? Life itself is full of grief and misfortunes. So why don't you start at home to understand and accept?—DISGUSTED.

DEAR DISGUSTED—Thanks for writing. There are two sides to every story and you can't judge on one by another. Did you notice that "Badly Hurt" said that she had given him "chance after chance!" Surely there's a limit to patience.

DEAR DORIS—I am a woman of 47, in good health, with no children to keep me at home. I would appreciate it very much if you could tell me what voluntary services there are in which a woman could feel useful.

I am a good stenographer, but my husband objects to my going back to office work, even part time (for pay, that is). However, not being the "coffee party" type, I'm dying by inches of loneliness and a feeling of uselessness.—FRUSTRATED.

DEAR FRUSTRATED—You and thousands of others. And it is "a little death" when you are not living up to the best that's in you. You could organize a hospital visiting service, a reception office, a free taxi service for the sick, a hobby group.

For the job to suit your talents, talk to the Children's Aid Society, 33 West Moira Street, Belleville.

RARE, MEDIUM, WELL-DONE

By GEO. H. CARVER, Sports Editor

Professional football's longest hangover comes to an end on Sunday in Yankee Stadium. Or will it?

A year ago the New York Giants, proud champions of the National Football League's eastern division, ran confidently out on the gridiron to face the Green Bay Packers, the mighty mastodons of the western division in combat for the league championship.

Two hours later the pro football world was shocked. The proud Giants staggered off the field bruised, bloodied and bowed. But the humiliation was far worse than any physical hurt. The Packers, magnificent in their matchless glory, had not only won the championship but had rubbed the salt of "insult" into the wound of defeat with an overwhelming 37-0 victory.

Were the Giants that bad and were the Packers that good? These were the questions of aftermath. This season's facts, figures and performance supply the answers.

The Giants with a 37-0 nightmare of humiliation haunting them proved to a wondering world of fandom that they were not that bad. Sunday they hope to prove the Packers were not or are not that good.

For the Giants shook off the gremlins of memory, roared back to repeat their eastern division championship and again hurled the gauntlet of challenge at the feet of the mighty Packers.

A grimly determined Gotham team takes the field tomorrow confident it can wipe out the humiliation and nightmare of last New Year's Day's prelude to dethrone the "Green Giants" with "sound football, blocking and tackling—and no garbage."

The days of a bad twelve-month dream are over, they say. "This is another year. It should be an even game. The chips are down. We're fired up. We're out to beat the Packers."

The experts figure that several factors enter into this spin of the tastodons. Some figure the weather since last year when the clubs played in Green Bay for the title, the Packers seemed to grow stronger because of the heavy snow and Arctic winds that swept the countryside.

But this voice in the football wilderness goes along with the opinion that the key to victory lies in the quarterbacks. Bart Starr of the Packers and Tom Gimbel "Athlete of the Year," hailing Y. A. Tittle. Both approach the superman class and are master craftsmen.

There is little to choose between these signal-calling passing aces of the championship duel. Tittle probably is a little more daring and a better long passer. Starr is the more accurate passer and a faultless signal-caller.

The Giants pass so efficiently that their ground attack seems to be something designed to later just to keep the opposition from zeroing in on Tittle. The Packers hit hardest on the ground and use the pass to keep the road from getting too rocky.

The 1963 record shows Starr with 285 passes, good for 178 completions and 2,438 yards. He has averaged 3.55 yards a completion, tossed for twelve touchdowns and had only nine aerials intercepted.

Tittle completed 290 or 375 throws, gaining 3,224 yards. He tossed for a record 33 touchdowns and averaged 8.60 yards. Twenty of his tosses were grabbed off by the opposition.

But Starr appreciates and makes the most of the Packers' running ability. Tittle's flair keeps the Giant offence always alert. But many of Starr's passes develop on plays that start out looking like runs. Watch him tomorrow.

The battle starts at 2.05 p.m., Eastern Standard Time, tomorrow and will be televised by the National Broadcasting Company. It will be carried on the Dominion TV network of the Canadian Broadcasting Corporation.

Wings Blast Royals

Flyers Rap Baby Habs

Those pesky Niagara Falls Flyers are making things uncomfortable for Montreal Junior Canadiens again.

The Flyers rapped Montreal 5-4 Friday night to move within one point of the Canadiens in the Ontario Hockey Association's provincial Junior A and standings.

The win vaulted Niagara Falls past the idle Peterborough Petes who had held second place by one point before Friday night's game.

And the fourth-place Hamilton Red Wings moved to within two points of the Petes in other action by blasting the last-place Guelph Royals 8-4.

A wild brawl broke up the Guelph game with half a minute to play and referee Danny Poland handed out eight minor penalties.

Red Wings' Bob Wall and Royals' Bob Figer led the swinging, and both goaltenders got into the act.

National Hockey League fans had a lot of news to mull over today, even though no games were played Friday night.

The biggest development came from New York, where the fifth - place Rangers announced George (Red) Sullivan, who left the team a playing a year and a half ago, has returned as coach.

The fiery redhead took over coaching duties from Muzzy (Muzz) Patrick, Rangers vice-president and general manager.

In Detroit, manager - coach Sid Abel of the Red Wings said goalie Terry Sawchuk will be in the nets tonight when the team plays Canadiens in Montreal.

Defenceman Marcel Pronovost, who missed the Wings' game Wednesday in Toronto with a pulled stomach muscle, will play tonight. Val Fonteyne, the Wings' injured penalty-killer will be replaced by Bo Elik, a 33-year-old left winger with Canada's Edmonton Mercury club of the Western Hockey League.

And in Montreal, NHL president Clarence Campbell slapped a $200 fine on defenceman Bill Gadsby of the Red Wings for pushing and arguing with referee John Ashley in a game in New York Dec. 16.

Meanwhile, Rangers' Andy Bathgate and Toronto's Frank Mahovlich will be battling in weekend games not only for the league scoring leadership, but for a $500 bonus from the league as well.

The NHL announced earlier this week the player leading the scoring race at the end of 35 games will get a $500 bonus. Another $500 bonus will be given to the player leading at the end of the season, who will also get the regular $1,000 award.

So with another game to play against Canadiens in New York Sunday—Bathgate has a one-point edge over Mahovlich. He has 37 points to Mahovlich's 36.

The Big M has two more games to play to reach the 35-game mark. Leafs play host to Chicago Black Hawks tonight in their only weekend game. Toronto and Chicago are tied for first place in the league standings with 60 points, two more than third-place Detroit.

In the only other weekend game, last-place Boston plays in Chicago Sunday night.

Sullivan, 33, comes to the Rangers from a position as playing-coach with Baltimore Clippers of the American Hockey League. He is the second ex-Ranger to join the campaign. Milt Schmidt replaced Phil Watson at the helm of the last-place Bruins in mid-November.

The salary terms and duration of Sullivan's contract were not announced.

Sullivan said Friday at a press conference he plans no immediate changes in personnel.

"What I want is for them to play a little rougher—play a tougher game defensively," said the red-headed firebrand.

Sullivan started out in the Boston Bruins organization with Hershey in the American League in 1946. He set a scoring record of 119 points. He was sold to the Chicago Black Hawks, where he played two years.

Patrick traded Wally Hergesheimer to get Sullivan. Sullivan in a straight swap in the summer of 1956. Sullivan was playing-coach of the now-disbanded Kitchener - Waterloo Beavers of the Eastern Professional League last season, and the team finished third. He is married, has three children and lives in Peterborough.

Juniors Whip Gananoque

By GARRY ALEXANDER
Staff Sportswriter

Belleville Junior "B's" sported Gananoque the opening goal of the game, then charged back to grab a 5-2 victory over the Islanders in a lively OHA Eastern Junior Hockey League fixture here last night.

With the addition of Pete Weston to the lineup, coach Don Hutchison's locals got rolling at full tilt most of the evening and the club was an full value for the win. Weston is home on holidays from Toronto University and is expected to play with the club whenever available.

It was learned last night that Sunday's game between Belleville and Trenton, Ont., has been postponed. The Trenton team is attempting to have its remaining home games rescheduled at the other teams' rinks.

Belleville led 2-1 at the end of the first period before about 300 fans last night. They added the only two goals of the middle session and closed the scoring after the Islanders cut the score to 4-2 in the third.

Stu Muirhead and Weston were the sparkplugs of the victors' attack. Muirhead scored his club's first three goals and assisted on another. Weston drew assists on two markers and fired the clinching goal late in the third. Beatt Billy Rushlow scored the other Belleville marker while single assists went to Paul Zakos, Gary Reid, Tom Rutherford and Gerry Jones.

Jim Gratton and Wayne Liddell were the Gananoque marksmen. Smoothie Dave Young and Doug Rogers earned assists.

Belleville drew 18 penalties, compared to the losers' 11. Most were minors except for a pair of majors to Duvall for fights with Gananoque bedman Jim McGlade in the second period and Hugh Hall in the dying seconds of the game. Duvall also drew an automatic misconduct with his second major sentence.

Sam Haskill turned in another steady performance in the Belleville net, making key stops when called on, as both he and counterpart John Bristow bore ed out some toughies.

Gananoque's first goal came with Belleville a man short at 2.51 but Muirhead tied it by deflecting home Zakos' shooting drive at 14.01. The losers were short a player on this one.

Muirhead potted the disc under Bristow from in close while one of his own mates was off to jail. Belleville led 2-1 at that good at 17.34 of the first. Early in the second Muirhead completed his hat trick after beating the defence and picking a top corner of the net at the end of a play. Rushlow finished off a play with Rutherford, after the Gan defence had given the puck away, upping the score to 4-1.

Liddell got behind the Belleville defence to score when both teams were five aside through more foolish penalties at 7.21 of the third. Weston closed out the when he took a short pass uncovered in front and whipped it home at 18.21.

Gananoque: Bristow, Young, McGlashan, Young, Higgins, Wheeler, Mantrop, Liddell, Guilre, Rogers, Adair, Warren, Dempster, Hall, Pritchard, McGlade.

Belleville: Haskill, Reid, Zakos, Weston, Muirhead, Jones, Ethier, Rowland, Duvall, Rutherford; Rushlow, Harkness, Adams, Goodfellow, Moreau.

Maroons Dump Rams

Athletics Nip Dogs

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Woodstock Athletics put a leash on Stratford Kroehlers' Bulldogs Friday night and clambered back to within three points of first place in the Ontario Hockey Association Senior series.

The second - place Athletics took a 6-5 overtime win from the league - leading Bulldogs preventing Windsor from opening a seven-point lead atop the standings.

Chatham Maroons, meanwhile, kept pace with Woodstock and overtime hero Lumbie Jack in third place as a result of an 11-3 shellacking they handed the last-place Sarnia Rams.

The hapless Rams—who have won only two games all season—are drawing poor crowds, once threatened to drop out of the league after being taken very disputes to court, but are a boon to the league's marksmen.

Every team player but goaltender Al Bennett picked up at least one point in Friday night's slaughter. Sarnia Coach George Aitken and Joe Malo scored two goals apiece. Ted Hodgson, Jack Douglas, Bob Pole, George Ualtalo and Gus Mortson were the other marksmen.

Packers Touchdown Over Giants

By JACK HAND

NEW YORK (AP) — Green Bay Packers remain one-touchdown favorites over New York Giants in Sunday's National Football League title game with a chance of a heavy field at Yankee Stadium.

The weatherman's revised forecast called for possible snow, mixed with rain tonight, rain Saturday morning and partial clearing in the afternoon. The field, covered against the weather, was firm for the two clubs' final drills Friday.

Vince Lombardi, coach of the defending champion Packers, said Paul Hornung's injured knee was "perfect" but hedged on if he would start the golden boy of 1961 at halfback.

"I don't know better about that Sunday," said Lombardi Friday night.

The other boy (Tom Moore) has been playing well, too. It all depends on how he (Hornung) feels at 1.30 Sunday morning."

Lombardi said Jerry Kramer, who left over the placement and field-goal kicking jobs after the regular season, will continue. Hornung has been kicking this week. Kramer is a Green Bay but Lombardi said he was not kicking well. Ethner Kramer or Willie Wood will kick off for the Packers.

Asked if he preferred mud or a fast field, Lombardi said, "I don't care."

'AS LONG AS IT'S DRY'

In reply to the same type of question, coach Allie Sherman of the Giants had said: "I don't care about the weather as long as it's dry and doesn't rain or sleet."

Most observers felt the Packers would gain a decided advantage in heavy going. Their offence is based primarily on the power running of fullback Jim Taylor and Hornung or Moore behind the strong blocking of the offensive line, anchored by centre Jim Ringo.

The Giants, on the other hand, are primarily a passing team. Y. A. Tittle, their bald quarterback, set a league record by throwing 33 touchdown passes this season and is primed for superior effort to erase the memory of last year's 37-0 rout by the Packers when he had four passes intercepted.

GAME IS SELLOUT

It is a complete sellout with 64,981 fans paying a gross gate of $615,586 plus another $615,00 for radio - television network rights and another $17,500 for local radio and films bringing the net of each gross total close to $1,250,000.

The winning share will be approximately $6,000 a player and the losers' shares will be close to $4,000. Pete Rozelle, according to the estimates of commissioner Pete Rozelle.

The Green Bay Packers wound up with a 13-1 record. The Giants, representing the Eastern Conference, had nine.

BALTIMORE (AP) — Sandy McGregor's goal at 2.33 of the overtime period gave Baltimore Clippers a 2-1 American Hockey League victory over Pittsburgh Hornets Friday night before 5,223 fans.

The victory moved Clippers into a fourth-place tie with Buffalo Bisons, playing his last game for the Clippers before taking over the reins today as coach of the Boston Rangers, and Mel Pearson, assisted on the goal at 3:42.

The visitors tied the count late in the second period on a long shot by Jerry Odrowski, which was deflected into the net unintentionally by Guidolin. Baltimore's new assistant coach.

Neither team was able to score in the third period and McGregor's winning goal enabled the Clippers to snap a six-game losing streak. Pearson also assisted on the final goal.

Pay Day Looms For Liston

NEW YORK (AP)—Promoter Tom Bolan had good news Friday for heavyweight champion Sonny Liston—he is going to get his money soon and a rematch with Floyd Patterson is close to the signing stage.

Bolan, attorney and president of Championship Sports Incorporated, said "I'm pretty sure I should be resolved in the next couple of days" on the title fight in either Baltimore or Las Vegas for March or April.

Bolan said he had a meeting with government officials on Thursday night and was told the money held up by the government from the first fight will be released soon.

"About a million and a half dollars has been tied up," said Bolan.

Liston has more than $200,000 due and he had told Bolan "no money, no fight."

"He'll get the money before the fight," said Bolan.

1962 Was Outstanding Year For Canada's Athletes

BACK HOME — Swimmers Mary Stewart of Vancouver and Dick Pound of Montreal were smiles of success when they arrived in Vancouver Sunday from their gold-medal triumphs at the British Empire Games in Australia. Pound says she will continue swimming. (CP Wirephoto).

Canada's amateur athletes can look back to a year of almost unprecedented achievement and say, in effect, the heck with money. It doesn't buy gold medals or world titles.

The government's proposed $5,000,000-a-year aid to amateur sport and promotion of physical fitness bogged down under the pressure of an austerity program, but the amateurs went right out and emerged they belonged with the world.

Their showing in far-away places probably was the best since the lush pre-Second World War years when Canadians consistently hit the jackpot in international competition. After the war they fell into a horrible slump.

There were moments of disappointment in 1962 but, generally, they came out of the slump with brilliant performances that gave them two world titles and four gold medals.

The uprising started in the world figure-skating championships at Prague, Czechoslovakia, last spring and continued through bitter weather at the British Empire Games in Perth, Australia, in November.

SKATERS WIN MEDALS

At Prague, Don Jackson of Oshawa, Ont., won the men's title and the brother-sister team of Maria and Otto Jelinek of Bonita, Ont., took the pairs and climbing championship. Within months they deserted the amateur ranks for pro careers.

More than 100 contestants from 16 countries competed in Prague and the jury of international judges and other responsible observers rated their performances as the best in the history of world figure-skating competition.

A few months later a 72-athlete Canadian team went to Perth and won 36 gold medals in the 35-country sports extravaganza, rated second behind the Olympics in world competition.

Two went to swimmers. Mary Stewart, 17-year-old world record-holder from Vancouver in the 110-yard butterfly, won Canada's first individual gold medal for a Canadian female in the games since Marilyn Pound, 20-year-old student at Montreal's McGill University, popped eyeballs with a winning effort in the men's 110-yard freestyle. He was the dark horse of the Games.

KIDD TAKES SIX-MILE

Another universality student, distance runner, 19 - year - old Bruce Kidd of Toronto, won the six miles, picked up a third-place bronze in the mile and made a gallant stab at the gruelling 26-mile 385-yard marathon but was pulled out after 22¼ miles. The other gold went to Harold Mann of Prince George, B.C., southpaw light middleweight boxer.

There were disappointments at the Games.

Harry Jerome of Vancouver, co-world recordholder in the 100 yards and 100 metres, was considered a cinch for the sprints but he tore a muscle in his thigh halfway through the 100 final and finished last in the field of six.

Then there was the University of British Columbia eight-oared crew that had a world record of 5:30.7 over the 2,000-metre distance in the Games trials at St. Catharines in mid-August but it didn't even reach the final at Perth.

There were other stars—amateur and professional.

THE WILLARD

Bobby Hull of Chicago Black Hawks scored 50 goals to equal the National Hockey League record set 16 years ago by retired Maurice Richard of Montreal Canadiens and equalled in 1961 by Bernie Geoffrion of Canadiens.

George Dixon of Montreal Alouettes was voted the outstanding professional football player in the country.

Sue Hilton, 18, of London, Ont., became the first junior to win the Canadian women's senior and junior golf championships in the same year.

In interscholastic competition at home, it was the West by a big margin as usual.

The Westerners cleaned up in football, curling and lacrosse, split in basketball and hockey and took many of the honors in golf.

The big one was the big-shrouded Grey Cup at Toronto, the western team being the first victory of Canada's east-west football classic. The defending champion Ottawa Rough Riders squeezed out a 28-27 victory over Hamilton Tiger-Cats.

FINISHED ON SUNDAY

The contest started Saturday, Dec. 1, and the clubs got in all but nine minutes and 20 seconds of regulation time before Commissioner Sydney Halter decided to log shveloping the contest Canadian National Exhibition Stadium was too much to take.

The game resumed from that point the following afternoon with Winnipeg ahead 28-27 and the crippled Bombers held on for their fourth Cup triumph in six years.

Winnipeg St. Vital Bulldogs walloped Toronto East York Argonauts 29-7 in the intermediate final and Edmonton Hunkies beat Notre Dame de Grace Maple Leafs of Montreal 7-3 in the junior championship.

The Ernie Richardson rink from Regina won the Canadian curling title 14-7 in a playoff over the defending champion Hec Gervais rink from Edmonton, and went to Scotland to win the world title with a perfect record against rinks from the United States, Scotland and Sweden.

TITLES TO B.C.

The Canadian women's curling championship was won by a Kimberley, B.C., rink skipped by Mrs. Ina Hansen, and the Canadian schoolboy title went to a rink skipped by Mike Lubynich of Spears, Sask.

British Columbia teams won national titles in both the senior and junior lacrosse divisions. The senior series for the Mann Cup went to New Westminster Adanacs and the junior final for the Minto Cup to Victoria Shamrocks.

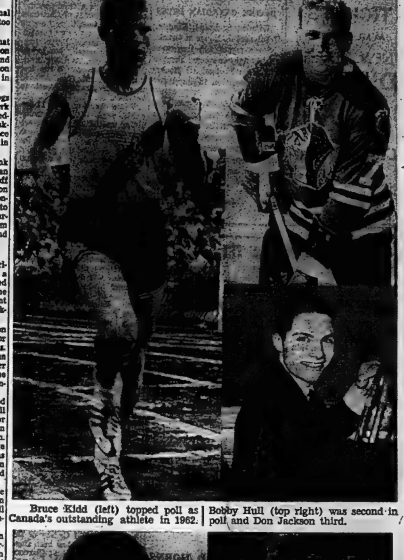
Lethbridge Broders captured the senior men's basketball championship and the junior men's title went to Hamilton Catholic Youth Organization. There was no eastern challenge for the women's title and it was awarded to the Western champs, Vancouver Richmond Merchants.

In golf, Vancouver's Gayle Hitchens won the Canadian women's open and Norm Mogil of Toronto took the national junior title at Moncton, N.B.

The Canadian open was won by Ted Kroll of Fort Lauderdale, Fla., with top Canadian honors to Wilf Homenuik of Winnipeg, seven strokes off the pace. Alvin Thompson of Toronto won the Canadian Professional Golfers Association championship and the Canadian amateur went to Reg Taylor of North Africa.

LEAFS WIN CUP

Montreal Canadiens won their fifth consecutive National Hockey League title but it was Toronto Maple Leafs who won the Stanley Cup in a six-game final series over Chicago.



The world amateur championships were held in Yugoslavia and Sweden won in a seven-game sweep. Canada, represented by Galt Terriers, finished second with a 6-1 record.

At home, the major amateur titles were split between east and west. Trail Smoke Eaters won the senior final for the Allan Cup and Hamilton Red Wings won their first junior championship and the Memorial Cup.

In minor pro hockey, Hull-Ottawa Canadiens won the Eastern Professional League title, Edmonton Flyers took Western League honors and Seattle Indians the American League.

Montreal's McGill University won the Canadian intercollegiate football title with a 15-13 playoff victory over Queen's and the Vanier Cup intercollegiate championship was shared by the Queen's Gaels and Alberta Golden Bears of the University of British Columbia.

In racing, Queen Mother Elizabeth's Canadian-bred filly won a filly owned by Toronto industrialist E. P. Taylor, win the $50,000 Queen's Plate at Toronto. Western Canada's top race, the Governor - General's Bruce Kidd (left) topped poll as Canada's outstanding athlete in 1962. Bobby Hull (top right) was second in poll and Don Jackson third.

SUE HILTON — ABIGAIL HOFFMAN

Canadian Derby at Edmonton, was taken by Western Mora, owned by the Bildon Stable of Edmonton.

In tennis, Canada lost all five Davis Cup matches to the United States in the North American zone elimination series at Cleveland. Juan Couder, a Spaniard, won the Canadian men's singles crown but the women's title went to Ann Barclay, formerly of Vancouver and now of Toronto.

Karl Shedd of Toronto won the Canadian women's singles badminton title for the second consecutive time while Ferdinand Sonneville of Indonesia captured men's honors.

In auto racing, 22-year-old Peter Ryan of Mont Tremblant, Que., suffered fatal injuries when his car somersaulted during a qualifying run for the formula junior Grand Prix at Reims, France. Ryan was Canada's brightest hope in international racing and in 1961 had won the Canadian Grand Prix for sports cars. The 1962 winner was Masion Gregory, an American.

Nose Out Leafs, Jelineks Next

Blue Bombers Top Team

By JACK SULLIVAN
Canadian Press Sports Writer

TORONTO (CP) — Winnipeg Blue Bombers, who just made it to the Grey Cup final and then hung on for a cliff-hanging, fog-shrouded victory, have squeezed through for additional honors. They've been named the outstanding team in the country, but only after a real fight with Toronto Maple Leafs, Stanley Cup champions.

The Bombers won out in the 28th annual Canadian Press year-end poll of sports editors and broadcasters.

The selectors were asked by CP to name the three outstanding teams — any sport, professional or amateur, in order — and the Bombers got the nod by the narrowest of margins. Computed on a 3-2-1 basis for the first three places, they compiled 286 points against 282 for Leafs. Seventeen others were mentioned but they were nowhere.

VOTING CLOSE

The Bombers, who capitalized on a last-second misjudged play by Harvey Wylie of Calgary Stampeders to win the Western Football Conference playoff and then, practically torn apart by injuries, beat Hamilton Tiger-Cats 29-27 in the two-part cup classic, couldn't have had it much closer in the poll.

They received 38 first-place votes of the record-breaking 156 ballots cast. That was just four more than the Leafs received.

They also got 33 second-place votes against 46 by Leafs and 15 third-place against 34 by the hockey tiltedolders.

Third place went to a pair of figure skaters, Otto and Maria Jelinek of Bronte, Ont., who dazzled competitors from 16 countries with a world-winning performance at Prague, Czechoslovakia, last spring. They picked up 96 points on 12 first places, 16 second and 28 third.

Fourth place went to the Regina curling rink skipped by Ernie Richardson that won the Canadian title in Kitchener last March and then went to Scotland and made a clean sweep in the world championship. Here again, it was close.

The Richardsons just beat out Calgary Stampeders, 61-57. The Stamps received 10 votes for first place against only six for the Richardsons who made up for this with a big bulge for second- and third-place choices.

It was sweet victory for the Bombers who made a runaway of the poll in 1961 when they again beat Tiger-Cats in the cup final.

They got out of the Calgary series in poor physical shape. They arrived in Toronto, scene of the cup classic, with a few walking wounded and with ace defensive half Gordie Rowland unable to start. Things, indeed, were black.

"We'll whomp the hell out of the West," boasted Ticat coach Jim Trimble and many experts were inclined to agree. With fog hanging just over the field, the two teams played all but nine minutes and 29 seconds on Saturday, Dec. 1, before commissioner Sydney Halter called a halt to the proceedings with Bombers ahead 28-27, and ordered the teams to continue from that point the following day.

The crippled Bombers held on to their single-point lead in the scoreless second part of the final for their fourth cup decision in five appearances since 1957.

This was the ammunition the selectors needed to pick the Bombers.

Or Jail, Says Magistrate

Must Pay Hockey Players

SARNIA (CP)—James Matson, general manager of Sarnia Rams of the Ontario Hockey Association Senior A League, was ordered Friday to pay $126 to a player who claimed back wages under the Ontario Masters and Servants Act.

Magistrate J. C. Dunlap found Matson, also owner of the team, guilty of non-payment of wages.

Defenceman Ray Morton, onetime junior star with Edmonton Oil Kings, took action against Matson, Dec. 7 after waiting several weeks for back pay.

The players had both on salary until Nov. 27 when the team adopted a "share-the-wealth" system because of poor season. This year has been the team's worst, both on the ice and at the box-office, since it joined the league two years ago.

The team has drawn crowds of less than 200 and has won only two games this season.

The magistrate ordered the money paid by Jan. 18 with a 15-day jail sentence as an alternative.

Two similar charges were laid by other players several weeks ago. Matson was also found guilty on those counts.

U.S. Issues Harmsworth Bid

DETROIT (CP)—The Yachtsmen's Association of America Friday challenged the Canadian Boating Federation to a Harmsworth Trophy race in 1963.

Leonard H. Thomson, secretary of the association, said the challenge was issued here after the owners of four American powerboats signed assurances that their boats would be available to meet the Canadian defender next summer.

Under Harmsworth rules, the defending country shall advise within 30 days of the place and the dates of the 1963 races.

The United States has until the first race to announce its selected boat.

Canada took the Harmsworth Trophy away from the United States in 1959 when Bob Hayward, of Embro, near Woodstock, drove Miss Supertest to victory, on the Detroit River.

Hayward was killed in the Silver Cup race shortly after the 1961 Harmsworth, and the challenge race was, not held this year.

Thomson said the deadline for challenging for a Harmsworth race in 1963 is Dec. 31. Any other country eligible to compete will be notified of the U.S. challenge and can submit a challenge of its own any time before May 1.

In Toronto, R. A. Finlayson, executive director of the Canadian Boating Federation, said he has not received a challenge from the YAA.

COLLECT DEER HIDES

NANAIMO, B.C. (CP)—More than 1,300 deer hides were collected by a service club here to be made into gloves for Christmas projects.

STUDENT FILES SUIT

DURHAM, N.C. (AP) — Art Heyman, Duke University basketball star, has been named in an $85,000 damage suit by another student who says he was struck in the right eye by Heyman and might lose its sight. The suit was filed Friday last week by attorneys for Martin Taylor Greenberg, 20, of Norfolk, Va., a pre-med student at Duke. Heyman, 21, was fined $25 and court costs in Durham County court on Nov. 7, 1961, for assault and battery in connection with the fraternity house incident. The scoring ace from Rockville Centre, N.Y., was accused of hitting or slapping Greenberg on Oct. 28, 1961. The basketball player pleaded innocent, but declined to testify.

Quintes' Wayne Gilroy Named Best Player

Peterborough CI Wins Hoop Tournament

KINGSTON (CP)—Peterborough Collegiate, led by its big guard Gerry Bilker, with 22 points and Bill Turner, captured the annual Queen's University high school basketball tournament Friday with an unblemished record.

The gruelling one-day tournament saw both finalists, Peterborough and Kingston's Queen Elizabeth Collegiate, play four games.

Peterborough took the title with a 56-34 win over Kingston in the final.

Other schools were in the tournament and Peterborough defeated Belleville Collegiate 46-26, Kingston Collegiate 61-30 and Belleville Quinte Collegiate 38-32 to reach the final.

Queen Elizabeth Collegiate lost its opening game to Quinte, 36-30, but rallied to down Picton's Prince Edward Collegiate and Belleville Collegiate 64-52 to reach the championship game.

Other teams in action were O'Neill Collegiate and Perth Collegiate.

Bilker scored 16 points in the final to pace Peterborough and Ponten added 10. Gary Hoeg was best for Queen Elizabeth with nine points.

Peterborough managed to edge Queen Elizabeth's starry Ron Earl to only five points in the final. In the semi-final against Belleville, Earl bagged 24 points as did Belleville's Terry McCabe.

Quinte gave Peterborough a battle in the semi-final with Wayne Gilroy scoring 11 points and Doug Rose 10. Bilker scored 13 and Ponten 12 in that one.

Quinte's Gilroy was named the tournament's most valuable player. He was outstanding in losing cause, playing strong defensively and scoring 44 points in three games.

Kidd, Crothers

Meet Tough Opposition

NEW ORLEANS (CP)—Canada's Bruce Kidd and Bill Crothers will have more than hot weather to contend with Monday when they bring the University of Toronto colors to the Sugar Bowl track meet.

The 19-year-old Kidd will meet three U.S. collegiate runners in the three-mile event, including Dale Story of Oregon State, the 1961 cross-country titlist of the U.S. National Collegiate Athletic Association.

Crothers, who has entered the mile, will have to best nine others, one of whom is Tom O'Hare of Loyola in Chicago. O'Hare has to his credit this year a 4:01.7 mile plus the NCAA cross-country title.

Kidd has expressed apprehension about running in the hot Louisiana winter, a far cry from what he's used to in Toronto. Even so it seems likely that the Sugar Bowl meet record of 14:13 for the three miles will fall.

Kidd's best time for the distance is a full 56 seconds faster. And the strong competition should encourage a fast pace.

Crothers holds the Canadian 880-yard record of one minute, 49 seconds. Kidd is the three-mile champion of the U.S. Amateur Athletic Union with a time of 13:35.

Frontenacs Lose Seven In Row

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Winning or losing, Kingston Frontenacs do things in streaks.

Seven games ago they were riding high, one game short of a Eastern Professional Hockey League record of 12 consecutive wins.

Friday night they swallowed their seventh loss in a row, a 4-2 beating at the hands of the last-place Syracuse Braves.

While the second-place Frontenacs continued to slide, Hull-Ottawa Canadiens widened their lead at the top of the standings to six points with a 6-4 victory over Sudbury Wolves.

Sport Snapshots

By RON ANDREWS

When a National Hockey League player gets a penalty the chances of the opposition scoring while he's off are greater if he's a defenceman.

Including games of Christmas night this season, there were 99 goals scored against short-handed teams. Defencemen were in the penalty box for 66 of those goals. And the situation prevailed despite the fact more than half the 1,900-odd minutes in penalties went to forwards.

With a choice of 10 or 11 forwards, some of them penalty-killing specialists, a coach seldom finds trouble putting fresh men on the ice when one of the front-liners gets the gate. But with defencemen it's a different story.

A coach is usually restricted to five defence players, of whom only four may be regulars. When one is penalized it usually means someone has to go back on the ice without sufficient rest from his last hitch.

This tends to make the defensive unit a little weaker and more susceptible to the opposition's power play.

BOSTON HIT HARDEST

Boston Bruins found penalties to their defencemen most costly. They were victims of goals on 16 penalties, 15 of them being served by defencemen.

Ted Green, Irv Spencer and Warren Godfrey were off three times each, Leo Boivin and Doug Mohns twice apiece and Pat Stapleton and Ed Westfall once each. The other goal was scored with forward Murray Oliver off.

New York Rangers have the best penalty-killing record with only 12 goals against them when they've been short a man. But on six it was defenceman Albert Langlois in the penalty box and on another three occasions it was Doug Harvey.

Of the 14 goals scored against Toronto Maple Leafs during penalties, 10 have been with defence players in the box. Carl Brewer was off for four, Kent Douglas and Bobby Baun twice each and Tim Horton and Alan Stanley once each. Another was scored while penalty - killing forward George Armstrong was off.

League batman Howie Young, with 107 minutes, was in the penalty box on seven occasions when the opposition scored against Detroit Red Wings and every team in the league has been able to capitalize at least once on Young's absences.

Detroit has given up 19 goals during penalties, 12 with defencemen off. Bill Gadsby, with three, Marcel Pronovost and Doug Barkley with one each. were the others.

Of Montreal Canadiens' 16, they were the victims of 11 with defencemen serving time —Jean - Guy Talbot and Lou Fontinato four each, Tom Johnson twice and Jean Gauthier once.

Chicago Black Hawks are the only exception. They were the most penalized team and also had the most goals scored against them while shorthanded. But of the 22, defencemen were off for only nine.

On another occasion, however, Eric Nesterenko, a forward who sometimes helps penalty-killing chores, and defenceman Wayne Hillman were off together. And another time Reg Fleming, one of the Hawks' regular penalty-killers, was in the box.

Al Macneil, three, Pierre Pilote, two, Elmer Vasko, Hillman and Jack Evans, one each, were the Chicago defencemen off when opposing teams scored.

Western Hockey

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Vancouver Canucks have served notice on the rest of the Western Hockey League that they're back in their early season stride.

After a few faltering weeks that temporarily cost them first place in the Northern Division standings, the Canucks went into a head-to-head battle with Seattle Totems Friday night and emerged with a 4-2 victory and a three-point lead over the losers, who have played three more games.

In other games Friday night San Francisco Seals downed Los Angeles Blades 5-2 in a free - swinging game at San Francisco and Spokane Comets walloped the erratic Edmonton Flyers 9-1.

Phil Maloney, Ron Hutchinson, Jim Baird and Trent Beatty scored for the Canucks, watched by a 2,238 hometown fans. Jim Powers and Bill McFarland replied for Seattle.

In San Francisco, Roy Cyr, Al Nicholson, Nick Mickoski, Moe Mantha and Danny Belisle scored for the Seals while Bruce Carmichael and Lloyd Haddon counted for the Blades.

The result left the teams in a second-place tie in the Southern Division, five points behind Portland Buckaroos.

Fined Additional $200

Gadsby Wallet $275 Slimmer

MONTREAL (CP)—Veteran defenceman Bill Gadsby of Detroit Red Wings has been fined $200 by president Clarence Campbell of the National Hockey League, it was announced Friday.

The announcement said Gadsby was fined for his part in a third - period altercation during a game against the Rangers in New York Dec. 16, won by Rangers 5-2.

Gadsby got into an argument with referee John Ashley after Andy Hebenton scored for New York at 17:27 of the third period. He was given a 10-minute misconduct a penalty and a match misconduct.

As the misconduct penalty carried an automatic $25 fine and the match misconduct $50, the additional fine imposed by Campbell brought the total strike against Gadsby's pocketbook to $275.

The league announcement said only team captains or alternate captains can protest referees' decisions. Gadsby, being neither, therefore got a misconduct penalty when he argued with the referee and a match misconduct when he kept on arguing.

Will Guest Stars Keep Perry's Record Intact?

By BOB THOMAS

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — Perry Mason is finally getting some help in the courtroom.

After 5½ undefeated years, the television barrister is being spelled by substitutes, including a lady lawyer. The cause of this minor surgery which Raymond Burr has successfully undergone.

Maintaining a television schedule during the actor's recuperation was a major operation which befell Perry Mason's executive producer, Gail Patrick Jackson.

"Ray has been out of the show before," said the silver-tongued producer. "Once he was gone for seven weeks, and we had to fill in with a shooting around him. Before, we never had any notice when he was sick."

PLANNED AHEAD

"This time the doctors let us know in plenty of time that Ray would be out for eight weeks So we had time to plan ahead."

Starting Jan. 31, guest stars will be taking over Perry's cases on the CBS show. First will be Betty Davis. Others are Walter Pidgeon, Michael Rennie and Hugh O'Brian.

"Ray will be on each of the four shows," Mrs. Jackson explained, "in the first one, he'll be in bed in the hospital. The next one will show him walking around the hospital room.

"Then we'll have him at his apartment in a robe. And the last one will show him at his apartment in a sport coat."

Astrological Forecast

For December 30
By SYDNEY OMARR

Aries (Mar. 21 to Apr. 19): Aura of action surrounds you. Means you are busy, apt to be careless. Take time to be courteous, especially where members of opposite sex are concerned. Look beyond surface values.

Taurus (Apr. 20 to May 20): Pressure is key today. One close person pulls in one direction. Another one tries to persuade in the other direction. You are in the middle — speak up with face-saving formula.

Gemini (May 21 to June 21): Better for finishing rather than starting. Moderation, care should be keys — especially while travelling. No time to speed. One who confides in you should be given sympathy. But don't get involved!

Cancer (June 22 to July 21): Check assets today. Make resolution regarding savings. Start thinking of future. But not as something abstract. Think of it as something near. Tomorrow can be faced with joy.

Leo (July 22 to Aug. 21): Don't spoil day by foolish quarrel. Rest. Don't let fatigue rule your tongue. On close range appear to deliberately antagonize you. Check anger impulse. Be understanding. You'll be repaid with gratitude, love.

Virgo (Aug. 22 to Sept. 22): Element of "luck" on your side. Social gathering enhanced by your wit, charm. Let others know you have sparkling, carefree side — as well as the conservative face they usually view.

Libra (Sept. 23 to Oct. 22) Fine time for being with friends, loved ones. Creative urges demand outlet. Read, write, share hobbies. Let member of opposite sex know your thoughts and intentions.

Scorpio (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21): Welcome challenge. Take pride in potential. And present accomplishments. No time to be "shrinking violet." Those in position to help wait and listen. They may not appear interested. Be captivating!

Sagittarius (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21): Need for harmony today. Keep pace steady. Take care while driving. Communicate. Remember one you might have forgotten during holiday rush. Good-will gesture could mean greater happiness.

Capricorn (Dec. 22 to Jan. 20) Time to sum up. Decide what you want to obtain, and what must be discarded in emotions, as well as mundane affairs. Tendency toward seeing the best today. Make sure you also see reality.

Aquarius (Jan. 21 to Feb. 19) Lively day indicated, punctuated by disputes, love, contradictions and solutions to recent questions. Have confidence. Remember golden rule. Live this day with zest.

Pisces (Feb. 20 to Mar. 20): The more living and forgiving you are, the better. Kindness is key. Others' require your nearness. But pride may stand in way. Make the first gesture. Be "human." You thus have happy day.

If today is your birthday . . . you have sense of humor and fair play. It's not so much that a man has money but you want to know how he earned it. You are a person of principles.

* * *

General Tendencies: Day when pressures "boil over." Results of recent actions, statements, are made clear. Time when much restlessness prevails.

For December 31

Aries (Mar. 21 to Apr. 19): Attitude of generosity is best, otherwise, you create problems. Realize that some friends, associates speak sharply because of fatigue. All will be forgiven and forgotten shortly!

Taurus (Apr. 20 to May 20): Stress: maturity. You have choice of being gracious, or of failing to enjoy last day of year. Be wise, understanding. Curb impulse to "tell someone off." You'll be happier tomorrow!

Gemini (May 21 to June 21): Original approach best. Evening can see you sparkling, entertaining and winning new friends. Relax. Be moderate. And don't chastise family member who merely is trying to have good time.

Cancer (June 22 to July 21): Try following advice you recently offered friend. In reality your own subconscious was expressing itself about you. Think it over! Share pleasure with friends. Avoid gloom. Celebrate.

Leo (July 22 to Aug. 21): Make no promises you can't keep. Be practical. Your resolutions can be valuable if kept within reach. Don't get careless about money tonight. Be moderate and you'll enjoy wonderful friends.

Virgo (Aug. 22 to Sept. 22): Best to let "partner" have some of spotlight. There is tendency toward jealousy, misunderstanding. Be diplomatic. Attend to details. Keep eyes open. Exciting, unusual time indicated. Be ready.

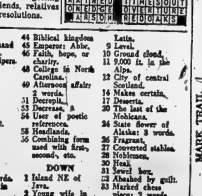
Libra (Sept. 23 to Oct. 22): Be charitable in forming first impressions. There are circumstances about which you may know nothing. Be fair, impartial, and a little lenient. Excellent evening for fun, excitement and romance.

Scorpio (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21): Kind of day in which life takes on new significance. Hope for new year is evident. Set goal high. Aim for the top. Encourage loved ones to do the same. Take care if driving tonight.

Sagittarius (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21): Keep firm "anchor." Don't be swept off your feet tonight. Maintain sense of humor. Many are tempted to promise the world. But here are in "condition" to back up such claims.

Capricorn (Dec. 22 to Jan. 20) Utilize common sense while travelling. Be wary of one who encourages speeding. Heed your own counsel. Plan for getting together with friends, relatives and for writing resolutions.

Aquarius (Jan. 21 to Feb. 19) Your first impulse is correct one. Some relationships are not emotionally profitable. Resolve to "trim down." Don't continue to carry extra burdens. Money situation due to improve.



Pisces (Feb. 20 to Mar. 20): Answer today is yes. Take initiative. Spell out your meaning, desire. Make others see that you are sincere, serious and capable. Tonight relax. Cycle high. Enjoy yourself!

If today is your birthday . . . you are capable of noticing little things, which most persons overlook. You are natural character analyst. You are able to size up persons, situations.

* * *

General Tendencies: Happy New Year situation prevails. Pressure relaxes on world problems. Take a hint from today's Sagittarius interpretation.

Chagnon, associate deputy minister of the federal agriculture department, said here Friday 80 per cent of Maritime farmers make less than $2,500 net profit per year. Venus Spinning Opposite Way To Earth

STANFORD, Calif. (AP) — Tentative analyses of data that arrived in California to earth when it passed near Venus Dec. 14 indicate the planet is spinning slowly and perhaps in a direction opposed to the earth, scientists said Friday.

The cloud-veiled space neighbor of the earth, was the subject of reports at a joint meeting of the American Astronomical Union and the American Physical Society. The meeting ends today.

Dr. Edward J. Smith of the Jet Propulsion Laboratory, Pasadena, which built Mariner II, said the spacecraft detected no magnetic field of Venus from its fly-by at a distance of 21,594 miles.

The planet's slow rotation—turning but once in 250 earth-days—may be the reason no magnetic field could be found, scientists said.

BULLETINS FROM BIRDLAND

BIRDS' BRAINS

By WINIFRED E. WILSON

Some scientists who have of late years been both figuratively and literally picking birds to pieces say that their brains are "insignificant" and "relegated to the rear of the skull". It has been said that in many birds the cerebellum, or little brain, and in some cases eye lobes, form, two, of the size of brain their associates and or two million years ago, it must have been but a reptilian the size of a modern brain, and less complex.

Recently a human skull was dug up and is thought to be the oldest ever found. Somebody drew a picture of what the man's head must have looked like in life, and it was shown to us on TV. If you saw it you must have noticed how low was the forehead, how flat the head — little room for thought. So perhaps the brains of present day humans are not compared with those of man when he first walked the earth.

BIRDS THAT SPEAK

Certain kinds of birds have been taught to say a few words: Crows, various birds of the parrot class, and even starlings, quite clearly. For some years we have taken delight in hearing budgerigars speak. One scientist says that the ability could provide species in which "there is an opportunity to study anything approaching the beginnings of learning in human beings", and that by studying them we might learn how a baby learns to talk.

Results must use their thinking powers to some extent because they are able to solve a few problems. Certain of their actions cannot be attributed to instinct. This is most noticeable when the action has to do with food or the care of their eggs and young. The most common of these is nature at its best. A correct answer is through the "trial and error" method. For instance, they may make several attempts to reach food hanging in a position awkward for them to get at. At each new attempt they apparently remember, for former mistakes, avoid repeating them, and try a different method of approach.

SOME ARE SMARTER

Without doubt, some individuals have more intelligence, or appear to be smarter than others. Feeding tray behavior is as excellent example. Porridge, suet, peanut butter, and grain are put out on "plates" of rough bark. Sometimes these plates are not absolutely flat on the bottom, and rock when touched. Certain birds, from the moment they come to the tray, know enough to steady the plate by standing on it with one foot; others, after a long period of experience at our feeding shelf, have never learned.

Education

plicants this year only one met the required academic stand

The scholarships will be suspended for at least a year while the federation decides what to do about the situation.

Meanwhile, at Hamilton, the Ontario Secondary School Teachers' Federation was told Friday that teachers' salaries were improved to the point where "arduous negotiations" will be needed to gain further increases.

I. M. Robb of Toronto, the federation's assistant general secretary, said: "In other words, we are going to have to move our policy."

IN CLOSED SESSION

The federation Friday held a closed session which officials said dealt with such topics as salaries and superannuation negotiations on the province.

Dr. James E. Russell, secretary of the education policies commission in Washington, told the convention modern education is operating in a "pretty loose framework" that cannot solve the problems of today's students.

"What we have to do is teach the child to think," he said. "But I'm sure we're not doing it."

Dr. Russell said employers in 1962 may have no need for skills such as typing, shorthand and accounting since by then computers will be doing these automatically.

The federation elected Marcaret A. Robinson of Forest Hill Collegiate, Toronto, president for 1963.

SIGNALS HIT VENUS

MOSCOW (AP)—Soviet scientists announced today they have bounced radio signals off the planet Venus for the first time. The Soviet news agency Tass said the signals were sent Nov. 19 and Nov. 24.

Heavy

air mission is continuing, the spokesman said.

Diplomatic sources in Leopoldville described the air attack as "very successful."

SURROUND THOMBE

Meanwhile, a United Nations spokesman in Leopoldville said that troops surrounded the Elisabethville residence of President Moise Tshombe of Katanga and held other key points in the capital of the secessionist province.

The spokesman said Tshombe "is in his home, and the home is in the hands of the United Nations."

Diplomatic sources in Leopoldville reported the dawn air attack by Swedish and Canadian jet and machine-gun firing broke out as UN troops made further advances and Katangan positions from 5:30 a.m. Elisabethville time today.

Ethiopian troops of the UN force moved toward the Lamboshi-Kipushi-Congo corner in the Elisabethville area and by 9 a.m. two - pronged advances on the Kipushi road.

Other UN troops reached the Kipushi road from the Karavia communications line by mid-day. Nations in the night—in a move to link up with the Ethiopians at a road junction. The Ethiopian advance was halted at 9 a.m. after an exchange of fire with Katangan gendarmes at a roadblock.

HEAVY FIGHTING RAGES

Reports reaching Salisbury, Southern Rhodesia, said heavy fighting has raged in Elisabethville since early this morning.

Meanwhile, reports received in Salisbury said UN troops cleared Katangan troops from the strategic Kipushi mine. Minière refinery in Elisabethville during the night.

The UN spokesman in Leopoldville said the first of the UN Ethiopian troops from Elisabethville had begun arriving in Leopoldville.

The spokesman decision was made as UN troops were ordered to clear Katangan roadblocks in Elisabethville and following four days of intermittent firing in the city.

UN headquarters said the organization's Indian brigade went into operation Friday afternoon in the area of the city's gymnasium, the radio station and Sabena camp and at a road and railway junction.

The headquarters said the operation was completed and completed two hours later at 6:15 p.m. Elisabethville time with little slightly injured on the UN side.

GETS ULTIMATUM

Before the UN announced its operation, it made request reaching Salisbury in Southern Rhodesia said Tshombe was given 30 minutes to withdraw his troops or "general war will begin."

UN sources said they believed Tshombe ordered his troops to stop firing several times, but it appeared they did not have full control of his men.

A UN communique released Friday night said that while Tshombe ordered his troops to ceased cease-fire with the UN his troops continued "unprovoked attacks on UN troops which did not return the fire. Tshombe eventually refused to sign an agreement to cease-fire.

The UN forces subsequently were ordered to remove the roadblocks, and the UN operation began.

EUROPEANS NOT KILLED

Other reports reaching Leopoldville said there were no casualties among the European population in the capital and foreign residents there were in "good shape."

A UN spokesman in Elisabethville held a press conference that the organization's troops began their operation in an effort to carry out the Security Council's resolution last November for the prevention of movement-ion UN forces.

He said a draft cease-fire agreement was submitted to President Tshombe, but he refused to sign it.

The UN force at Saab Swedish jet fighter planes in Katanga armed with 420 - millimetre cannon and capable of carrying 24 three-inch rockets or eight six-inch rockets. Two more UN Saabs are based at Ndola, Zambia and two reconnaissance aircraft are in Elisabethville.

The Katangan Air Force, based at Kolwezi, was believed to have a strength after the morning's air strike of two jet fighters, 10 single-engined propeller-driven trainers, a DC-3 transport and several light aircraft.

Informed sources in Leopoldville said the UN also was offered 40 U.S. Air Force fighter planes from Italy, six from The Philippines and four from Iran.

Ottawa Youth Jailed for Passing Cheques

TORONTO (CP)—John Gribbon, 23, of Ottawa, said Friday he had been told he would be shot if he refused to pass counterfeit travellers' cheques.

Gribbon, who admitted uttering 4 cheques and obtaining nearly $3,000 for them, was sentenced to 5½ years in penitentiary by Magistrate Donald Graham.

He said a man he could not identify got $2,000 and he received $1,000 for his efforts.

They didn't have to twist your arm to make you take part, $1,000 share," Magistrate Graham commented.

Gribbon said most of the cheques he passed were counterfeit Canadian Pacific Airwellers' cheques which he uttered in banks and supermarkets in the Ottawa and Kingston areas. He was caught when he tried to pass his first cheque in a Toronto supermarket.

Will Continue Talks Jan. 16 On Kashmir

RAWALPINDI (Reuters) — Pakistan and India Friday announced agreement to continue their current negotiations on the Kashmir dispute in New Delhi Jan. 16 and 17.

Leaders of the two delegations to the two-day talks, Sardar Swaran Singh of India and Z. A. Bhutto of Pakistan, made the announcement after a 90-minute meeting at the end of a round of negotiations here aimed at ending the 15-year-old dispute over the territory.

Friday's meeting followed a series of conferences Thursday both inside and outside the conference chamber and included, the United States and British, diplomats — which centred on the effect of the announcement by Pakistan and Communist China that they had reached "complete agreement in principle" on their border.

The Chinese and Pakistani governments followed that Friday with a communique saying they intended to sign a border agreement "as soon as possible."

New Tax Laws Will Hit Dozen Canadian Firms

By HAROLD MORRISON

WASHINGTON (CP)—About a dozen big U.S.-controlled Canadian investment companies, with total assets of about $600,000, likely will be bit by the new United States tax laws effective Jan. 1.

These, in the view of the U.S. Treasury, are believed to be in effect "tax haven" companies promoted to some extent by high-bracket American investors seeking to reduce tax liabilities to the U.S. government.

A treasury spokesman says the "good old days" for these investors are gone. Revised laws will force these and other "tax haven" operations around the world to pay their cash to the U.S. The changes, however, may discourage accumulation of profits in them. But these major investment houses and this in turn could have some general effect on the rate of Canadian capital investment.

PAID NO TAX

Under the U.S. investor—some of them in the maximum 90-per-cent income tax bracket paid no tax on dividends accumulating year by year in the Canadian subsidiaries and reinvested. Capital gains tax to the U.S. government of only 25 per cent when shares in these companies were sold.

Now the U.S. has ordered that either the dividends be distributed to the shareholders annually or the investors will include these earnings in their annual returns or the U.S. government will tax the final sale of shares not at the low capital gains rate but at the much higher income tax rate.

There is some indication that these investment houses will not distribute their dividends to investors annually instead of keeping them in Canada and reinvesting them in Canadian enterprises.

The tax revisions apply to investment subsidiaries controlled by Americans, to the extent of 50 per cent or more. They do not apply to subsidiaries which engaged in manufacturing or merchandising or other normal commercial activities.

Picton Merchants Bow to Peterborough

PICTON (Special) — Picton Merchants fell behind 5-0, but rallied to cut that lead to 5-4 before bowing to Peterborough Monsens 10-4 in an OHA Eastern Junior League game played in Peterborough last night.

The win tightened Peterborough's grip on second place and left the Merchants tied with Gananoque for fourth spot. Picton's next game is at home against Belleville next Thursday.

The Monsens struck for two quick goals, by Morris and Self, in the first minute and a half of the game and repeated this performance at the midway mark of the heat to put Picton on the spot. Ryer and Morris getting the assists.

Morris completed his hat trick to make it 5-0 before Stacey got Picton's initial goal at 19.48 of the period.

Picton fought desperately and Stacey scored two more goals, at 8.29 and 14.47, and Pike added another to cut the lead to 5-4 at 16.58 of the third the club ran out of steam. Peterborough added goals by Self and Ryer before the period had ended to make it 7-4.

The line of Pete Morris, Wayne Milburn and Mike Self, aided by Pete Ryer, sparked the Monsens attack. Morris had three and two, Self two and one, Ryer three goals and Milburn two assists. Bill Armour and Bob Walsh also scored, Greg Marchen and Bill Shearey getting double assists and Paul LeBarr and Paul Webb one each.

Carl Stacey starred for Picton with three goals, Gary Pike notching the other. Dusty Rhodes drew two assists, Ron Brown one.

Ask Henry

Henry invites letters from readers. For the most interesting letter he receives each week, he will award a copy of his best-selling book, "Ask Henry", publisher, by Prentice-Hall Inc.

Dear Henry: I have two annoying brothers. At night when they go to bed they don't go to sleep, instead they sing songs.

I stay awake all hours of the night. What should I do? — Sleepless.

Dear Sleepless: If I knew what brothers are like (and I do) I would say that they are not singing to exercise their tonsils but to get on your nerves. Ignore them by pretending that they are singing a lullaby. Yours Staggeringly, — HENRY.

Dear Henry: I have a problem with my mother. She says that "C" is a bad mark for me. But my teacher says it is an average mark for me.— Jeff.

Dear Jeff: Torn between two theories, after many hours of deep thought and consideration I've decided that the best mark for you is an "A"." "It isn't out of your and anyone else's reach.— Yours Thoughtfully, HENRY.

Dear Henry: I go to bed every night but I never can sleep. What shall I do? I do get to sleep but then it's late.—Signed A Very Sleepy Boy.

Dear Sleepy: Usually you get to sleep when you are tired. The best way to get tired really fast is not to waits around, not to get up and do the twist. — Your Twisted HENRY.

Dear Henry: I do a lot of handy work around the house, cutting, nailing, painting, etc. I have a 6 - year - old who also likes to do these things when I'm not around. But if I let him he makes a mess of things. If I don't he gets upset and cries. — Father of a Little Mister Fix It.

Dear Mr. Fix It: I bet you that if I had been writing this column 30 years ago I would have got a letter from your father that would sound exactly like yours. And if you and he would have told your father not to discourage you but to help and teach you to work properly and neatly, I would have told, your father that when you grew up you would be quite a handyman. I was right 30 years ago. You can be right now. — Your Ageing HENRY.

The Golden Years

Here's Rundown on Retirement For All You 1963 Graduates

By THOMAS COLLINS

This is for the Class of '63 — those of you who are coming up for retirement in the n e w year.

For you, the arrival of New Year's is a sentimental season. And a fitting one. It marks 64 years of living, probably 44 of working, and the last full year on the job. It marks, too, the start of what you will find to be a no-lesser role for retirement day — fast and frightening.

What follows here is a "Run-Down on Retirement," which is a checklist of some of the fundamentals in your future. Parts of it have been said before. But you graduates in the Class of '63 didn't really believe you would ever be 64 years old and so near retirement . . . and you haven't been listening.

The Run-Down:

1. Start Saving. The company may be all shook up and acutely hurt by the loss of you, but it'll manage. And it'll be brave on your retirement day. You'll go.

2. Stop Spoiling. Dumber men than you have been retiring for the last 10 years and doing O.K. You'll squirm a while at the cost of food and the thought of illness, there'll be a couple of squabbles with your wife about the household. But the odds are that you'll be happier retired than working.

CONDITION YOURSELF

3. Condition yourself, starting now, to give up the friends and connections that come with your job. A few will cross over into retirement with you, but not many and not for long. You'll probably not buy anything wholesale anymore. Oddly, the more important you are now in business, the less-important you are likely to be in retirement. This is not so bad. Retirement is a new world. You can handle it better with new connections.

4. You probably can get a retirement job, if you honestly want one. The way to do it is to tie up the job now while you're still an employee, and while you can ask your company to use some clout for you. Don't expect the status or pay you have now, and don't expect to loaf six months after you retire, and then go to the new job.

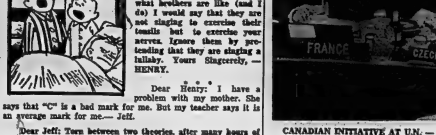
5. Don't bank on being a "consultant," no matter how much you are. This was a good deal several years ago. But there are too many "Retired Consultants" now, and too many who aren't very good.

6. If the Front Office hasn't already filled you in on your retirement benefits, go ask. Check your group life insurance and see if you want to carry it over into retirement, which you may not, and your health insurance, which you'll probably have. Ask when your first pension cheque will arrive. Do these things no later than next week.

7. Check your group life insurance policies. See if you can stop payments on them when you retire, and if you can convert them into an annuity for you, for your wife, or into anything else that will better meet your financial needs.

8. Do the mounting you still have on the job, pay up all the debts you owe, then buy for cash — if you don't already have them — a refrigerator, stove, clothes washer, vacuum cleaner, TV set and whatever else that will last you at least five years into retirement. If this strips your income down to what it will be after retirement, then the conditioning will be good for you. Don't "Charge" anything.

9. Switch all investment money you have into high grade, conservative stocks. I am not recommended to you by an investment broker or your banker. If you are timid about this, rely on a savings account in an insured bank or savings and loan association. Don't gamble. Don't gamble now.



10. Give serious study to the security of your wife in case you die. Will part of the pension continue on to her? What insurance payments will she get, and how will she get them? Most men have not taught their wives about money and thus-in-a-t themselves set up the best future for their widows.

11. If you haven't decided yet to move away when you retire, then you shouldn't for a while. A year or so of visits to the new town is advisable before you choose it. Rent out your old home, if feasible, and do not sell it at once if you move. This gives you time to change your mind.

12. Start thinking and talking, as of next week, about tomorrow. The yesterdays won't get you anywhere, and they bore others. Move up to your retirement day with loyalty to the company, with quietness, and with a smile. Take your g o i d and valuable self into retirement with a firm resolve not to go back visiting the hired help.

UN Peace-Keeping Costs Biggest Problem Facing Assembly as Year's End

By JOSEPH MacSWEEN

UNITED NATIONS (CP) — The Canadian delegation fought in a quiet but effective way at the 17th United Nations General Assembly which adjourned just before Christmas.

In the nature of things, few items that Canada worked on with prime initiative were settled by the end of the session— peace - keeping costs in The Congo and the Middle East and this seems destined for a new hearing at a special assembly, probably in May.

Canada introduced two key resolutions—widely co - sponsored—calling for preparation of a world court advisory opinion on the subject and for a thorough study on the future financing of peace-keeping operations.

Both resolutions received ringing approval but the Soviet Union and France led the opposition to the world court's ruling that peace-keeping costs are "costs of the organization" to be shared by all"countries that are members.

With the UN,some $130,000,000 in the hole because of the peace-keeping jobs, Secretary-General U Thant was authorized to spend until June 30 up to $10,000,000 a month for The Congo and $1,380,000 a month for the Middle East operation —in both of which Canada has contingents.

HAPPIEST EVENT

Perhaps the happiest event of the session was the election of Thant — warmly supported by Canada—as full-fledged secretary-general, with the Soviet Union dropping its demand at least temporarily for a Troika.

External Affairs Minister Howard Green more frequently defined the chief problem in the world as disarmament. Canada came to Ottawa by the skin of its nose with a proposal regarding nuclear tests—trying to reconcile the positions of the nuclear powers with those of the non-aligned nations—that kept disarmament in negotiations in Geneva. —Negotiations there were continued throughout the year for the UN talks in New York.

For several years now Canada has taken the initiative in pushing a resolution for global study of atomic radiation with the idea of producing radiation data like weather reports. The world meteorological organization was instructed at the 17th session to follow up its studies in conjunction with the UN scientific committee, with a view to making this a reality.

IMPORTANT EFFORT

Ambassador Paul Tremblay, vice-chairman of the Canadian delegation, can regard this as one of his important efforts and he also has taken a personal hand in directing his delegation's affairs in the 28-nation outer space committee. He proposed in the assembly a single communications system that the United States and the Soviet Union announced later as a policy aim.

Canada produced something of a diplomatic coup when it won agreement between the "haves" and the "have not" countries on a world trade conference to be held early in 1964.

The underdeveloped countries were determined to hold it earlier—fearful of the European Common Market and Britain's possible entry—but such countries as the United States and France wanted it later. Canada was giving plaudits to Premier Iomata for making a compromise on this first world conference to reconsider the problems of developing countries.

Similarly, Canadian diplomats were instrumental in obtaining a renewal for the mandate of the high commissioner for refugees, for defining how international law can develop friendly relations among states, and for assisting in the acclamation approval of an Indian proposal for an "international cooperation year" in 1965.

WORK ON COLONIES

Any Canadian diplomat will tell you the big Canadian effort at the session was the definition of the Canadian approach to colonial problems, including Soviet colonialism.

Prime Minister Diefenbaker challenged Soviet Premier Khrushchev at the assembly in 1960 to show where Russia had freed any peoples during this era of freedom as exemplified by Britain and France with their dependent peoples. Heath Macquarrie, parliamentary assistant to Green, followed up this theme at the just-ended session, asking Moscow to throw light on the "question of fairness."

In general, regarding the "old colonialism," Canada advocated "gradualism" as emerging countries grasped their rights sometimes unprepared as with The Congo.

Sanctions were opposed as an economic device to win political means, as in the case of Africa, but Canada demanded Portugal regarding African Angola, and as regards South Africa.

Prisoners of Nazis Burned Alive Witnesses Tell Court

By HANNS NEUERBOURG

COBLENZ, Germany (AP)— The court called a short recess —long enough for a cigarette.

Two witnesses had just testified how prisoners of the Nazis were burned alive.

Now the courtroom was empty except for some of the guards and some of the 13 former SS men who did not want a cigarette.

In one corner of the courtroom, defendant Arthur Wilke stood before a large green map of western Russia.

"I tell you, those Russians were just devilish," Wilke said. Two young policemen listened to him intently.

Wilke and 11 others were charged with the war murder of 70,000 Jews, Russians, gypsies and mental patients.

Outside in the corridor, a lively discussion was going on.

WHY NOT HALT THEM

"Why don't they close the books now that Adolf Eichmann is dead?" one reporter asked. "After all — 20 years have passed since these things happened."

"Would you agree to close the books if these men had slain your parents?" another visitor objected.

The Coblenz hearing is one of hundreds of minor war trials which have been, are being or will be held in a country still struggling to settle accounts with its Nazi past.

Twelve men sit in the Coblenz dock. Four are more faceless courts in Bonn, Flensburg, Bamberg. When these trials are over, others will follow. Thousands already have been convicted. At least 700 war crimes suspects still are to be tried. Trials may run into 1970.

This may be a reason why public interest in Germany is limited even in this town where Georg Heuser, on trial here with 11 others, was a chief detective before his arrest in 1945.

Why weren't these people tried long ago? How did a man like Heuser become chief detective? Why does it take years to prepare trials?

GIVE THEIR VIEWS

A poll of several prosecutors, most of them young men after the war ended, brought these views:

All war crimes trials in the early post-war period were staged by the allied powers and no German officials had access to the investigation. Often interrogations were done haphazardly.

When Germany became sovereign again, its courts began on a strictly federal basis, making difficult any co-ordinated work. Most files and archives were in Washington, London or Moscow. SS officers, who concealed their Nazi past, could not be checked on.

"There was also a certain lack of enthusiasm in some parts of the legal machinery," said Prosecutor Dietrich Zeigt of the central German war crimes investigation board set up at Ludwigburg in 1958.

Rain And Snow Hit Maritimes, Cold In Ontario

Roads Plugged, Power Off in Many Places

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Snow and rain struck the Maritimes Sunday with the fury of an autumn hurricane.

The storm swept in from the Atlantic packing winds gusts of more than 100 miles an hour. Mild temperatures ended the lenger in southern Maritime districts as the storm approached, but temperatures plunged as it moved northward.

Severe winter weather with below-zero temperatures hit Ontario and Quebec. A moderating trend was expected in British Columbia and through most of the Prairies into parts of Ontario. But further east more of the same bitter cold and snow of the weekend was expected.

The weekend weather claimed at least three lives.

In central and northwestern New Brunswick the precipitation was entirely snow. Nearly two feet of it fell in some places and roads were plugged. Two men died of heart attacks while working in the snow.

Vicious winds hit all three Maritime provinces, exceeding 100 miles an hour at Greenwood in Nova Scotia, Annapolis Valley. At Charlottetown there was a gust of 80 miles an hour.

EXPECT MORE SNOW

Another four to eight inches of snow was expected in southern New Brunswick, with about five inches in Prince Edward Island and southern New Brunswick. Nova Scotia would get lesser amounts. Newfoundland was expected to get strong winds and some snow.

Power and telegraph and telephone communications were knocked out at intervals during the height of the storm. Halifax was blacked out for less than an hour when a sheet of roofing blew against power transformers.

Ships sought shelter in ports and lobster fishermen along Nova Scotia's south shore feared heavy losses in gear. The fishermen have the severe storm losses since the lobster season opened Dec. 1.

Little relief from the bitter cold was expected in Quebec, out which Sunday had increased the harshness of a 10-below temperature to an estimated 65 below were expected to ease.

There will be scattered snow flurries in Ontario today, but warmer temperatures are on the way. To wrest the severe weather in Toronto the mercury was expected to rise to 15 above today.

Ice-covered roads, blamed for at least one Ontario death during the weekend, will again be hazardous and police warned drivers to be careful. Snow has caused blackouts of up to 1½ hours in Oakville and Oshawa Sunday.

British Columbia will probably be the warmest province with temperatures reaching the high 40s in many areas and the sun coming through.

The cold weather brought a rash of house fires across Canada as households overheated stoves and furnaces but no fatalities were reported.

LONDON (CP) — More snow fell in parts of the British Isles today while in other sections thawing brought a threat of icy floods in the wake of the worst cold wave in 15 years.

Weekend blizzards that swept the UNSTP into line with Toronto-area teachers.

"I hope every one of you realizes this is not just the fight of the teachers in Metro," Dr. S. G. B. Robinson, the federation's general secretary, told the delegates. "It affects each one of you."

The Metropolitan Toronto school board has decided to ask the provincial government to pass legislation permitting establishment of a uniform pay scale for high school teachers in the area.

The board has also voted to ask the government to help it determine some aspects of amalgamation.

WOULD DISCONTINUE

The federation's advisory council of principals recommends discontinuance of legislation permitting teachers who need extra training in weak subjects.

The council continued, the report said, "they should be subject to appraisal and report on a controlled experimental basis by the Ontario department of education until such time as their validity has been accepted or rejected."

The report said the summer school give students "a false sense of security in their academic achievement.

"The schools are being burdened with students ill-prepared to carry the responsibilities involved in the more advanced work of the next grade."

Federation officials said the report contains views which did not involve schools engaged in giving practice teaching to Ontario College of Education students, will be forwarded to the department of education.

VOWS SAID WITH WARMTH — It was chilly in the church when Mark Yale Harris of Shaker Heights, near Cleveland, and Elisabeth Meyer, 23, formerly of Lancaster, Ohio, were married at Tettenhall Wood, England. International Picture Much Improved in Past Year

WASHINGTON (AP) — The year 1962 merges into 1963 with the international picture much improved in the eyes of the Kennedy administration.

The Cuban showdown with Russia has sent a surge of confidence through Washington's leadership that it can successfully tackle the complex international problems of the 1960s.

Considerable credit for the improvement in the international scene is given to the troubles now besetting the once seemingly monolithic Communist bloc.

A massive reappraisal is believed under way in the Kremlin, beset by its far-ranging, quarrel with Peking, various economic setbacks, restiveness in satellites and confusion among Communist parties abroad.

Thus United States strategists look for a lull in Moscow offensives over the next few months. Talks on such long-standing issues as disarmament and Berlin are expected to continue, though no particular forward movement is in sight.

An East-West breather would give the U.S. a chance to focus more on other problems where difficulties admittedly lie ahead.

Among these is the shaping of a more closely united Atlantic community, slated to be a major target of U.S. foreign policy in the coming year.

President Kennedy's Nassau pact offer of U.S. Polaris submarine missiles for Britain and France, provided they are assigned to the North Atlantic Treaty Organization force, is ticketed for NATO discussions in Paris starting next month. Another great issue for the Western community is the Border Guard And Fiancee Flee to West

BRUNSWICK, Germany (AP) — A 20-year-old East German border guard and his 18-year-old fiancee trudged through more than two feet of snow in the Harz Mountains to flee to West German territory today.

West German authorities said the soldier was familiar with the area and thus was able to find a section which was not mined.

The flight brought to 78 the number of East German border guards who crossed into the West in 1962 over a tightly-guarded stretch of about 160 miles of lower Saxony.

An East German refugee was admitted to hospital in Bavaria with severe frostbite after fleeing barefoot over the snow-covered hills of Upper Franconia. Police said Peter Goldsmann, a 22-year-old steelworker, lost his shoes in more than three feet of snow but ran on until he reached a Western border post.

WILL EXCHANGE MORE RELATIVES FOR AIR SERVICE

Latest Offer Made by Castro

KEY WEST, Fla. (AP)—Fidel Castro's government says that additional relatives of the freed invasion forces could leave Cuba only if Pan American Airways resumes its service to the Communist island.

The new stand was reported by Havana radio Sunday in a communique from Castro's headquarters after the government-controlled station, monitored here, had ridiculed President Kennedy's participation in a Saturday ceremony at Miami welcoming freed Bay of Pigs invasion prisoners.

Members of the brigade were captured by Castro's forces when the April 17, 1961 invasion collapsed.

"The revolutionary government will maintain its policy to authorize the departure from the country of all those desiring to leave as soon as the Pan American Airways resumes its flights to Cuba which it suspended by a decision of North American authorities," the Castro note said.

No elaboration of the statement was given.

A Pan American spokesman in New York said the airline would resume flights to provide normal service to Cuba. He said restrictions and limited travel would continue for Americans in Cuban flights in the last several years.

Private and commercial flights to and over the island were banned by the United States during the crisis over Castro's construction of Soviet missile bases.

In commenting on Kennedy's visit to Miami to greet the returning prisoners, the broadcast said: "Kennedy admitted his participation and contribution in all steps related to satisfy the indemnification demanded by Cuba's revolutionary justice to free the mercenaries."

The radio described Kennedy as "in an exhibitionist and disgusting Yankee, who persists in his aggressive policy toward Cuba, in open violation of the United Nations' charter."

The radio said the Cubans who packed Miami's Orange Bowl stadium were "men and women without a country."

The announcement of the new condition for permitting more Cubans to leave was accompanied by denials of reports that Castro had discussed arrangements for another group to leave and that the premier would visit the United States.

Foreign Minister Raul Roa Garcia said Friday that Castro's regime reneged on an offer to allow 1,000 more Cubans to leave the island on a second flight chartered by the American Red Cross.

UN Demands Surrender Of Katangan Planes

Fighting Reported Near Town of Kamina

CP from Reuters-AP

LEOPOLDVILLE, The Congo United Nations forces today seized control of another key town in Katanga province and warned they will destroy all Katangan planes if the aircraft are not surrendered to the UN by Tuesday morning.

Swedish and Ghanaian UN troops advanced into the north-central town of Kamina from their base 18 miles away after overcoming resistance by Katangan gendarmes.

The UN had reported Sunday that Ghanaian UN troops had seized the town, 200 miles northwest of Elisabethville, capital of the secessionist province.

But later reports said the Ghanaian troops met resistance from Katangan gendarmes near the big Kamina UN base and outside Kamina town and did not take the strategic centre until today.

The town's capture came in the wake of two weekend air attacks by UN fighter planes on Katangan airbases, including the main Katangan air base at Kolwezi.

As the UN forces consolidated their lightning military victory in the UN command gave Katangan pilots until noon Tuesday to surrender themselves and their planes.

It said it will destroy all Katangan aircraft "wherever they are found" if they are not surrendered.

The UN "urgently requested" that the Katangan aircraft be flown to its Manono Air Base, about 300 miles west of Elisabethville. It said the pilots whose planes should be unarmed, would be "taken into United Nations custody, and their personal safety guaranteed."

President Moise Tshombe of Katanga has refused to return to his strife - torn province today from Salisbury, Southern Rhodesia, where he threatened Sunday to battle United Nations forces to the extent of an "Algerian type" war.

However, the United Nations has guaranteed Tshombe's freedom on his return to this capital of Elisabethville. Life appeared to be slowly returning to normal there today following the bitter UN-Katanga fighting which broke out Friday.

Tshombe spent the night at the home of Prime Minister Sir Roy Welensky.

Tshombe told reporters that his Katangans, including myself, prefer to die rather than accept a political settlement imposed by the United Nations."

He said Katanga's resistance to the UN would last longer than the seven-year Algerian war which ended last spring.

"Why should we not even blow up the United Nations and its installations?" he asked. The company is a huge Belgian - controlled mining concern which accounts for most of Katanga's total wealth.

9 Men Aboard, Tugboat Is Presumed Lost

NEW YORK (AP)—A tugboat with nine men aboard was presumed lost today in the rough and frigid waters of Long Island Sound.

The United States Coast Guard said the 100-foot vessel, the Gwendolyn Steers, apparently went down in the vicinity of Target Rock and Eaton's Neck Point, about 40 miles east of New York City.

A lifeboat from the vessel was washed ashore with one body in it. The victim apparently had died of exposure. There was no indication of survivors.

The tug disappeared, after radioing late Sunday that she was taking on water. A storm was raging at the time, with winds churning 15-foot waves.

A coast guard amphibian plane took off this morning from Floyd Bennett field to search the area, after delays because of high winds.

The tug was operated by the Steers Coal Transit Company of Huntington, N.Y.

West N. Guinea Now in Control Of Indonesia

THE HAGUE, The Netherlands (Reuters)—Indonesia today "symbolic a l l y" assumed control of the former Dutch colony of West New Guinea, reports received here said.

The Dutch flag was lowered for the last time in the territory, officially marking the end of more than a century of Dutch colonization in the Indonesian archipelago.

One hour after the Dutch flag was lowered, the Indonesian flag and the United Nations flag were raised side by side, marking a "symbolic transfer of authority to the UN for six months ahead of the actual handing over of control of West New Guinea to Indonesia by the United Nations.

Last August, The Netherlands and Indonesia agreed the UN should take over the interim administration of the Indonesian-held territory of West Irian, with Indonesia assuming full control May 1, 1963.

Indonesia's President Sukarno was said to have insisted the Indonesian flag should fly alongside the UN flag from the end of 1962.

West Must 'Seek Out and Make' Chances to Negotiate—Macmillan

LONDON (Reuters) — Prime Minister Macmillan says the West in the must itself "seek out and make" opportunities for negotiation.

In a New Year's Eve article writing for the ruling Conservative party's weekly newsletter, Macmillan says:

Today's Chuckle

A bore is a person who talks when you want to.

THE WEATHER

Synopsis: The cold weather will persist across most of Ontario until New Year's Day. However, northern regions will not be quite as cold tonight and some moderation in temperature will begin in southern regions Tuesday.

"What all of us yearn for most as we enter 1963 is peace — a firm peace to replace the uneasy truce achieved by a balance of nuclear power.

"It would be folly to upset that balance by weakening our own defence. But we in the West must neglect no opportunity that presents itself for negotiations. Indeed we must make ourselves seek out and make such opportunities."

Macmillan assessed the opportunities for 1963 this way:

"To keep Britain up-to-date and in the van of progress in an age of unparalleled scientific advance, to earn new prosperity and see that its fruits are even more widely shared, to use our economic strength to do our duty to our Commonwealth and other neighbors in the world and to play our full part in preserving peace and freedom."

Temperatures Said Lowest in Years

Year End Crushes District in Icy Grip

Auld Acquaintance.with 1962 will be best forgot in Quinte district weather records.

The Old Year today crushed the district in the farewell embrace of a polar bear, grinding its foes in bleaky temperatures on the lowest registered in years.

The record speaks for itself as it showed an overnight low of 14 below in Belleville. At the extreme north end of the district it hovered between 25 and 30 below in the Bancroft area.

The bitter — and clear — weather snap over the Quinte area is part of a cold-weather wire gripping Ontario and Quebec. It gives the New Year one reason for being welcomed — the weatherman promises the cold front will give way to slightly warmer temperatures in the next day.

In the meantime, keep your fingers crossed — and mittened.

The cold front sheered across the district early Sunday morning in the wake of heavy snow that ended in the Belleville-Trenton area Saturday evening.

In Belleville, the official Sunday low was 10 below with the mercury climbing painfully through the day and making only a comeback to sub-zero regions.

A driving north wind carried the cold front on its teeth through most of Sunday.

As the sun gave up the ghost of a beating attempt by late afternoon, the cold front pressed its advantage. By 11 p.m. Sunday the official low in Belleville was minus 11, and even lower the further north the mercury travelled.

By early morning the thermometer was practically a fugitive.

One of Belleville's biggest taxi companies at one point this morning warned fares of a 20-minute delay in cabs ordered, as starting difficulties tried the patience of motorists.

For many drivers the freeze-up couldn't have started on a worse day. Cold-weather starting troubles hit on Sunday — when most service garages are closed. That, combined with the general desire to keep out of the weather's way, helped produce a cut in the usual volume of Sunday travel in the district.

Belleville police forces reported no serious accidents in the area Sunday afternoon, though drifting on Saturday's storm — was bad on some secondary roads.

One hazard threatened by the cold snap caused fire department officials anxiety. Warnings were issued to householders against overstraining furnaces by boosting thermostats to keep out cold.

The tenor of the warning was to keep warm — but not at any cost. Fire left two families homeless in this district during the weekend, (see reports elsewhere in this edition).

Chinese Communists' Orthodoxy Is Defended in Peking Manifesto

PEKING (Reuters) — The Chinese Communist party issued today a defence of its policies that is regarded as what amounted to a manifesto of Chinese "orthodoxy" in the light of the present ideological rift in world communism.

The defence was contained in a 20,000-word editorial in the People's Daily, the official party newspaper.

The editorial, which observers believe was mainly the work of party boss Mao Tse-tung, was the head of state Liu Shao-chi, the countries two top theoreticians, included bitter criticism of attacks by other Communist parties on the Chinese line.

The editorial said allegations that China wanted to plunge the world into a nuclear war over Berlin were "malicious" and "despicable slanders." It said: "What we did strongly oppose, and still strongly oppose and will strongly oppose in the future is the sacrifice of another country's sovereignty as a means of reaching a compromise with imperialism.

"A compromise of this sort can only be regarded as 100-per-cent appeasement, a 'Munich' pure and simple."

While the editorial was ostensibly an answer to attacks made on the Chinese by Palmiro Togliatti, the Italian Communist party boss at the recent Italian party congress, observers said it was also a clear reply to Soviet party criticism for his criticism of the Chinese.

In a recent speech to the Soviet parliament, Khrushchev advised those who consider the west a "paper tiger" to remember that the "paper tiger has nuclear teeth."

He also criticized those elements who had hoped to drive Russia and the U.S. to thermonuclear war over Cuba.

Boisterous Welcomes Await Arrival of '1963' Cherub

Tonight is the night of the wealth and the wassail!

Tonight at the magic hour of twelve, Old "1963" will come zooming in on wing-spreads, a prayer and an ice-cube.

The symbolod cherubim won't lack for a warm welcome.

At all levels from the lowly "$1.00" per- person to the reported tops of $12.00 per couple, the reception will be in keeping with the whoopee of previous years.

In some places a gourmet preamble to the midnight whoop-de-do is planned. In others diners will precede the twist, waltz, rock-'n-roll, bossnova and charleston capers.

Organized assaults on turkey and other culinary tidbits are planned to take place an hour or so before the magical hour of midnight — and osculation in yes other sparly spots.

The majority of party-giving hotels, motels, associations clubs and whatnot have planned no exceptions that should delight the sponsors of the annual New Year's Day asprirn-bufferial race.

The Bay of Quinte Yacht Club is one of the few to dine before dancing.

One of the topflight parties of the night is that of the Belleville Sirine Club where the nobles will be hosts to members and guests at a dance-buffet in the well-appointed D. L. Stover Memorial Auditorium.

Officers of the Hastings and Prince Edward Regiment will celebrate New Year's Eve in colorful aura of regimental uniforms and beautifully-gowned ladies in their mess. Sergeants of the regiment are having a buffet dinner in the mess.

The regiment's "D" Company in Picton is entertaining a large number of members and guests in the armouries.

The Belleville Club plans a post-midnight dancing and a late-evening buffet.

The Club Commodore, always a popular New Year's Eve rendezvous, will again cater to a large crowd of celebrators.

The Air Force, Air Force Veterans' branch here is staging one of the best receptions in years, with dancing and dining. The Canadian Legion branch is not holding a celebration party.

The "Four Seasons Room" of the Yoe Motel, with prizes in keeping, will be the scene of one of the outstanding celebrations of the evening.

The "Rheingold Club" of the city and district will welcome the New Year in special fashion at the Hotel Quinte.

Members of the "Club 39" will celebrate at Engineers' Hall, the Orange Hall here is also the spot for gay festivities.

The Club Cedars, according to reports, has been "sold out" for the evening's fun.

The Royal Arch Masons Council is also having a reception reported to be one of the best-planned in years.

There is the whoopee confined to the city. Many suburban communities will ring to the gaiety and laughter of the occasion. The Wellington Legion branch is holding a big party, as is the Elks' branch in Picton.

It is reported the various messes of the Royal Canadian Air Force at Trenton will hold forth in regular New Year's Eve party style.

Rounding out mass whoopde-do will be numerous private dinners and parties.

Late dinners in many instances will precede the usual welcome to the incoming year.

Word of record at morning.

The police will be on the lookout for any who develop a yen to exchange a bottle for a throttle.

In fact the New Year's Eve celebrator who knows his facts ing would be well advised to leave the family chariot in the garage and use a taxi.

And the same to you!

County Museum Is Open Today

When the Hastings County Museum opened for the 1962 season last April, museum officials were hoping for an attendance of 4,000 for the year.

But yesterday afternoon, total attendance was just slightly more than that figure. Therefore, the museum is to be open this afternoon from 2 to 5 and this evening from 7 to 8.

When the 4,000th visitor walks through the museum door, he or she will receive special gifts from the museum. And every person visiting the museum today they will receive free an early picture postcard of Belleville or the Bay of Quinte. These postcards show such things as the old Belleville high school, Massassaga Park, and the Steamer "Brockville" and views of the craft on the bay.

This is the last chance this season for district residents to visit the County Museum, 240 Church Street, since the museum will now close until April 1963.

Youth Killed, Car Smashes Into Rock Cut

BANCROFT (Special) — An automobile smashed into a rock cut on Highway 62 north of here early Sunday morning, killing a passenger and sending the driver and his wife to hospital.

Instantly killed in the wreckage was Inor Hinse, 22 of Maple Leaf.

His wife a passenger in the car, police say was driven by 29-year-old Donald Scott, of Maynooth, which went out of control on the highway, a half-mile south of the North Bay-Sault Ste Marie road.

Scott and his 25-year-old wife Marjorie, were taken to hospital at Peterborough with injuries immediately undetermined injuries.

Cause of the accident, still unknown, is being investigated by provincial police from here.

It was the second fatal accident near here this weekend. Friday night two men were killed in a head-on crash on Highway 28, seven miles west of this town.

M. White's Rink Wins Mixed Spiel at Club

A rink of Mrs. Comile McCollam, Al McCollam, Mrs. Heather White with Mac White skipping won the mixed bonspiel sponsored by the Quinte Curling Club for the holiday weekend. Mr. and Mrs. Jim Durrant with Mr. and Mrs. Gil Wamboldt won the two-game high score, while a rink of Mr. and Mrs. Ernie Jones with Mr. and Mrs. Ernie Wilkinson won the one-game high. Charles Lovett's rink of Mr. and Mrs. Dave Duffy and Mr. and Mrs. Charles Lovett won the hidden score prize.

The draw was successfully conducted by Harold Mott and his committee and one game was played on Friday night with two on Saturday afternoon. It was unfortunate that more rinks did not enter the competition. There were only eight rinks in play and that is certainly a small number when the number of rinks that is available in the club. There is no better time to be competing than a spiel either men or women from the club membership with approximately one-half the members were tired from a long grind of business through the holiday season. It is to be hoped that more interest will be shown in the events that are scheduled during until the end of the season.

One of the big events coming early in the New Year is the Sportsmen's bonspiel and it is scheduled for January, 12th. Last year the entry list was overcrowded and it is hoped the same conditions will prevail this year.

Mac White and his rink curled well through the spiel winning all three games handily with the skip making many key shots at the finish while Wamboldt and his rink were there beaten in the first game by Ruth Bean with a fourth end lead was no stopping him, while Ernie Wilkinson and his rink curled well in the remaining two one game high. It was an enjoyable spiel and the women members of the club supplied delicious refreshments during the games.

The Tankard competition, which is a knockout two-rink affair will be held in Kingston next Sunday and it is hoped that the Quinte club will have two rinks down to compete. Sure there will be lot of competition but it is a thrill to get experience. The results of the spiel are:

Ruth Bean, Jack Murphy, Marj McNevin, Don McNevin, sk., 16; Anne Watkin, Bun Sheffield, Jean Sheffield, H. Wilkinson, sk., 7.

Connie McCollam, Al McCollam, Heather White, Mac White, sk., 12; Audrey Gowsell, Bill Gowsell, Mrs. McCorquodale, Dr. McCorquodale, sk., 8.

Gladys Duffy, Gordon Duffy, Jean Lovett, Charles Lovett, sk., 8; Dave Duffy, Mrs. Ernie Wilkinson, Ernie Wilkinson, sk., 6.

Anne Acton, Ron Acton, Eileen Durrant, Jim Durrant, Patsy Wamboldt, Gil Wamboldt, sk., 4.

SECOND GAME

Gil Wamboldt, sk., 16; Wilkinson, Charles Lovett sk. 10; Don McNevin, sk., 6;

Mac White, sk., 6; Ron Bean, sk., 4.

Dr. McCorquodale, sk., 8; Ervin Richardson, sk., 0.

THIRD GAME

Mac White, sk., 6; Gil Wamboldt, sk., 5; Charles Lovett sk. 10; Don McNevin, sk., 8;

Dr. McCorquodale, sk., 7; Gil Wamboldt, sk., 5; of the invasion prisoners, said Saturday in Lake Placid, N.Y., that under his agreement with Premier Castro, about 5,000 relatives of the prisoners are to come to the United States.

Ron Benn, sk., 6; Don McNevin, sk., 3.

Donovan said the Red Cross is chartering a second freighter to take another shipment of drugs and supplies to Cuba and bring back a second group of the relatives and friends.

Air-mail gifts provide another instalment of the $53,000,000 in ransom promised by Castro in exchange for the prisoners, Donovan said more relatives will be carried on each voyage.

In Miami Saturday President Kennedy, while making no promises of U.S. United States armed intervention in Cuba, urged a cheering Cuban crowd in the Orange Bowl to prepare for the day of freedom in their homeland.

Kennedy clenched his fist repeatedly and pounded it on the speaker's rostrum as he addressed the 1,113 released Bay of Pigs invasion captives and some 30,000 others in the audience.

The Cubans chanted "guerra" (war) and "libertad" (liberty) as Kennedy spoke.

After accepting the invasion brigade's colors, smuggled out of Cuba, Kennedy said:

"I can assure you that this flag will be returned to this brigade in a free Havana."

Mrs. Kennedy, speaking in Spanish, told the brigade members she hoped her young son, John Jr., will grow up to be "as great at least half as brave as the members of Brigade 2506."

Older Boys' Parliament Names Next Year's Leaders

The newly-elected officers for the Forty-Third Session of the Ontario Older Boys' Parliament, next year, get in a practice argument before they actually take office. Left is John Mungham of Toronto, a first-year student at the University of Toronto, and the Leader of the Opposition for next year's session. Don Francis, of Conn, Ontario, a third-year student at U. of T., is Premier for next year. Both boys are 20 years old, and would not be eligible for the Parliament as private members' bills. They were elected by preferential ballot, each voter listing seven names in the order of preference, and the positions went to the candidates whose names appeared most often high on the lists. It has not yet been decided where next year's session will be held. This year's session, held at Albert College and the OSD, here, concludes today.

Three of Quads Die After Birth, Other Critical

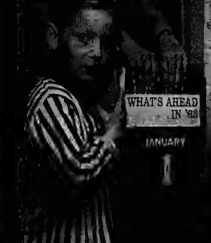
PHILADELPHIA (AP) — The wife of an aerospace engineer gave birth to quadruplets Sunday. Three of them died Sunday night and the fourth, a boy, was reported in critical condition today.

"We were both told together (of the deaths)," said the father, Alvin Spector, 27. "Of course we were very sad to hear it. There was nothing we could do. The hospital did everything they could. We just had to accept the fact."

The three boys and a girl were the first children born to the Spectors, childhood sweethearts who were married two years ago.

The weights of the children ranged from one pound, 9½ ounces to one pound, 13¼ ounces.

Two Homemade Rockets Fired At Guelph



GUELPH, Ont. (CP) — Two small homemade rockets were fired near here Saturday by amateur rocketers who say they have tested the results of the test to Prime Minister Diefenbaker.

The firing was conducted by Michael Vlaskine, a Guelph electronics manufacturer was supervised by chemists and engineers. A number of teen-aged rocket enthusiasts looked on.

It was held in an effort to ascertain facts concerning safety precautions. The rocketeers hope by sending the information to the prime minister it will result in a change in regulations which now prohibit rocket firings except at tests by experts.

Mr. Valeriote said that according to the letter of the Explosives Act of 1946 the rocket tests may have been illegal. He added however, there were experts present. One of the rockets, three feet long and fuelled by a sulphur and icing sugar preparation, reached a height of 1,500 feet. The other, half the size, was powered by a sulphur preparation only.

A control shack was set up about 500 yards from the rockets and the firings were monitored by closed-circuit television.

SNEAK PREVIEW—Like hundreds of other little people in the Quinte area, David Bonter, 3, of Trenton, will be fast asleep when the New Year comes in. He decided to have a peek beforehand, however, while his mother was making preparations for the calendar change.

Teachers Want Grant Hike To Increase Their Salaries

TORONTO (CP)—The Ontario Public School Men Teachers' Federation Saturday voted for increased, provincial grants to school boards to provide a bonus system to increase teachers' salaries.

The federation will ask the Ontario Teachers' Federation to present the proposal to the government.

The proposal calls for an additional $500 grant for each Standard 2 teacher employed by a school board, $800 for a Standard 3 teacher and $1,200 for a Standard 4 teacher.

Delegates said that if the government agreed to the additional grants, they hoped most of the extra money would be used for pay increases.

Jack Fisher, OPSMTF assistant secretary, said the existing grant system does not encourage boards to hire the best-qualified teachers.

He said the government shared in the cost of salaries that did not exceed $5,450 and the board paid the remainder.

However, $5,450 was often the maximum salary because the board had to pay all of any additional amount.

The convention authorized an investigation into the possible establishment of post-graduate schools of education at Ontario universities.

ASKS WATERLOO, OTHERS

General Secretary Winston Davies said the University of Waterloo, Wilfrid Laurier University, the University of Western Ontario and McMaster University have been approached about establishing such schools.

He said the only regular post-graduate courses available now are taught at the Ontario College of Education by the University of Toronto.

Delegates voted to spend $5,000 to hire a firm of business consultants to examine the structure, operation and business procedures of the federation.

Mr. Earle Sparks, supervising principal of Simcoe public schools, was elected president. Vice-presidents are Howard F. Gillies, principal of Scottlea Public School, St. Catharines, and Harold MacDonald, principal of Alexander Muir Public School, Sault Ste. Marie. Among those elected to the board of governors was William Tamney, music supervisor of the department of national defence school at RCAF Station Centralia.

12 Fatalities Across Canada During Weekend

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Canada's road-death toll in the first half of the four-day New Year's weekend was less than a quarter that of the comparable period Christmas weekend.

Five provinces shared the dozen deaths, Ontario reporting seven deaths, Quebec three and Newfoundland and British Columbia one each.

The five-day Christmas weekend produced a total of 129 accidental deaths, 85 of them in traffic.

The survey does not include industrial or natural deaths or known suicides.

The Ontario dead:

FRIDAY

Mrs. Maria Badum, 53, struck by a car while stepping off a bus in Hamilton.

Mrs. Adelaine Harris, 79, struck by a car while crossing an intersection in Toronto.

SATURDAY

Rev. Edmund Patrick Behan, of Toronto, when his car struck a tree near Ottawa.

Douglas Wilkins, 3, son of Mr. and Mrs. George Wilkins of Brantford, in a two-car collision on Highway 2 near Melbourne.

All 25 Aboard French Plane Are Killed

GHISONI, Corsica (Reuters) —All 25 persons aboard a French airliner were killed when the plane crashed into a mountain near here Saturday, rescuers confirmed today.

The first group of rescuers to reach the scene reported by radio there were no survivors.

A force of 100 volunteers set out at dawn for the scene of the crash. The rescue teams fought blinding snow, fog, low cloud and bitter mountain cold to reach the wrecked four-engined airliner.

The plane, owned by the French airline Aimautic, was flying from Bastia to Ajaccio, Corsica, with members and supporters of the Bastia basketball team when it crashed into 7,500 foot Mount Renoso, near the summit.

Unemployment Big Challenge To U.K. Govt.

By FRASER WIGHTON

LONDON (Reuters)—British Treasury Chief Reginald Maudling faces tough talks with the lon leaders Wednesday on the country's problem of rising unemployment.

The mounting total of jobless at 566,196 this month, the highest in four years—is believed by politicians to be the biggest single challenge facing the Conservative government.

Union leaders will step up their pressure on the government for more economic economic policies and for special measures to deal with the high unemployment areas — notably Scotland, the north of England and Northern Ireland.

They want the government to use more vigorous persuasion with employers to create new work by moving industry into depressed areas.

WANT BOLDER ACTION

Many of the proposals of the big Trades Union Congress for creating new work are in line with the government's own thinking but the union leaders want bolder action, even if it means taking some slight economic risk.

The Scottish Trades Union Congress has sent a special memorandum to Prime Minister Macmillan asserting that the main hope of saving Scotland from the worst effects of unemployment is the development of a powerful Scottish development authority.

They are hardest hit by the job slump in Northern Ireland, centre for textiles, engineering, shipbuilding and aircraft industries.

There, 7.8 per cent of all local labor is out of work.

BOYS' ROCKET FATAL

LOS ANGELES (AP) — A homemade rocket—a two-foot length of 1¼-inch galvanized pipe stuffed with match heads—killed one 14-year-old boy and severely injured another, authorities reported. The device exploded Saturday as the boys worked on it in Mark Hopkins' home. Mark's left hand was mangled and his left side punctured. His friend Mike Regan was killed.

Hope Peeved Over Action at Customs Office

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — Bob Hope, somewhat peeved, said today, "the only hardship on our annual Christmas tour was going through customs at Los Angeles International airport."

The comedian and his troupe of 60, including Lana Turner and Janis Paige, were detained for more than two hours Sunday after arriving on a non-stop U.S. flight from Guam.

"They went through all our baggage and took a look at each piece of dirty laundry," said Hope. "It's the first time such a thorough search has ever been made of one of our tours.

"What could we smuggle back — a Japanese car? We left all our talent over there."

Hope's troupe performed many times during its 10-day tour of U.S. military bases in Okinawa, Korea and other oriental outposts.

"I thought it was kind of chicken to go through that much delay after such a hard and long tour," he said.

Hope said he planned no official protest but one of his wife's relatives is an official in the U.S. customs service.

"He's out here visiting us," said Hope, "and he's already registered a squawk with the head of customs here."

ROUT CULTISTS

SANTO DOMINGO (AP)—Police routed peasant members of a witchcraft cult and burned down their town in a pitched battle that killed more than 40 persons, the government reported Saturday. The battle was touched off Friday when the cultists ambushed police.

Brrrr. It's cold outside. But this snowman is standing up well under the chilling weather that prevails. It was sub-zero yesterday when Kathy, 8, and Joannie, 5, braved winter blasts to admire the most recent sculpting effort by their father, Gordon Ruckstuhl, R.R. 2, Carrying Place.

Pilot Found Safe in North

EDMONTON (CP) — A pilot found safe after a four-day air search in the Northwest Territories says he landed his Piper aircraft in bad weather because he was lost.

Joe Wager, 27, of Medicine Hat, and his passenger, Roy Francis Lelievre, 42, of the Channel Islands, were not injured when Wager landed the plane undamaged last Wednesday about 35 miles east of Hay River, on the south shore of Great Slave Lake.

"I had to sit down before I was forced down because I was lost," Wager said in a telephone interview Sunday night.

Temperatures during the week dropped as low as 35 degrees below zero in the search area.

The Dakota dropped two RCAF medical officers by parachute after sighting the aircraft. Soon after, a snowmobile from a forestry survey camp five miles away accidentally came on the scene.

Lelievre believed suffered from exposure, was taken by snowmobile to the camp. Wager and the RCAF personnel were returned to Hay River by civilian aircraft.

Wellington, Trenton Fires Leave 2 Families Homeless

New Year's Day will find two Quinte district families homeless because of fire.

At Wellington, Mr. and Mrs. Dirk Couperus and their young son and daughter returned Saturday night from a visit to Picton to find their home destroyed.

Cause of the blaze was not immediately known.

The couple had rented the frame home from a Wellington man, Wilmot Jenkins.

At Trenton, Mr. and Mrs. Orville Little were left homeless when fire broke out at their farm house on York Road, R.R. 4, Trenton.

The blaze was discovered about 1 a.m. Sunday by Mrs. Little. Its cause is still not known.

Firefighters shuttled back and forth to Trenton, drawing water for nearly two hours, after the supply in a nearby well was exhausted. The blaze was out of control by the time reels arrived and firemen concentrated their efforts on saving a barn and outbuildings.

The elderly couple are tenting temporarily nearby with their son, Bud Little.

Their brick home was valued at between $8,000 and $10,000.

Liberal Leader Lists 10 Needs For Canada

OTTAWA (CP) — Liberal Leader Lester Pearson said in a year-end statement Sunday night that "the good things that are within our grasp" will be achieved only "if we regain our sense of national purpose, if we face our problems squarely and work together with thought, resolution and vigor."

Most Canadian industries and farms had a better year in 1962 than "we have experienced for some time," he said. "As a result, the standard of living of Canadians at last recovered from the setback of the previous five years" and "in 1962 we got back to about the same real income, per Canadian, as we had in 1956."

But he said the welcome though limited recovery was not good enough, and he listed 10 needs for Canada.

1. "We must re-invigorate our confederation as a true partnership based on the two founding races and in which all Canadians, of all origins and all provinces, can take a full share."

2. "We must exercise wisely and strongly the influence that we can have in world affairs."

3. "We must have full employment."

4. "We must establish new industries and develop existing ones, to provide jobs, we need and to raise production and incomes."

5. "We must reduce the deficit in our business with other countries; this means that we must take a wholehearted part in international efforts to expand trade."

6. "We must make a major national effort to ensure that our cities and towns are better, cleaner, more efficient places for the growing number of Canadians who live and work and grow up in them."

7. "We must at the same time make sure that our farmers have the opportunity to share fully in the nation's progress."

8. "We must improve the opportunities of education and job-training open to all young Canadians."

9. "We must make sure that every family can get good health care when it is needed, without fear of crippling bills."

10. "We must make new national effort to ensure that our older citizens can live in security and dignity. Besides health care, this requires a national contributory pension available at retirement."

A primary need for Canada in 1963 was an end to "the present political uncertainty." He hoped that "whatever leadership Canadians want will be clearly given."

A Renewal of Opportunity

In a few short hours now, we shall come to the end of another year.

Whatever our normal bedtime, most of us will be awake as the old year dies and a new one is born.

It is a measure of mankind's incurable optimism that most of us will welcome the new, with its 365 days of opportunity, and waste few tears mourning the old, no matter what its record may hold of trouble, toil, tedium and tribulation.

It is well that this is so and those who regard such optimism as blind overlook the record of the centuries. Wars, ills, but mankind has not failed because it is still struggling and still, now and then, recording triumphs.

It is good that we can have a time for new beginnings—yet folly to suppose that this opportunity in itself assures us of any achievements. What is to come has already been largely molded by what has been and we ought, therefore, to temper our welcome to the new year by sober realism of how we have marred the old. But, if we realize that no magic lies in a mere date on our calendar, which is not even the same calendar by which many of our fellowmen measure the days of their lives, we do well to face the future with hope.

Hope, alone, though, is like one crutch to a crippled man—it may enable him to stand but not to move forward. It must be matched by energy, so that the determination to do better to the hope we shall be better done by.

perhaps, when the year just before us is, in its turn, old and spent, we shall not have to turn our back on it if we wish to be gay and shall have greater reason to face its successor with renewed hope.

Beware This Remedy

St. Paul, Minnesota, reports that the cure for the common cold may be lurking around a brewery.

Up to this point, St. Paul has been noted for the beautiful legs of its female inhabitants, pulchritude which is said to be the direct result of the daily exercise involved in climbing up and down its many hills.

Perhaps prosperity, and the resultant two-car families, have been gradually robbing St. Paul of this distinction. This and the crass materialism of the age, may explain the attempt to substitute a cold remedy for cheese cake as the city's chief claim to fame.

The St. Paul report, though, is a particularly sneaky attempt to lead the male of the species down the garden path of temptation. At any age after shaving becomes a painful necessity, rather than a welcome adventure, beer can frequently distract the male of the species from the higher things of life, like shapely ankles. We think it highly unethical that St. Paul should suddenly betray those who have made it famous by hosting temptation in the common cold into the balance against aesthetic.

Rascality of this kind, though, is so commonplace that we should not deign to make a public protest were it not that we suspect a deep, dark plot against the male of the species. Men are incurable optimists and most of them, we feel sure, will not grasp the full significance of the report that St. Paul men who work in the chilly cellars and filter room of a St. Paul brewery are remarkably free from colds and the flu. Their every instinct will lead them to associate this immunity with the product the men handle. We have, however, an uneasy feeling that some Judas scientist will prove that the prophylactic element is provided not by the beer but by the cold cellar. We leave to the naturally lively male imagination what his reaction is likely to be when, abandoning his watch on the neighbor hill, he attempts to settle down with a case of cold preventive, only to be conscripted into cleaning up the cellar.

St. Paul, if it wants to retain the esteem of the male sex, had better pin its faith on beauty and renounce this dastardly attempt to gain fame in the realm of preventive medicine.

Too Much to Expect

The Soviet government has purchased several pages of space in the London Daily Express to print, as advertising rates, the whole of Nikita Khrushchev's world affairs report to the Supreme Soviet in Moscow, Dec. 12. The first installment of the address consists of about 12,000 words, or two full pages of close-packed print. The second half of the address is expected to be about the same length.

Far be it from us to belittle the power of newspaper advertising to stimulate demand—but for 12,000 words at a time?

Penance for Stalinism?

By Harrison E. Salisbury in the New York Saturday Review

The veteran Moscow correspondent of the New York Times describes the autobiography of Russia's best-known writer — a story that reveals as much about the Russian revolution as it does about Ilya Ehrenburg.

Ilya Ehrenburg has been many things — A Soviet propagandist, a young dilettante of the arts in pewter Paris, a schoolboy revolutionary, a patriot who dipped his pen, alternately, in blood and acid, an experimental novelist, a frustrated poet, a delegate to Popular Front and peace conferences.

But he is crowning his career, a long and not infrequently contradictory one, with the production of an epic, couched in the form of a memoir.

The volume now published in handsome format, excellent translation, complete with useful footnotes and an invaluable biographical appendix, comprises the first two volumes of the Ehrenburg memoir as published in Russian.

Four more volumes have appeared in the Soviet Union, each more eagerly awaited than the last and each, it would seem, increasing in frankness and deepening and sharpening the grandiose picture that Ehrenburg has set himself to complete.

What is the nature of Ehrenburg's grand design, and why is it of breathless interest to his countrymen and of deep fascination to readers in the West?

What Ehrenburg is up to in his work on which he has been entitled People, Years and Life — is no mere volume of reminiscences.

This is not a cabinet production of the declining years of a literary man. Ehrenburg, Ehrenburg has taken as his task the recreation of the whole panorama of the world of man's travail as she emerged from semi-feudal cradrom, through revolution, civil war, famine, purges, war, and Khrushchevism, into whatever future the fates hold for her.

He has set out to record these years as he saw them; as the Russians of his generation, literary age saw them; as Europeans, in general, saw them.

He is painting the stories that is not just Russia but most of Europe.

He is introducing a generation of Soviet youth to the civilization that, on the one hand, produced Lenin and the others — Marx, Manet, Gide, Toller, Hemingway, Rolland, Jean-Richard Bloch.

At the same time he is restoring to human life and dignity, of which persecution and fulldimensional personality, the martyred men and women of Russia.

He is introducing to a generation debased and blunted by the lies of mediocrity the artistic realism the great modern painters of Russia — the Chagals, Kandinsky, Malevichs.

And in the process he himself is in the process of shedding his own sins of omission and, perhaps, of commission, in the horrible days of Stalin.

When one reads Ehrenburg the Russia of the years before the Revolution, the Russia of the years of exile life in Paris and Geneva, the Russia of the revolutionary years, the Russia of days takes on depth, color, and perspective.

It is no longer a dull and dreary textbook of Marxism but a glowing panorama of suffering, fighting, exultant, stubborn, and often stupid people.

Ehrenburg says on the first page of his memoirs that he has repeated often in the further volumes published in Russia):

"I consider myself a lucky one because I was stronger or more far-seeing but because there are times when he has to be lucky. man is not like a game of chess dependent on skill but like a lottery." Some think that fate of Stalin passed Ehrenburg a lucky ticket in the lottery or that Ehrenburg fixed the draw in his own favor.

* * *

Be that as it may, none can deny that Ilya Ehrenburg is handsomely acquitting his accounts with his conscience and with the world he may acknowledge.

* * *

If the new Russian Generation is to have a Western-oriented heritage; if it is to understand the Western world as it is to regard itself as being of Europe rather than Asia or of some detached stepchild of it or of communism; if it is to measure men by the standard of truth and reality rather than by paper pledge and propaganda assertion; if it is to understand Europe's role in Russia and Russia's role in Europe; if it is to appreciate the world and who was bad in the nightmare years of Russia from 1924 to 1953 — the debt will largely be in Ehrenburg's account.

For in the guise of a literary memoir Ehrenburg is writing one of the most powerful political testaments of his day.

And in the process he is creating as important and fascinating a document as has emerged from the USSR.

Letter to The Editor

Yule at County Home Was Happy Occasion

Editor,
Ontario Intelligencer,

I am constrained to tell the public of my personal experience with Christmas at the Hastings County Home.

This is my first Christmas here, and the joy, good will and generosity of the government staff and occupants is beyond the imagination of anyone who has no personal interest in the County of Hastings Home.

The spirit of Christmas got under way in the early days of December. Santa Claus appeared on the roof of the institution, halls windows and doors were decorated with Christmas motifs of Santa Claus, reindeer, stockings and snow flurries, etc. As the tempo increased, a beautiful Christmas tree, ceiling high, was added, and the piano swathed in decorations. Nice & therapy plants and baskets of flowers began adding their beauty.

For weeks before, the therapy room was a hive of industry. Under Mrs. Bongard, the leader, fabulous creations of colors, stuffed monkeys, turtle and fish soap containers, exquisite leather purses and billfolds, crowns of Christmas post cards, etc were made, and gone to eager gift seekers as fast as they were ready.

Every night of the week before Christmas Day, concerts were put on by various associations and carol singers marched single file along the corridors singing the songs loved by old and young. While they brought tears to our eyes, they brought joyful memories to our hearts.

Then came Christmas Day. A cellophane bag of candy, apples, oranges, slabs of chocolate, and a sack of peanuts, was on the breakfast tray in bed, or table in our rooms. During the forenoon, the wheelchairs were put to use and the patients were taken to each of us from Mr. and Mrs. Yorke: all shapes and sizes, quishy and hard, thin and fat. Most appropriate gifts for each, beautifully wrapped and sealed in Christmas fashion. We learned by the grape-vine method that for days the staff and extra helpers had been locked away preparing and wrapping the gifts. My own first and last name was on mine, which gave me the feeling of belonging.

As viewed from the big double doors entering from the entrance hall, the dining room was a work of art. Each of the many tables was covered with a snowy cloth, and a colorful red place mat on which was a Christmas motif was the dinner plate, and a Christmas serviette. We all came to our places wearing a paper hat, specially cut Christmas cards, the result of work in the therapy room.

Mayor Haig extended the good wishes of the city in a few well chosen words. Mr. Yorke added a beautiful Christmas message showing the many ways Christmas cares appeal to different people. Mrs. Fred Denyer ably replied for us, stating that we all are agreed on our appreciation of the many, many things Mr. and Mrs. Yorke, their staff, keepers and the County of Hastings, do for us day by day, to keep us comfortably healthy and happy.

Grace was sung with Mrs. Warren at the piano, and then we fell in on an excellent Canadian Christmas dinner, topped off by both plum pudding and mince pie. We then went back to our rooms a dainty red-covered little tub, filled with candy and topped by a colorful candle.

For the balance of the day, friends called, bringing gifts and happy Christmas messages from friends who could not come. Fancy discarded Christmas wrappings were all over the place.

So the day closed, and it was a very happy time for me.

The credit for making it such a joyous occasion goes to Mr. and Mrs. Yorke and all personnel and helpers. Also to the County of Hastings. Let me close like Tiny Tim, in "The Christmas Carol", God Bless us Every One.

A Newcomer to the Home.

Few Adults Really Listen To Their Child

By SYDNEY J. HARRIS

Not long ago, I took out nine 7-year-old boys for a birthday party given by one of them. All the boys behaved well — but the din of their voices was deafening.

Why do young children, on the whole, talk so loudly, and seem incapable of communicating below the level of a shout? Part of it, of course, is due to the exuberance of youth; the superfluous energy that must be discharged in physical motions and exercise of the vocal cords.

But there is another, and perhaps larger, part. Young children are not used to being listened to by adults. They have to repeat and repeat, until finally they adopt the habit of shouting to be heard at all. Few adults really "listen" to what a child is trying to say.

I came home from work the other day, tired and a little cross, and my boy accosted me enthusiastically with a report of the Thanksgiving experiment he had been making. I brushed him semi-mindedly as he told me a few disjointed facts about it, and the results he had achieved. But I wasn't really listening — I had my mind on other things at the time, in shout-language. Then I told him not to be so loud.

Very little children, of 2 or 3, are just learning to communicate. Their words are garbled and imprecise — but they know what they mean. If adults make little effort to understand this embryonic language, then the children sense a kind of "psychic deafness" in us and raise their voices in compensation.

We can see this mechanism working more clearly when we are addressing a foreigner in our language. If he doesn't grasp what we are saying, we speak more loudly — as if the physical volume alone will get the message through. Most of us address foreigners as if they were deaf and dumb, as if sheer force of tone will pierce their minds.

To children, all adults are foreigners at first, and they are not really grasp what they are trying to say, because we are tired or inattentive or worried or preoccupied with our own problems. And since they cannot speak our language, they quickly learn to raise their voices to command attention, to repeat, and sometimes to whine.

Of the four essential human arts — reading, writing, speaking and listening — the art of listening is surely the most rare and difficult. Even in business and professional life, the vast majority of executives and doctors and lawyers do not know how to listen (with the "mind ear") to their employees and patients and clients. Shouting is the way in which children criticize their parents for lazy listening.

Frostbite and Frostbite Can Often Be Avoided

By JOSEPH G. MOLNER, M.D.

(Note to Editor: This is the first of a series of two articles.)

I know a man who lost some fingers from frostbite as a result of changing his automobile license plates on a frigid day.

Many of us, living in warm houses and riding in warm cars, have lost the respect our grandfathers had for cold. The upsurge of interest in winter sports, like skiing and tobogganing, not to mention winter hunting and camping, makes it important to be careful and smart. Even in comparatively mild weather, some hunters have died of exposure.

And then there are simple things like changing license plates. Our forefathers knew that touching metal in cold weather is dangerous because so doing quickly conducts heat away from the flesh.

Bradford Hamilton, director of the Museum of Science in Boston, has written an interesting article describing frostbite in mountain climbing, but the peril can still exist in our own driveways.

He points out that wind and cold together can be more deadly than either alone. A 4-mile gale at a "moderate" 20 above can be as chilling as 40 below in a 2-mile breeze.

Why? Because with little or no wind, a layer of faintly warm air lingers around us, in a way, so such fragile layer of air resists the chilling effect of a gale, air that touches us carries away its tiny speck of heat.

That's why when we step outdoors in shirt sleeves on a cold day we don't feel the full effect of the cold air at all. That's also why an Eskimo parka hood is designed to protect forward rather than backward, cutting off some of the direct effect of the wind.

In many instances snow can be colder than the air. You can keep your feet fairly warm on a cold, sunny day when you suffer frostbite nowhere else. On a zero day, keep off the snow and the operation quickly collapsed.

The Arctic igloo made of snow protects because the snow is dry and permits the creation of a pocket of warm air. But lying or falling in wet snow can be fatal like being in an igloo.

For winter clothing, dress appropriately. Wear outer garments that aren't too tight. Impeding your circulation is risky. If you stop to rest, eat or admire the scenery, and sit down, it's wise, if possible, to get your feet hoisted up and aimed toward the sun if there is any.

Mittens are warmer than gloves. For surveyors, photographers or others who have to use their hands outdoors in cold weather, even thin cotton or silk gloves help materially. The fabric traps particles of air which become warm from body heat (well, warmer than the outside air!) and provide a somewhat protective layer. That's why sheer hosiery protects more than 3 spaces or — although I'm going to exercise my male prerogative and stick to trousers.

Avoid the peril of dampness which intensifies the damage from cold. "French foot" is an example. Guard against moisture as you do against wind. And more tomorrow on perils and treatment of frostbite and freezing.

Dear Dr. Molner: Please write about chorea. Is it curable? — Mrs. W.B.

Answer: Chorea, or "St. Vitus' dance," is a symptom that sometimes accompanies rheumatic fever, but rheumatic fever is not itself; medication in the meantime may ease it. But the basic cause, rheumatic fever, must be watched carefully. Monthly injections of long-lasting penicillin are now effectively used to prevent new attacks of rheumatic fever.

THE PACKSACK

By GREGORY CLARK

The way Canadians might best spend New Year's Day is to treat it as another Day of Thanksgiving for their beloved country. No people in the world have more to be grateful for than do Canadians. Those of us who, despite their dusty and spectacular appearance, are at heart romantics, have tried their best to make something of what might be called the leaders of Canada. But if you look closely, you will find that our leaders have failed. Indeed, they had to hustle in order to be in the forefront of the parade. Very few made it. And so it takes and rivers literally begging for exploration, Canada with its immense resources of timber, of rich land, of countless rivers laden with power, of minerals, of almost every conceivable thing, has not reached one generation after another to come and take.

Canada's leadership does it require to do the obvious? It is true we have had some nimble men in our history who got the railroads built, who followed the forests, hire the ax men to build the power dams, and so leaders have been found in the loved country, that has flung wide its arms to us. It is greater For Canada has not produced let us confess, than all its people. To New Year's Day, let us just say Canada, Canada, Canada!

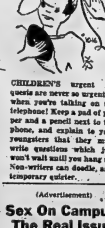
Christmas Concerts



WELLINGTON — The pupils and teachers of St. Andrew's Church Sunday School, Wellington along with a number of mothers enjoyed the annual Christmas party held on December 21st.

The program opened with carol singing after which everyone retired to the parish hall basement for Christmas movies. The films included "The Pup's Christmas," "Suzy Snowflake" and "The Pony" which was a tender story of two children on a Saskatchewan farm and their dream of a pony of their very own.

At the conclusion of the movies, refreshments were served in the upper hall. Then Santa arrived and distributed gifts and candies from the brightly lit Christmas tree.

From the youngest to the oldest, a good time was had by all.

I was greatly encouraged at a meeting of the Brantford Art League to hear the knowledgable questions the members asked me on a wide range of cooking topics. Two girls told me they had formed a gourmet club and met for dinner once per month at one another's houses. They choose a different epicurean menu each time and one dish or course is allotted to each member. This gives them something exciting to look forward to and dress up for every month and I could tell by their attitude in passing on this news to me that they were enjoying the challenge of creating masterpieces every time.

The husbands get in on these acts too. There is great mystery surrounding their arrival loaded with trays shrouded in towels to be unveiled only when everyone is assembled.

If you feel that the parties your group plan are becoming settled and monotonous give this once-a-month-epicure-dinner idea a trial. It will boost the cooking of your whole community and make you far more selective when you travel and choose the restaurants at which you dine.

A great deal of experimental and selective cooking goes on in my kitchen — some of the recipes never see the light of day.

As you know, my program is guided by my readers' requests, your budgets, your duties as conveners, the size of your families and your appetites and likes and dislikes.

I have been heartened by your acceptance of the great products I have been offering you recently.

FASHION RESOLUTIONS FOR 1963

Today, when the turning over of new leaves is thundering in our ears, we have come up with a set of suggested New Year's resolutions. We hope you agree that this list makes good fashion sense.

1. We resolve in 1963, to get the most out of fashion dollars. We will buy our clothes in a hurry. We will make a list of what we own, before we invest in any big purchase, such as a coat or a suit. We will not find ourselves having to buy a new set of accessories, because we forgot that navy blue isn't at its best, when worn with black. We will try to control ourselves when confronted with such looks like the bargain of a lifetime. We will make a plan and stick to it.

2. We resolve not to let our wardrobe get run-down, because of lack of time and/or money to shop. Having to buy two large items - a coat and a suit in the same season can result in a little hole, when the shortage of money for those very necessary, new accessories.

3. We resolve to watch our grooming, never trying to make a hair-do last its weekly lifespan - to always see that our clothes get to the cleaners on a regularly timed schedule - to watch those heels, which show wear so quickly. We will see that handbags are great repositories for old grocery lists, unpaid bills, unanswered letters, bobby pins and, in our own personal case, swatches of fabrics, saved for color or texture interest. (The last time we turned out our handbag we thought for a long moment, that we had at last found grandfather's will, missing for over twenty years). From now on we will keep our handbags neat and well polished.

4. We resolve to be always aware of fashion's nuances, to acknowledge and provide for them in our own wardrobe, when, and only when, they are becoming and practical for us. We resolve not to be slavish in our devotion to fashion and fad dictates. But, we also resolve not to turn down a new fashion silhouette, without giving it a chance. We will avoid the cry-ing: "Oh, I couldn't wear that!" declaration. We will, at least, go into the fitting room and try it on, before pronouncing judgment.

5. We, personally, resolve to live with every bit of skill we have, to convey to our readers the best and complete picture of fashion in Canada, as we see it. We resolve also to continue to publicize critically, the influence of international fashion on our domestic fashion houses. We resolve to cover the teenage market more thoroughly, believing that fashion starts at an early age. All in all, we resolve to keep improving and widening the scope of "Canadian Fashion and Fad" for you.

Happy New Year everyone!

Small Talk

The late Eleanor Roosevelt, once said, "Do not be ashamed of making the same resolutions again and again. The thing to be ashamed of would be to not try."

New Year Resolvers of other years:

Arnold Bennett: "To take the advice given me by an uncle, 'Make love to every woman you meet. If you get five per cent of your outlay it's a good investment.'"

John Buynan: "This I resolve on—to run when I can; to go when I cannot go; to creep when I cannot go."

Henry Wadsworth Longfellow: "To live in the present, but prepare for the future."

Miguel de Cervantes: "I'll turn over a new leaf."

Resolution for 1963:

Elvis Presley: "I will stop trying to press my luck and sign up for some singing lessons."

Winston Churchill: "I made resolutions for the first 70 years of my life. Then in disgust, I resolved to give them up."

Jack Parr: "The Greek sage Artistotle said, 'Anyone can become angry, that is easy. But to be angry with the right person and for the right way—that is not within everyone's power and is not easy.' I shall try to keep my temper. I shall not quarrel with any angry person, but give a soft answer. It is commanded by the Holy Writ and try it on, he makes him madder than anything else you could say."

Bette Davis: "To get on with directors and producers — and that calls for intestinal fortitude with a capital G."

Conrad Hilton: "To go on building hotels. I am curious to know if there is any income I can't live beyond."

Dorothy Parker: "When I am bored, I shall try to yawn with my mouth closed."

SPEAKING of MANNERS

PATRICIA LEWIS

SO YOU'RE TAKING A WINTER VACATION!

Readers, it's cold outside, and the latest statistics show that when the temperature is down you're more apt than ever to seek temporary relief in warmer climes.

Winter vacations are on the rise, with good reason. Hotel and other accommodations are often cheaper, airlines schedule cold-weather travel packages and steamship lines for years have offered hefty discounts for "off-season" voyagers.

In fact, they advised dealing with an agent where possible because he can perform the following free chores for you: buy your ticket, help obtain your passport, outline itineraries, book hotel rooms, and arrange transportation, guide service and car rentals overseas.

It's the latter form of travel, according to letters I get, which presents the most problems of etiquette or simple procedure. The questions deal with a variety problems as tipping, amount of baggage allowed, shipboard routine and how to dress.

Virtually all the steamship lines I spoke to stressed an important starting point when in doubt, contact a travel agent. Although passengers have been simplified, it's a good idea to allow three to four weeks for processing of your application. If you already have a passport, check the date. Passports now are good for three years. Only a two-year extension of that must be applied for.

Most lines allow passengers to take aboard (free) 20 cubic feet of baggage, which is equal to two large steamer trunks, plus four suitcases per person. Make sure heavy baggage, to be stowed in the hold, reaches the pier 24 hours before departure. Baggage forwarded to New York City by train can be "through-checked" to the pier by railroad special delivery.

Steamship fares include all the food you can eat, with a wide variety of dishes. Bouillon usually is served between breakfast and lunch; tea in the afternoon. Stewards and bellboys are always on tap for serving snacks, hors d'oeuvres, drinks or a between-meal sandwich.

Dressing is fairly simple. Sports clothes or combinations are correct for shipboard life. Even in first class, evening dress is not "required," although many travelers who bring dinner clothes enjoy the change from informal daytime apparel.

Even if you're so equipped, you do not dress on the first night out or the night before arrival.

There are almost as many theories about tipping as there are tips themselves. But steamship men agree that the best rule is to tip as you would at any first-class hotel after an extended stay. That would mean a maximum of 10 to 15 per cent of the fare.

The following usually are tipped at the end of the trip: room steward or stewardess, bellboys, deck steward, dining room personnel assigned to your table, and others who render special services — just as in any hotel ashore.

Moose Muffle Soup Real Canadian Dish

HALIFAX (CP) — Interested in off-beat dishes? Here's a soup that ought to spark the curiosity of any guest.

It's moose muffle soup and calls for veal, onion, thyme, marjoram, clove, cayenne, salt, meat balls fried in butter, tomato catsup, yolks of 12 hard-boiled eggs, a bottle of port and a moose muffle.

The recipe appeared in The Mail-Star letters column, sent by a woman who disagreed with a letter saying it was difficult to find genuine Nova Scotian, or Canadian, dishes.

A muffle is the thick part of the upper lip of certain animals, in this case a moose, it would be difficult to get in Nova Scotia these days since there has been no open season on moose for 30 years.

The woman says the ingredients must be cooked over a medium fire and she suggests the skin of the nostrils be shaved with a sharp knife.

In another letter on moose muffle soup, the writer said he used an electric razor to get the whiskers off the muffle. He also used a bottle of rum instead of port.

Toronto Market Took Worst Beating Since Index First Compiled in Month of May

By PETER DUNN
Canadian Press Staff Writer

All the suspense and tension, shock and surprise of a skilfully plotted drama could be found in the performance of stock markets in Canada in 1962, the most spectacular year since 1929.

Industrials scaled record heights, then plunged under the weight of a calamitous collapse in May and June that prompted Soviet Premier Nikita Khrushchev to gloat over what he said was the end of the West's economic system.

At other times the market was buffeted by a blowup in international relations that brought the world to the brink of atomic war, a foreign exchange crisis, an inconclusive federal election and belt-tightening economic policies.

With the May-June collapse the market was dominated by frenzy and fear. The stage had been set by a steady upsurge in prices early in the year which left the Toronto industrial index yardstick measuring the performance of key issues—at 629.06, highest ever, in mid-March.

Through the rest of March and into May the market drifted uneasily lower. By mid-May the industrial index had dropped more than 25 points. Then it happened.

'BLUE MONDAY'

The week of May 21 saw the market take its worst battering since the Toronto index was first compiled in 1934. Small investors panicked and rushed to sell. The index fell more than 23 points.

On May 28—Blue Monday—the contagious fear spread. Industrials dropped 16 points in a single session.

The selling wave reached its climax next day when, in the first hour of trading, the index plummeted another 13. But bargain-hungry institutional investors moved in to halt the disastrous tailspin. Industrials recouped all their losses of that day and climbed ahead.

The gyrations continued through the week—a 13-point jump followed by an 11-point drop, then a much - needed breathing spell.

Howard D. Graham, president of the Toronto Stock Exchange, blamed "mass psychology" for the break. Eric W. Kierans, president of the Montreal and Canadian exchange at Montreal, said there was "absolutely no reason" for the slide. Premier Khrushchev said "it's the downfall of capitalism."

The market made valiant efforts until late June that it lay exhausted. Industrials had fallen to the 503 level, more than 125 points below their March high.

In the midst of the June drop, Canada staggered through a dollar crisis and an election that sent a minority government to Ottawa. Anxiety prevailed.

With announcement of the government's austerity program, however, confidence began to trickle back. Through July and early August the recovery continued, boosting industrial gp 360.

On Oct. 24 the market was faced with yet another crisis. President Kennedy called the Soviet hand in Cuba and the quarantine aimed at shutting off flow of offensive weapons to Fidel Castro brought the world face to face with danger of nuclear war.

Despite the implications of situation the market gave an unexpected and impressive performance. After the initial shock, an attitude of curious calm took over.

There were wide swings of course, but the swings at no time reflected panic. When the tensions relaxed industrials had dropped 25 points, only a shadow of the May-June decline.

After Cuba subsided, prices showed a brisk advance. The following month industrials gained 20 points. December brought a lull with dwindling trade.

This New Year's Eve... when it's
"One for the road"...

Fine whisky, in moderation, plays an important part in the art of gracious living.
Knowing when to make a "gracious refusal" plays an equally great part in the art of sensible living.
This is especially true when the New Year's party is breaking up . . . when you're about to drive home and someone suggests, "How about one for the road?"
This New Year's Eve, if you are doing the driving, say: "Yes, I'll have one for the road. But, please make it coffee!"

Rockefeller Has Probably Fired First Gun to 'Get' Republican Nomination

By RELMAN MORIN

NEW YORK (AP)—Governor Nelson Rockefeller of New York recently said the Republican Party's best hope for victory in the 1964 U.S. presidential election lies in "developing and promoting the talent" that has become available in the party.

A reporter asked if he would include himself among the talented.

"With all due modesty," he replied, "I wouldn't exclude myself."

This is as close as Rockefeller has come to saying openly that the thought of being the Republican candidate for president in 1964 may have crossed his mind.

Generally, conforming to the strategy and tribal customs of American politics, he ducks questions about his plans. "I have taken the position that I was not committed," he says, blandly.

STOCK IS HIGH

Meanwhile, in spite of his divorce last March, his political stock now appears high. The evidence:

1. Polls indicate that he holds a lead, and it has been growing over other potential rivals for the nomination. Not - and - right-wing-Senator Barry Goldwater of Arizona, Rockefeller would be the strongest there in the party? The newly-elected governors of Pennsylvania, Illinois, Michigan, Ohio, Scranton and George Romney are attractive dark horses. But they have yet to prove them selves in office.

2. Embryonic booms for Rockefeller already have appeared in California and Wisconsin. And these were the two states that gave Richard Nixon his best treatment when he made some trips in 1959, weighing his chances for the 1960 nomination.

3. Rockefeller was re-elected by a comfortable, albeit by lower figures than in his first victory.

In 1958 he polled 2,177,000 votes and defeated Governor W. Averell Harriman by 573,000. This time he polled 2,011,000 and defeated Arthur Goldberg by 403,000. This alone would account for the drop in Rockefeller's total vote and plurality.

INCREASED TAXES

It seems evident that some resentment still lingers over one of Rockefeller's first acts in office — when he took office in 1959—a tax increase. "It wasn't popular, but it had to be done and it was sound and it was the right thing to do," he said.

Also, the fact that Nixon—and Richard Nixon having lost in California — Rockefeller now stands in the way of the available Republican choices for the nomination in 1964.

Rockefeller says he thinks President Kennedy will be more vulnerable, during the 1964 presidential battle, on his own words.

In 1960 Kennedy hammered on the theme that the U.S. was sluggish, growth-rate of the U.S. was sluggish. He pleaded with the voters to "join me in getting this country going again."

Rockefeller says Kennedy has not done so, and this can be proven.

Four years as governor of New York appear to have changed Rockefeller little.

If anything, he is working harder than he did when he started. Politically, of course, he is far better educated.

POLISHES STYLE

He was always adept in the quick give-and-take of press conferences and small gatherings. But now he has become a more polished platform speaker as well, and less prone to reading his speeches. (He has a reading problem, transposition of words and statistics sometimes.)

What about the potential drawbacks to his candidacy in 1964—particularly his divorce?

During the governorship campaign, reporters asked Rockefeller for his assessment of the possible effect of the divorce. He replied:

"I think each person is going to have to make up his or her mind when they go into the booth, and I hope they will make it up on the basis of the record of the administration. and the program for the future."

Enough Butter To Meet Demand For 8 Months

OTTAWA (CP)—As the year ends, there is butter being piled up in various places across Canada to meet the needs of the whole country for eight or nine months.

This was reported Friday by Agriculture Minister Hamilton as part of a year-end review. He did not attempt to forecast 1963 conditions.

The government last May began paying a consumer price subsidy of 12 cents a pound on butter. Retail sales increased but butter still had to compete with cheaper spreads such as margarine.

The result was that butter production ran 40,000,000 pounds ahead of sales. This left Canada with year-end butter stocks of 234,000,000 pounds, compared with 197,000,000 a year ago and 106,000,000 five years ago.

Mr. Hamilton reported a stronger demand for cheese "but he said this ran scarcely a significant in reducing the butter surplus. Only seven per cent of the total milk produced went for cheese with 44 per cent going for butter and 31 per cent for fluid sales. The rest is kept on farms.

Successful Living

(A Canadian Social Worker Helps with Human Problems)

Relatives Take Over Household

DEAR DORIS—Perhaps your look at my problem may give me an idea of how to pick up and get out away from my family. I am 56 years of age, single and at present a widow's pet.

Living in this house is a niece, her husband and four lovely children. The children are under foot from 8.30 a.m. until their bedtime, and the parents take off three or four nights a week. So long as I am in the house, she goes out any time in the day, which is pretty confusing to me. They were only supposed to stay in my house until they found an apartment. here now for one and a half years.

DORIS CLARK

My niece is young and does not know or perhaps care what a person my age requires, mostly a bit of privacy, a suitable housedress, time out for a shampoo, suitable shoes, etc. Should I raise money on this house and move away? My brothers who are also single say she should be on her own.

Another problem I have is an older brother who comes and hangs around the house for hours and takes whatever he can lay his hand on. Sometimes I think I must be feeble minded to put up with them.—READER.

DEAR READER—Feeble minded is right. Did you hear about the camel who stuck his head in his master's tent? When the master put up with that, he inched his front legs in. Eventually camel was all in, Arab was all out! Don't ever think your niece doesn't realize she doesn't belong there.

They move out. You stay. Your younger brothers can help you with lay down the law to Spongers, Inc. The alternative would be a nervous breakdown. For you.

CONFIDENTIAL TO MUCH DISTRESSED — You need not feel you are living a lie. Physical demonstrations of affection have a way of creating their own feeling tones with practice. Pre-occupation with the baby and fear of another pregnancy have perhaps left you detached and tense. I would suggest you study the Rhythm system of birth control and carry on as you have been doing.

DEAR DORIS—I am quite concerned about a male friend of mine. This chap is a confirmed bachelor, at 29.

Now I discovered that he lived common-law with a girl for a time. Finally she asked him to marry her. He said "no" and took off.

He says that living common-law is being practical. (I'd say he was plain selfish). I asked him what he would do if the girl became pregnant, run? He didn't know. He said "Maybe it would shock him into marriage." Just how can one explain a fellow like this?—PUZZLED.

Although I like him very much (I know he likes me too), I could not live like that. In fact, I am not going out with him any more because of the strong feeling for him on my part. (I said trust myself.)

Still, I think he could make a wonderful husband for some girl if he could be made to see that his attitude is all wrong.—CONCERNED.

* * *

DEAR CONCERNED—Well, don't you try. Right now he has it all his way. When the girls stop running after him, he may find out how desperately lonely (and how impractical) bachelorhood can be.

He'll start looking around the inside out before he'll make "a wonderful husband for some girl."

* * *

TO LINDA—Go and take a look at the airport you are interested in. Is there a restaurant there? A candy bar? Ticket office? Immigration section? Customs inspection? Switchboard? Often an airport is a world of its own and there are a few kinds of jobs there as there are in an office block in the city.

DEAR DORIS—I am a girl 17 years old and I don't have a boy friend at all. I have been asked out several times, but it is never with anyone I like. I have liked about two different boys at school this year, but nothing ever comes of it. I am shy and don't carry conversations. I feel I will never get married, even though my mother says this is not true.

Also feel that when somebody says nice things to me they don't mean it, but just say it to make me feel better. I just can't seem to trust anybody. Everything I think and would like to do always seems to turn out the opposite. Sometimes I feel I am cursed with a curse.—HOPELESS.

DEAR HOPELESS—The only curse you were born with was not knowing everything. None of us do. And most of us agonize through a time when we are dreadfully unsure of ourselves.

And don't be surprised if the "just ordinary" boys seem to be choosing you, while Handsome Harry is always looking someplace else. 'Twas ever thus. Go out with them and you'll be surprised at how extraordinary some of them can turn out.

I am sending you my leaflet on How to Make Conversation.

In Great Britain

Soccer's Biggest Blackout

LONDON (Reuters) — Frosties and snow Saturday caused the biggest blackout in the history of English League soccer. Only 10 of the 43 scheduled matches could be played.

Including the Scottish fixtures, seven of which had to be postponed, the freeze-up equalled the record previously experienced day in British soccer.

Saturday's total of 43 postponements matched the number of games called off Dec. 26, 1961.

The postponements followed severe interference with the Dec. 22 program by fog. In eight days, a total of 86 matches have been postponed or abandoned.

All British pools were cancelled Saturday. In England, a total of about 120,000 shivering spectators—one-fifth of the normal total attendance — turned out to watch the 10 matches played on barely-lit fields.

BURNLEY WINS

Burnley, third in the first division, trounced Sheffield Wednesday 4-0 in one of the two games in the division. Ray Pointer, former England centre forward, scored a goal in each half for Burnley.

The other first-division game saw West Ham United beat Nottingham Forest 4-3.

Fourth place displaced Sunderland from second place in the second division, blasting them to defeat 3-0 with three second-half goals.

Chelsea, not in action Saturday, still is first in front at the top of the second division with 37 points. Bury and Sunderland both have 31 points, Bury taking second place on goal average.

WATFORD MOVES UP

Watford, sweeping to a 5-1 win over Carlisle United, shot up from eighth to second place in the third division.

Rangers and Partrick Thistle, top two in the Scottish first division, both won.

Alec Scott put Rangers on the trail to a 2-0 win at St.Mirren by scoring their first goal. Jimmie Millar got the other Rangers goal before halftime.

Partick, one point behind Rangers, conceded an early goal to Kilmarnock, but rallied with a 3-1 lead with goals by Duffy, Cowan and Whiteley and held on to win 3-2.

Western Hockey

BY THE CANADIAN PRESS

Goalie Gilles Villemure rang up his fourth shutout of the Western Hockey League season Sunday night as Vancouver Canucks continued their three-point lead in the Northern Division.

Villemure turned away 38 shots as the Canucks blanked Portland Buckaroos, Southern Division leaders, 3-0 before 10,-101 fans, the largest crowd of the season, at Portland. The Bucks continue to lead the Southern Division with 41 points, five more than second-place Los Angeles Blades.

Seattle Totems dumped the Canucks 7-2 Saturday while Spokane Comets edged Calgary Stampeders 2-1.

Ron Hutchinson scored twice for Vancouver and Buddy Boone got the other goal.

Seattle centre Guyle Fielder scored two goals and assisted on a third for the Totems. Jim Powers, Rudy Filion, Bob Barlow, Bob Sabourin and Don Chiupka added singles. Ron Matthews scored both goals for Vancouver.

At Calgary, Del Topell and Sandy Hucul scored for Spokane. Milan Marcetta tallied for Calgary.

Beyond The Blackout Horizon?

Fans Invade Hotels, Motels

NEW YORK (AP) — The state of New Jersey reported a mass northern exodus Sunday. Pennsylvania recorded a population increase in the Philadelphia area. And more than 1,000 members of the Connecticut citizenry got together for a hot dog barbecue in sub-freezing weather.

That was the way people reacted to the television blackout of the New York metropolitan area for the National Football League championship game between Green Bay and New York that drew a sellout crowd of 64,892 to icy, windy Yankee Stadium.

While the throng in the stadium was slipping coffee and other beverages, residents of blackout areas watched the game in more comfortable surroundings.

Hundreds, probably thousands of residents within the 75-mile blacked out area, turned TV travelers and invaded hotels and motels in nearby communities receiving the signal.

Chartered buses brought fans streaming into Philadelphia to take up their reserved seats in hotels and motels.

The New Haven Arena in Connecticut held a barbecue at $4.50 a shot with all comers getting hot dogs and sodas. The NFL game was thrown in as an added attraction. The turnout in the 5,000-seat arena was estimated at more than 1,000.

Big Seven

New York's big man, Andy Bathgate, held on to the National Hockey League scoring leadership during the weekend, getting one goal as the Rangers held Montreal Canadiens to a 4-4 tie Sunday night.

The goal, his 16th of the season, gave him a total of 38 points, two more than Frank Mahovlich of Toronto. Mahovlich was held scoreless as the Maple Leafs tied Chicago Black Hawks 1-1 Saturday night in their only weekend game.

Mahovlich's 22 goals are the most in the league so far.

New York's Dean Prentice picked up an assist on Baldwin's goal and Murray Oliver of Boston got two assists while Bruins were losing 4-2 in Chicago Sunday night to move into a third-place tie with 33 points each.

The leaders:

No Great New Stars Emerged In Past Year of Television

By CYNTHIA LOWRY

NEW YORK (AP) — Another 12 months of television history has been made—thousands of hours of entertainment, news and education carried by electronic magic into millions of homes.

There was an amazing total of 3,631 of these hours on U.S. network television during the peak evening viewing hours alone. Most of the programs were run of the mill, some were distressingly bad, but some were superb.

There were fewer dramatic shows, but there was real drama. It came when the cameras were focused on the blastoff of manned space shots, and on the face of the president of the United States, telling the public of a new international crisis.

More people watched television than ever before, and more they watched, the more critical they became.

But the audience continued to turn to its sets primarily for entertainment. For spy and westerns, parlor games, stories about doctors and comedies.

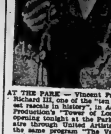
CORN IS TOPS

The bill of fare on the year was a broad, corny farce, brilliantly Hillbillies, played strictly for laughs — and achieving them. Stories about a redneck men continued to be popular, but the plot complexity moved from clinical to personal problems.

No great new stars emerged. Jackie Gleason and Lucille Ball made successful returns to TV, Red Skelton and Ernie Ford also returned, but without such good luck.

Network schedules artfully pitted one favorite show against another in the battle for audiences. Many programs suffered, but audiences soon learned where they could usually catch the drift of a 60-minute show by watching only the second half. But still, they complained about it.

CRACK HOLDUP RING



QUEBEC (CP)—Provincial investigators and city police said they believe a holdup ring here has been cracked with the arrest Saturday of two men and the recovery of $5,000 worth of stolen goods, including a small arsenal. Police said one of the men was a post office truck driver.

RARE, MEDIUM, WELL-DONE

By GEO. H. CARVER, Sports Editor

Happy New Year

May your spikes be light as feathers as you race along the paths,
May your batting eyes gleam brightly every day.
May your throwing arms whip swiftly that old apple to its mark,
And four-baggers speed the runners on their way.

May the roar of hockey's faithful echo loudly in your ears,
As with dazzling speed you race along the lanes,
May your shooting eyes be accurate as the rubber goalward nears,
And those body-checks be light as summer rains.

May your driver be uncanny; soar that ball close to the green,
May the sandtraps shun you like a debtor friend,
May the holes be large as bathtubs on the course's grassy sheen,
And your score-card show a par at each match end.

May the pigskin travel 'eighty' as the kickoff leaves your toe,
May the end runs give you "firsts" at every try,
May those gaps loom ever larger as through stalwart lines you go,
And those pass receivers snatch the ball "in high".

May the "63" edition of this grim old game of life
See you out there fighting as in former years,
Battling, straining, striving, working, hurling back the team of strife,
And may victory crown your efforts . . . that's all . . . cheers!

That wraps its up for 1962. "Long may your lum reek" and "May the wings of friendship never moult".

This department and its staff deeply appreciate the fine co-operation received from sports individuals and organizations and albeit we may have erred occasionally, after all we're human, too. Thanks for your tolerance in moments of error. We look long forgiven yours.

And so to one and all of the sports fraternity . . . may 1963 open a new vista to you; may it bring good sportsmanship and keen competition; friendly rivalry and a further development of the younger fellows. And may it bring you a generous measure of this world's goods; success, happiness, health and prosperity.

Rams Defeat Tigers

Bulldogs Nip Maroons

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Windsor Bulldogs opened up their lead to five points at the top of the Ontario Hockey Association's Senior A series Sunday by beating the third-place Chatham Maroons 5-3.

At the other end of the standings the forlorn Sarnia Bees came up with their third win of the season, edging Kitchener-Waterloo Tigers 4-3. The Tigers took only eight regulars to Sarnia and dressed four players from Whitby Dunlops of the OHA Metro Junior A League.

Reg Mulholland, Willie Annerd, Ray Morton and Ray Moffitt scored for the Rams. Jim Dahmer, Reg Whaley and Don Duke divided the Tigers' goals. The loss left the Tigers tied with Galt Terriers for fourth place.

At Windsor, Bob Brown rifled in three slap shots to lead the Bulldog scoring. His linemate, Jean Marc Asselin, added a goal and picked up three assists, and Tom Micallef got the game on ice for Windsor with about three minutes left.

Dave Lucier, George Usitalo and Harper Nash took care of the Chatham scoring. The Maroons outshot one point behind the second-place Woodstock Athletics.

Tie Leafs, Rally To Whip Bruins ★ ★ ★ ★ ★

Hawks Retain Lead As Habs Move Up

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Boston Bruins won't soon forget the last ten minutes they spent on the ice with Chicago Black Hawks in 1962.

In that short space of time the Hawks, playing before an enthusiastic home crowd, clawed their way from behind with four goals to beat Bruins 4-2 Sunday night and finish the old year as undisputed leaders of the National Hockey League.

The victory put Chicago two points ahead of Toronto Maple Leafs, who breaking a deadlock that persisted when the two teams fought to a 1-1 tie in Toronto Saturday night.

Other big gaiiers in weekend action were Montreal Canadiens, even though they blew a three-goal lead in New York Saturday night and had to settle for a 4-4 tie with Rangers. Although Montreal Canadiens dashed most of their old-time class, drubbing Detroit 5-1. The results of the two games put Habs in fourth place, one point ahead of Red Wings and two behind Toronto.

Canadiens and Chicago were the only teams to see action twice during the weekend, as four games were postponed.

NESTER STARTS RALLY

Eric Nesterenko started Chicago on the way to victory Sunday night with two goals after the last-place Bruins had taken a lead on goals by Tom Williams in the first period. Defenceman Don McKenney early in the third.

Hawks' re-united line of Bobby Hull, Red Hay and Murray Balfour, which has been so called the "million-dollar line," then sprang into action with two quick goals that gave them a margin of victory. Hay scored first, Hull and Balfour assisting, and then Hull scored from Hay and Hull.

Andy Bathgate, league scoring leader, connected in his seventh consecutive game as Rangers tied Canadiens Sunday night. It was Rod Gilbert, a rookie right winger, who provided the assist for Rangers, however, with two of their four goals. His second came with less than three minutes to play and tied the game 4-4.

Dave Balon opened the scoring for New York in the first period but Canadiens retaliated and got goals by Henri Richard, Ralph Backstrom and Jacques Goldsworthy before the period ended.

GUMP GROUNDED

Rangers goalie Lorne Worsley was taken up late in the first period and the game had to be stopped temporarily. At this point it appeared Canadiens were well on their way to victory.

The New York club physician described Worsley's ailment as a temporary paralysis of the right arm and it left him out for 20 minutes. When he returned, he made 35 saves in the last two periods and limited Canadiens to Richard's second goal of the night. While Rangers were catching up on the scoreboard:

Gilbert and Bathgate clicked with goals in the second period, setting the stage for Gilbert's tying score late in the third.

Geoffrion helped cool in a scoring rash Saturday night, getting three goals in a game for the 14th time in his 11 years in NHL career, to lead Canadiens to their win over Detroit.

Billy Hicke got the two other Montreal goals and Alex Delvecchio connected for Detroit.

BIG JEAN HELPS

Jean Beliveau, who hasn't scored a goal since Nov. 18, assisted on three goals to have played Canadiens' first two goals. He is now 2 league leading total of 24. He has only been scoring.

Toronto winger Frank Mahovlich, the leading goal scorer with 22, had a five-game scoring streak stopped Saturday night by Lorne Worsley.

Ron Stewart tied the care for Leafs early in the second period after Andy Bathgate had headed on Hull's first - period goal.

Rangers, in fifth place 12 points behind Montreal, visit Detroit tonight in the only NHL game New Year's Eve.

Two games will open the 1963 program Tuesday night, when Toronto plays at Boston and Detroit at Chicago.

Tax Boys, Fight Sponsors

Clear Way For Title Rematch

NEW YORK (AP)—Tom Bolan, president of Championship Sports Incorporated, said Sunday a settlement had been approved by the commissioner of internal revenue on government tax claims on the Sept. 25 Sonny Liston-Floyd Patterson heavyweight title fight, clearing the way for a rematch.

Bolan called the settlement a major factor in smoothing the way for a rematch, and said he expects to make an announcement within a few days. He said Las Vegas and Baltimore are the leading possibilities with Miami Beach having an outside chance.

Under the settlement, all but $400,000 of the money impounded by the government will be released. The government had seized more than $2,000,000 on the evening of the fight in Chicago.

Bolan said the $400,000 still retained by the government will be held pending a determination of the promoters' tax liability by the courts.

Bolan said the basis of the settlement was the abandonment by Championship Sports of the plan to pay Patterson over a 17-year period. He said the government had agreed to permit payment to the ex-champ over a two-year period as part of the settlement.

Roses, Oranges, Sugar, Cotton

Extravaganza Of The Bowls!

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Eight of the top 10 college teams in the United States collide New Year's Day amid a profusion of roses, oranges, sugar and cotton in the annual extravaganza of the bowls.

Today can be called a sort of preview for the football finale, with Texas, West Texas State and Ohio University clash in the Sun Bowl, both boasting 9-2 records.

But the big competitions come Tuesday and fans are talking about the big four. Here's a rundown:

Rose Bowl at Pasadena, Calif.: Top - ranked Southern California with a 10-0 record, vs. No. 2 Wisconsin, 9-1, in the biggest of the bowl games, to be televised by NBC at 5 p.m. All-American players on display will be Southern Cal guard Damnon Barne and Wisconsin end Pat Richter.

Sugar Bowl at New Orleans: Third-rated Mississippi, 9-0, vs Arkansas, 9-1 and sixth-ranked, getting the television treatment over NBC at 2 p.m.

ROYAL TO COACH

Cotton Bowl at Dallas: No. 4 Texas, 9-0-1, vs Louisiana State, 8-1 and seventh-ranked, via CBS at 3 p.m. All-Americans sharing the spotlight are Texas fullback Jerry Logan, John Treadwell and Louisiana halfback Jerry Stovall. The Texans are coached by Darrell Royal, former coach of Edmonton Eskimos.

Orange Bowl at Miami: Alabama, 9-1 and No. 5, vs. Oklahoma, 9-2 and No. 8, television over ABC at 2 p.m. The all American will be on the field. Alabama centre Lee Roy Jordan. In the stands will be President-Kennedy.

The last weekend of concentrated activity started Saturday, Florida upset Penn State 17-7 in the Gator Bowl on two touchdown passes by Tommy Shannon.

The East defeated the West 29-19 in the Shrine game, the Blue-Gray game the Gray 10-6 and the Small College All-Stars upset the College All-Stars 14-13 in the All-America Bowl.

SCORES UPSET WIN

Florida pulled one of the biggest upsets in Gator Bowl annals against Penn State as sophomore quarterback Shannon passed seven yards to Larry Dupree and 19 to Hagood Clarke for touchdowns. Bob Lyle started the Florida scoring with a 43-yard field goal in the first of the season for the team

'Converge On Players, Fans'

'Rough' Canadians Whip Czechs

VIENNA (CP-AP)—The touring Saskatoon Quakers won two weekend hockey games over Czech teams but again received sharp criticism for rough play.

The Czech news agency Ceteka said that in a game in Prague Sunday—in which the Quakers beat a Central Bohemian team 5-3—the Canadians "not only fought the local players but also conspired on the fans behind the boards as well." Play had to be stopped while the referee admonished the team captains.

In a Saturday night game at Chomutov, Saskatoon defeated the Chomutov V.T.Z. team 7-4 and the news agency conceded that the Canadians "though playing a hard game were not as rough as in previous games."

However, it called the Quakers "surely the weakest" Canadian hockey team to have played in Czechoslovakia.

The two weekend victories evened the Quakers' record at four victories and four defeats in their 16-game tour of Czechoslovakia. Two games remain.

EACH COUNT TWICE

Jackie McLeod and Jerry Each each had two goals while singles for a hat trick were Chuk, Maurice Ot tebro and George Senick on Saturday night. Ron McLeod, Otebro and Senick also scored Sunday night along with Herb Jeffrey and Each.

A sellout crowd of 11,000 watched the Chomutov game and only 5,000 turned out in Prague. Ceteka blamed the low attendance on the "fact that the Canadians had piled up a bad reputation during their tour this time."

"The first 10 minutes of the game was merely a free-for-all in both sides engaged in blows and fisticuffs," the agency said.

Flyers Point Behind

Petes, Habs Share Lead

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Peterborough Petes and Montreal junior Canadiens are side by side in the scramble at the top of the Ontario Hockey Association's provincial Junior A group.

The Petes climbed up beside the Habs Saturday night, beating the last-place Guelph Royals 5-3.

The fifth-place St. Catharines Black Hawks kept it that way by edging the Canadiens 5-4 Sunday.

Idle on the weekend, Niagara Falls at 7-7-1-0-160 can say nothing down the leaders' necks, one point back in the standings.

The one-two-three Royals held a 3-2 edge after two periods in Peterborough but Ron Nesbitt tied it up and Danny Grant exploded for two goals little more than three minutes apart.

Keith Wright and Kerry Bond were the other Peterborough marksmen. Bill Fahey, Bob Plager and Billy Taylor tallied for Guelph.

In St. Catharines, Bill Inglis put the Habs in front three times in the first two periods, but the Hawks answered with goals by Dennis Hull, Brent Hughes and Fred Stanfield. Niagara Falls' Ken Broderick Hawks their first lead but Yvan Tourneyer evened it up for Montreal.

FIRES THE WINNER

Defenceman Paul Popell fired the winner, a low drive from the point, while the Habs had a man in the penalty box.

Referee Bill Hodgson had a second largest crowd of the season, for the first Sunday game ever played in St. Catharines following a vote Dec. 7.

In the OHA Metro Toronto Junior A series, the second-place Toronto Marlboros pulled to within three points of first-place Toronto Marlies in their first-rooms by defeating Brampton 5-2 Sunday.

Frontenacs Break Loss String

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

The last-place Syracuse Braves played "buddies" for Kingston Frontenacs this weekend.

The Frontenacs ended a seven-game downhill slide in the Eastern Professional Hockey League Saturday night when they came up against the Braves and won 7-4 in Kingston.

Syracuse gave the Frontenacs another helping hand Sunday night, upsetting the first-place Hull-Ottawa Canadiens 6-2 for their sixth win of the season.

The results moved second-place Kingston to within four points of Hull-Ottawa.

The Frontenacs scored six unanswered goals in the first two periods, then had the Braves outscored three to 4-1 in the final frame.

Red Ouellette and Don Blackburn each scored twice for Kingston. Pat Stapleton, Dick Cherry and Ken Stephanson added singles.

Alain Caron had two goals for the Braves and Merv Kuryluk and Murray Hall got one each. Syracuse outshot the Frontenacs 35-34.

At Syracuse, the Canadiens trailed 3-1 after two periods and answered with three goals in three in the third.

Al Carnie, Bert Fizzell, Red Oulmet, Merv Kuryluk, Phil Esposito and Hec Lalande tallied for Syracuse. Jacques Laperriere and Terry Harper scored for the Canadiens.

Packers Whip Giants In Grid Epic

Win Muscle-Cruncher 16-7

NEW YORK (CP) — Green Bay Packers proved again Sunday they are the best football team.

Green Bay, a dwarf in comparison to other National Football League cities, is so proud of its Packers it calls itself Titletown, U.S.A. — the name fits for the city of 72,000.

The Packers whipped New York Giants 16-7 Sunday at Yankee Stadium to win their second successive NFL title in a muscle - crushing playoff hampered by bitterly cold winds.

Last year the Packers romped to a 37-0 win over the Giants in the title game, but they had more trouble Sunday as they won their record eighth championship.

Television audiences, in the United States and Canada and 64,892 paying customers watched the Packers, with a tremendous defensive exhibition, overcome the Giants in 17-degree temperatures.

But the Packers are used to the cold. Practically every game in Green Bay the last two weeks have dipped well below zero and the Packers have snowshoe and ski masks as they prepared for the Giants.

The story of Sunday's game is best told by the voting for the most valuable player.

It went to Jim Taylor, Green Bay's oak-ribbed fullback who was a one-man juggernaut unmerciful abuse from such New York strongmen as Sam Huff and Andy Robustelli.

And it wasn't Y. A. Tittle, the Giants' celebrated quarterback. The choice was veteran Ray Nitschke, the Packers' six-foot-three, 220-pound middle linebacker who played as if he intends to be an all-star for the next 10 years.

Nitschke recovered a Phil King fumble on the Giants' 28-yard line late in the second quarter with the Packers holding a perilous 9-0 lead. Two plays later, after a 21-yard pass from Paul Hornung to Boyd Dowler, Taylor charged head-long into the end zone on a seven-yard burst for Green Bay's only touchdown. Earlier Nitschke deflected a Tittle pass that was intercepted by Dan Currie.

Shortly after the Giants scored their only touchdown—when Erich Barnes blocked Max McGee's third - quarter punt and rookie Jim Collier recovered in the end zone—Nitschke swung into action again. He pounced on the ball on the Giants' 45-yard line when Sam Horner fumbled a punt. Five plays later, Jerry Kramer kicked the second of his three field goals. The kicks travelled 26, 29 and 30 yards.

"You couldn't throw the long one on a day like this," said coach Allie Sherman of the Giants, whose club won the Eastern Conference title on the passing of Tittle. "Of course, it was the same for them."

It was 20 degrees at game time. The weather soon turned a bit for the worse, slipping to 17 degrees. A wind that hit about 40 miles an hour in gusts blew passes, punts, kicks, dust and even the Packers' bench (unoccupied) across the frozen turf.

The wind proved to be troublesome even before the game started. The Packers couldn't keep the football on the tee and finally had to have a man hold it for the opening kickoff.

"The Giants are much, much better," said Packer coach Vince Lombardi, comparing the 1962 team with the 1961 club. "You just can't compare the two games."

Huff, who, like all members of both defensive units, played a fine game, had this comment: "They are a good ball club. But they can be beaten. They only scored one touchdown. Hell, the defence has to have someone on its side. You don't win the world championship without scoring some points."

Taylor, 26-year-old backfield ace who scored a record 19 touchdowns and rushed for more than 1,500 yards in regular-season action this year, was on the Giants' list of marked men.

But he kept bouncing up from vicious tackles, shrugged off verbal Giant jibes that were meant to unsettle him and rubbed it in with his touchdown blast.

Taylor, a 215-pounder, was the top ground-gainer in the battle with 85 yards on 31 carries. He caught three passes for 30 yards.

"I don't remember ever being hit so hard," Taylor said in the dressing room as he jubilated a collection of ugly cuts, scrapes and bruises.

The only points the Giants scored were turned in by the defence on the blocked punt by Barnes and the recovery by Collier.

The Giants stopped the first Packer drive in the first quarter and forced Lombardi to settle for a field goal. Then New York started to move with Tittle hitting Del Shofner twice and then King until Currie broke it up with an interception on the 10-yard line and ran it back to the 40.

GETS HEAVE-HO

While Wee-Bo the Packers' all-star safety man, was thrown out of the game for striking an official, backfield judge Tom Kelleher, after he was called for pass interference in the third quarter, the official said it was an act that called for a disqualification. Wood gets an automatic $50 fine.

The championship was the Packers' fifth in seven playoffs. They won the series—also in 1929, 1930, 1931—before the Bruins were split into two divisions. The Giants have lost four playoffs in a row and have a sad 3-10 record.

Each Packer gets $5,888.97 and each Giant $4,168.85 from the gate of $1,243,110, all records. The figure includes $115,000 for radio - television rights.

Wins S.A. Grand Prix

Hill Top World Driver

EAST LONDON, South Africa (Reuters)—Graham Hill, a 33-year-old Londoner who never drove a car before he was 23, clinched the 1962 world driver's championship here Saturday while winning the South African Grade Prix in a BRM.

His rival for the coveted title, 26-year-old Scottish farmer Jim Clark, who had to win Saturday's event to catch Hill, had cruel luck.

Clark led all the way until the 52nd lap in the 82-lap race but then pulled into the pits with Grake pouring from an oil leak in his Lotus which forced him out of the race.

This enabled Hill, in second place, to sweep into the lead and on to take the chequered flag.

ENDS A WINNER

Hill's victory brought the British BRM Company the manufacturers' world title and the car which for nearly 12 years has been "linxed" with mishaps since 1962 as a world beater.

Hill finished nearly 50 seconds ahead of New Zealander Bruce Richardson, with South African Tony Maggs third. Both McLaren and Maggs drove Cooper-Climax cars. Ten of the 17 starters completed the course.

A crowd of about 30,000 watched the event over a 2.4-mile circuit on the shores of the Indian Ocean. It was the ninth and final round of the championship series.

Hill finished with 42 points in the championship table based on each driver's best five performances in the nine races.

Clark ended the season as runnerup with 30 points.

Charges He Favors Own Junior Group

Accuse OHA Head Of 'Discrimination'

TORONTO (CP)—The president of the Ontario Hockey Association's Metro Toronto Junior A group Sunday accused OHA president Lloyd Pollock of discrimination in sentencing Metro League players reported to him for disciplinary action.

Pere Topping, Metro president, speaking for all Metro officials, said it was their unanimous opinion that Pollock seemed to be favoring the rival provincial Junior A group.

They shouted the instance where Doug Jarrett, a defence-man for St. Catharines Black Hawks of the provincial loop, was given the option of a five-game suspension or $50 fine for slashing Sandy Fitzpatrick of Guelph Royals across the mouth in a game Dec. 23.

The Metro officials compared this with a 10-game suspension, with no option, handed out to Don MacDonald of the Metro League Toronto Marlboros and Bill Smith of Whitby Dunlops following a stick-swinger battle several weeks ago.

Said Topping, following a meeting of the Metro League's six teams: "We believe we are being discriminated against in favor of the other group."

RULES ON FACTS

Pollock said in an interview from Windsor that he rules "only on the facts presented me and only on the facts."

He cited the report of referee Joe Sadler on the MacDonald-Smith incident in which Sadler said the clash was one of the worst of its kind he had ever seen.

Pollock said referee Frank Sloia of Kitchener in reporting Jarrett said there might have been some provocation for his attack on Fitzpatrick. Pollock said that contrary to earlier reports Fitzpatrick was not cut.

Pollock said he didn't give the Metro players the option of a fine because "they only get $2.50 a game and I don't think they can afford to pay a fine." He said provincial group players are better paid.

Dog Got Ducking, Not Ducks!

SAN MATEO, Calif. (AP)— It is illegal to shoot ducks from certain levee areas along San Francisco Bay. On a day last week—oh, windy, foggy—it was a good time as any to take a chance.

While a hidden fisherman watched, a car came rumbling above a levee that flanks the southwestern end of the bay in San Mateo County.

The car screeched to a halt as it came shyeast a flock of ducks. The ducks took off. A man of about 25 leaped from the car, a shotgun at the ready.

He fired five times. Three ducks fell, some 25 yards off shore.

The man ran to the rear of his car, opened the trunk and hid the gun. He ripped open a rear door and a large retriever bounded out.

The man led the dog to the water's edge, pointed to the floating dead ducks and said, "Go get 'em!"

The dog sniffed the cold salt water and wouldn't budge.

The man picked up a stick and held it in front of the dog. He threw the stick as far as he could and it landed smack among the live and dead ducks.

"Go get 'em!" the man said, by now a little desperately.

The dog whimpered, pawed the levee but still didn't hit the water. The man shoved the animal and the big tan hound tumbled in the water. He sank, came up, and set out for the stick. He ripped open a mouth full of water and headed back for the shore.

"You play right wing your way, Pierre, and I'll do the goal tending my way!"

All In Sport

swimming strongly.

Then, while the man waited nervously, the dog went out and brought back the stick.

Reds Close In on Top Aces

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Province Reds, getting a four-point performance from three players and provided with a major assist from Baltimore Clippers, once again are within two points of the front-running Quebec Aces in the American Hockey League Eastern Division.

The Reds broke out of a second-place tie with Springfield Indians on the strength of Sunday night's 9-3 rout of Rochester Americans while Baltimore was edging Quebec 6-2. Buffalo Bisons beat Cleveland Indians 6-3 in the only other game.

That left Quebec with 39 points, Providence with 37 and Springfield with 35 in the tight Eastern Division struggle.

In Saturday action, Cleveland beat Baltimore 3-1, Springfield whipped Rochester 9-2, Pittsburgh Hornets trimmed Buffalo 4-2 and Hershey Bears and Quebec battled to a 2-2 overtime tie.

Harry Pidhirny scored three goals for Providence and added an assist in the route of Rochester. Bob Beckett and George Ranieri also got four points each, Beckett on a goal and three assists and Ranieri with two of each.

Stan Baluik, Pierre Brillant and Jimmy Bartlett did the rest of the Providence scoring. Lou Angotti, Gerry Ehman and Jimmy Pappin scored for Rochester.

Doug Robinson, in his first season in the AHL, scored four goals in leading Buffalo over Cleveland, Art Stratton had a goal and three assists and Jimmy McKenzie five assists for Buffalo. Barry Cullen scored the other Bison goal.

Jim Mikol scored twice for Cleveland and Bill Needham once.

Baltimore built up a 3-0 lead and coasted in against Quebec. Ike Hadfield had two goals for the Clippers and Bryan Hextall and Chick Balon one each, Dan Lewicki and Frank Martin scored for the losers.

Time Magazine Names Pope Man of Year

NEW YORK (AP) — Time magazine has named Pope John its Man of the Yea.

The Roman Catholic leader, first elected to the office in 1958, is named since Time started the Man of the Year nominations in 1927, over Nikita Khrushchev. Time editors largely because of the ecumenical council he called in Rome to "a fuller Christian unity.

The Time announcement Sunday said Pope John has given the world "what neither science nor diplomacy can provide — a sense of its unity as the human family." The Time editors added:

"That sense is the core of the Christian tradition, whose God lives in Unity and Trinity, a family of man to help him form it.

"By bringing Christianity to a new confrontation with the world and solving the wounds that have torn it for centuries, the Pope in Rome has helped to re-energize the Christian sense of the family."

President Kennedy won the honor last year.

UN Demands

announced it had obtained all its objectives in its "defensive action" in Katanga.

The head of the UN Congo mission, Robert Gardiner, said the UN moves were "a defensive action to exercise our mandate" and were in line with Secretary General U Thant's plan for reunification of The Congo.

He said the UN was "not going to make the mistake of stopping short this time" but emphasized his troops would continue to exercise a "minimum amount of force."

United Nations troops moved out of the big Kamina military base in northwest Katanga today in a mopping up operation which appeared similar to that around Elisabethville.

The UN said a Ghanaian company, reinforced by Swedish troops, had taken a road and rail junction 10 miles outside Kamina.

A spokesman said there was little Katangan resistance to the operation and no casualties.

He said a Swedish battalion also had taken about 30 miles of railroad line going east from the town.

Later reports reaching the United Nations in Leopoldville said some fighting was continuing at the outskirts of Kamina today with the Swedish battalion and one company of the Ghana battalion in action.

UN troops began to force their way out of Kamina Sunday, just before Indian and Irish troops moving southwest from Elisabethville captured the copper mining town of Kipushi on the Northern Rhodesian border.

ABANDON WEAPONS

The UN said it controlled an area in a 12-mile radius from Elisabethville. Katangan forces were reported to be abandoning weapons and uniforms in face of the advance by the United Nations troops.

The UN spokesman said Swedish SAAB jet fighters flew 13 sorties in operations over Katanga Sunday.

He said all air installations at Kolwezi, the man Katanga air base, and many Katangan aircraft there had been destroyed by the fighters.

On the diplomatic front, pressure built up in Britain and Belgium against any attempt to translate the UN military sweep into quick Congolese unity.

A British government plea for "discussion and negotiation" in Katanga brought charges from the opposition Labor party that Prime Minister Macmillan's Conservative regime was trying to thwart UN plans for ending the partition of The Congo.

WERE CASUALTIES

UN reports said four UN soldiers — two Indians and two Ethiopians—were killed in an operation to clear roadblocks. UNF wounded were reported at 24 or 26. It was not clear whether these were over-all UN casualties.

In Salisbury, Tshombe claimed hundreds of Negroes were killed or wounded in the fighting. The Red Cross said at least 50 African civilians were killed in a battle between UN and Katangan forces for a roadblock. The civilians were residents of a township between the two firing lines.

ROYAL CANADIAN NAVY YEAR — Her Majesty's Canadian ships spent 7,000 days at sea and travelled more than 1,200,000 miles during 1962, travelling westward to Ceylon and eastward to Ghana.

Helicopters from HMCS Bonaventure (upper left) took part in the rescue of 48 survivors from a downed American plane 300 miles out in the Atlantic off the west coast of Ireland.

Manoeuvres saw Restigouche class destroyer-escorts battle out stormy weather on the Bay of Biscay (upper right), possibly the world's most turbulent body of water.

The largest ship ever built in Canada for the RCN was launched when the 22,000-ton tanker - supply ship Provider slid down the rails in the dockyard (lower left). She is to be commissioned in 1963.

Readiness Goal Of Royal Canadian Navy In '62, '63

The form of the Navy that will serve Canada at sea in the next decade — and later — emerged in sharpened focus in 1962.

HMCS Mackenzie, name ship of a class of six new destroyer escorts, was commissioned.

Two ships, both due to join the fleet in 1963, were launched.

Work was started on a program to increase appreciably the search, detection and attack capability of existing anti-submarine warships.

Contracts were signed for the acquisition of anti-submarine helicopters of the most modern type, for operation at sea from ships of the fleet.

Announcement was made of a program to build for the RCN eight general purpose missile-armed warships.

Under way but still to be settled were negotiations to obtain three modern British submarines, primarily for training purposes but also equipped for anti-submarine operations.

READINESS PRIME TASK

While the fleet of tomorrow began to take shape, the fleet of today carried on with its prime task: the maintenance, through constant training and practice, of a high degree of operational efficiency and readiness.

By the end of the year, ships of the RCN will have spent more than 7,000 days at sea and logged more than 1,200,000 nautical miles on exercises, training cruises and patrols. In 40,000 hours in the air, naval aviators will have flown more than 2,000,000 miles.

In the fourth week of October, during the Cuban crisis, the Navy quietly, smoothly and quickly put into effect, in earnest, measures it had previously practised only in exercises. Ships in harbour topped up with fuel, ammunition and stores and put to sea; those already at sea stayed there, and on both coasts the fleet was brought to a high state of readiness for intensive operations. Naval nerve centres in the Atlantic and Pacific Commands and at Naval headquarters in Ottawa, round-the-clock watches were reinforced. When the Cuban crisis eased, normal fleet operations were resumed.

60 SHIPS IN FLEET

At year's end the fleet consisted of 60 operational ships: one aircraft carrier, 22 destroyer escorts, 18 frigates, 10 minesweepers, two escort maintenance ships, one submarine and six miscellaneous craft. Six squadrons of aircraft rounded out the fleet: two squadrons of anti-submarine planes and four squadrons of training and fleet requirement aircraft.

One major addition was HMCS Mackenzie, commissioned Oct. 26 at the shipyard of Canadian Vickers Limited, Montreal.

The launchings both occurred at the Davie Shipbuilding Limited yards in Lauzon, Quebec. The first was at the destroyer escort Qu'Appelle. A Mackenzie class ship, she is one of three due to be commissioned in 1963.

The second launching was of the 22,000-ton fast fleet replenishment ship Provider, the biggest naval vessel ever built in Canada for the RCN. Also scheduled for completion in 1963, she will serve as an on-the-spot source of fuel and supplies for ships deployed in operational areas. She will have a helicopter platform, hangar and repair facilities.

Two St. Laurent class destroyer escorts, the Assiniboine and the St. Laurent herself, were taken in hand for a major conversion featuring the installation of variable depth sonar and facilities for the operation of anti-submarine helicopters. Other improvements are also scheduled and these ships will rejoin the fleet in late '63.

The other five ships of the St. Laurent class will undergo a similar conversion over the next four years. The last two of the Mackenzie class ships, the Nipigon and Annapolis, will also be equipped with helicopter facilities and VDS. They commission in 1964.

HELICOPTERS ORDERED

As the fitting of destroyer escorts to carry helicopters commenced, contractual negotiations were completed for the purchase of eight helicopters to operate from these ships and from the Bonaventure. The helicopter selected is the Sikorsky HSS-2, a rugged machine designed for anti-submarine operations, and capable of carrying out search and-attack missions day and night in all types of weather.

While one new ship joined the fleet, an old warrior was retired. HMCS Iroquois, the first of the Canadian Tribal class destroyers, was paid off into operational reserve at Halifax on Oct. 16, ten days after HMCS Mackenzie commissioned.

Completed in November, 1942, the Iroquois subsequently served on the Arctic convoy route to North Russia and saw frequent hot action in the English Channel and Bay of Biscay. She sank or took part in the sinking of 15 enemy ships, and she picked up 638 survivors from two torpedoed Allied troop transports. In 1952, the veteran destroyer returned to the theatre under the United Nations flag.

NO MORE FIGHTERS

Another change occurred in 1962 when the Navy's Banshee jet fighters, having reached the end of their useful lives, were taken out of service. The aircraft carrier Bonaventure's air component now consists entirely of anti-submarine aircraft - a twin-engined, fixed-wing Tracker and helicopters.

The Navy's personnel strength on Dec. 1 was 21,573, made up of 2,630 officers, 18,246 men and wrens, 543 officer cadets and 154 apprentices. Strength of the RCN Reserve was 4,051 officers, officer cadets, men and wrens.

HMCS Crescent, an Atlantic Command destroyer escort, steamed 43,000 miles in 170 days at sea to become the "most travelled ship" of 1962. HMCS Ottawa, a Pacific Command destroyer escort, took sea-time honors, spending 176 days away from port. Her mileage totalled 42,500.

A milestone was reached in 1963 when a Tracker aircraft of the Navy's 880 Squadron made the 10,000th deck landing on board HMCS Bonaventure. In the year itself, naval pilots made 4,329 day and night deck landings on the carrier, with only one minor accident.

Pretender to Spanish Throne Plays Golf, Goes Yachting

By HAROLD K. MILKS

LISBON (AP)—What does a man do while waiting to become a king?

Don Juan de Borbon y Battenberg, the Count of Barcelona and pretender to the Spanish throne, plays golf and goes yachting. He also prepares for the day that may never come, when he sits on the throne from which his father was forcibly ejected more than 30 years ago.

Now approaching 50 and with more than half his life spent in forced or voluntary exile from Spain, Don Juan is the key figure in an international drama in which Generalissimo Francisco Franco hopes someday to replace his own regime with a constitutional monarchy.

The six-foot-three Don Juan is not Franco's choice as king of Spain. He favors Don Juan's equally tall and equally handsome Prince Juan Carlos, recently wed to Princess Sophia of Greece.

CARLOS SAYS NO

But Prince Carlos — despite urgings from Franco — refuses to accept the throne unless his father first renounces any claim to it. At the same time, Don Juan would prefer that he be named king, then be permitted to abdicate in favor of his son.

However, Franco apparently doesn't care for this plan.

Twice Franco and Don Juan have met personally to discuss problems relating to restoration of the monarchy, in 1949 and 1954.

Neither meeting was fully satisfactory and advisers of both have been urging another conference to settle matters.

Meanwhile Prince Juan Carlos and his bride continue a nonstop honeymoon touring various countries.

No playboy prince, Don Juan de Borbon mixes his favorite sports of golf and sailing with long stints of work, digesting reports from Spain, receiving visitors, answering an always heavy mail, and conferring with members of his 43 - member royal council composed of leading monarchists of Spain.

He lives and works in Villa Giralda, a palace in exile he converted from the former clubhouse of the golf club in Estoril, a Lisbon suburb and traditionally the home in exile for thronless European royalty.

BECOMES PRETENDER

—Don Juan, third son of the last king of Spain, Alfonso XIII, was not born to be king. But the heir apparent, Prince Alfonso, who inherited the curse of Spanish royalty, hemophilia, bled to death after a Florida automobile accident in 1938, and the second prince, Don Jaime, renounced the throne because he was a deaf-mute. Thus Don Juan, a hearty, expansive man, became the pretender.

Don Juan was a cadet at the Royal Spanish Naval Academy near Cadiz when he received the news April 14, 1931, that Spain had been declared a republic and his family ousted. He was hustled aboard a torpedo boat and rushed to join his parents and brothers in exile in France.

From them on until he took roots in Portugal, Don Juan lived the wandering life of a royal exile. His father intervened with King George V of England asking that Don Juan be permitted to continue his naval training in England, and the prince became a cadet at Dartmouth.

He won his officer's stripes there, then put-in two years and almost 90,000 miles at sea with the British fleet.

In 1935 he married a distant cousin and childhood friend, Dona Maria de Las Mercedes de Borbon. Ten years later after roaming Europe, the pretender and his family settled down in Portugal.
